EASTERN CRISIS RESTS WITH COMMANDERS

Demilitarization of Zone Is Proposed by Soviets As Solution to the Issue

Rights To Island In Amur River Are At Stake

SOVIET TO YIELD?

Observers Say Russia Unlikely To Seek Trouble

By CHARLES P. NUTTER

Moscow, July 2 (AP)—Solution of the dangerous Russo-Japanese crisis through demilitarization of the disputed zone on the Manchukuo-Siberian border of Manchukuo and Siberia, was suggested by Russia today.

Joint Withdrawal Urged

The Soviet proposal was announced early today it would withdraw its armed forces from the area, where a series of one skirmish, if Japan would follow suit.

The joint announcement, made by a foreign office communique, declared Moscow, Tokyo and Manchukuo recognize that the Soviet has a claim to the disputed islands. Japan has declared the islands belong to her ally, Manchukuo, and has refused to concede the "invading" Russian force has any such standing.

When the Japanese withdraw the statement declared, Russia is willing to begin negotiations or redemarcation of the frontier line along the Amur.

Capitulation Suggested

Previous reports indicated that the Soviet foreign office was playing for time and in some quarters it was believed it was advantageous to let even Japan force the issue and military action center the Soviet would then decide to keep the trouble localized.

These observers pointed to the European attention and asserted the Soviet was unlikely to court trouble at a double front.

SEARCH FOR CANOEIST CONTINUED BY POLICE

Toronto, July 3 (CP)—Search for Viola Guy, 16, and William Birch, 17, of Lime Branch, Ont., residents, was opened along the lakeshore today. Four days ago the young couple were canoeing and have not been heard from since.

Renewal of the search followed a story told by 15-year-old Patricia Bartlett who said she spoke to a boy and a girl in a canoe who answered the description in missing couple and that they were lost.

John Coulson Enters Final of Diamond Sculls

Defeats R. Hope of Oxford In Semi-Final Heat At Henley

MEETS HASENOHRL

Rowed Course Two Seconds Faster Than Australian In His Heat

Henley-on-Thames, July 3 (CP)—John Coulson, Toronto oarsman, today defeated the Finns of the Tikka and Sotila, defeating R. Hope of Oxford University in a semi-final heat in the Diamond Sculls event of the Argonaut Rowing Club of Toronto regatta and continued his quest for victory and tomorrow will meet J. Hasenohrl of Austria for the coveted sculling crown last won for Canada by Bob Pearce in 1931.

Coulson rowed the mile and one yards in nine minutes, two seconds faster than Hasenohrl took in defeating F. H. Jackson of the London Rowing Club in the other semi-final heat.

Had Worst of Start.

Coulson, although he had the worst side at the start, won the race in the first 100 yards. He was quickly away on the first few strokes and led by three lengths after two minutes. Thereafter he did not hurry himself and at the halfway mark his time was four seconds, 31 seconds, three seconds slower than Hasenohrl took in his semi-final beat. Hasenohrl had to fight over the first half of the course.

While Coulson's total time was two seconds faster than Hasenohrl, it was obvious that Hasenohrl could very much over the last part of the course by their respective paces. Coulson steered well in the trick wind, keeping exactly in the middle of the course. Such a fresh air could be when he finished.

CRIMSON RAMBLER HAS 500 BLOOMS

Another evidence of the luxurious growth of roses which has characterized the blossoming of those favorite flowers, is seen in a Crimson Rambler bush growing on the property of Mrs. Jerry Marshall, Oak Lake. This bush already has a profusion of 500 blooms while innumerable buds have yet to bloom forth in their crimson splendor.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Meteorologist

Fog frequency! In the warm months the sailor reads fogs off the southern New England coast need frequent in June and July. They become less as the summer advances; and in September they are rare and often as in June. There is quite a tendency to dryness and consequently more sunshine later in the season. The explanation is incomplete to greater visibility later, which is the case whether dryness is needful is the sailor. Fogs do not form at the surface of the sea then the humid surface air is mixed with the drier, higher air and the humidity is kept below the condensation stage.

(By the Canadian Press)

A Mrs. Black, 40, drowned near Port Arthur, and Martin Solonson, 12, met his life in the Grand River, near Caledonia, while bathing.

Tweedsmuir is First Viceroy To Cross the Arctic Circle

Canada's Governor-General With 'Party To Tour 10,000 Miles

BOAT, CAR, PLANE

Quebec, July 2 (CP)—A vice-regal party leaves here tomorrow on a 10,000-mile tour that will make Lord Tweedsmuir the first Governor-General to cross the Arctic circle.

The tour, believed the longest continuous journey ever made by a governor-general in Canada, will skirt the Hudson Bay coast and the margin of the Government House staff given the Mackenzie River to Aklavik on that great river's delta, across a narrow strip of water by air to Herschel Island in the Beaufort Sea, and back to civilization by air.

On Rough Frontier.

Lord Tweedsmuir will see life in some of the nation's roughest frontiers. His boat will be an old fashioned stern-wheeler, his fellow passengers traders, miners, prospectors, missionaries, nurses and Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

He will be taken through the new mining fields this yield radium ores. At Aklavik he will see a town close to the shore of the Arctic where the Eskimo, gone modern, thinks nothing of flying airplane, electric lights and other recent developments of civilization.

On the trek the party will meet the hard-riding Carlisty Indians of the Mackenzie River to Aklavik on coast for the salmon fishing. At Bella Coola he will meet the coastal Indians, the Bella Coola people whose ancestors greeted Mackenzie.

The party will meet also at Bella Coola the fair-skinned descendants of Norwegian settlers who long logged and farmed in the deep valley of the river for many years without losing interest in the language pastimes and ancient customs of the land of their forefathers.

France and Great Britain May Drop Present Plan

Fascist Powers Reject Franco-British Proposal and Propose Recognition of Both Sides As Belligerents In Spain

London, July 3 (AP) — Germany and Italy today formally rejected an Anglo-French proposal that action over the entire international non-intervention patrol of Spain's coast and offered counter-proposals.

The two nations, which have recalled their ships from the Spanish patrol, proposed that belligerent rights be accorded both the Spanish government and the Insurgent regime.

Both Germany and Italy stated they were "resolved to maintain the principle of non-intervention."

They pointed out that by receiving a status under international rules of war, the warring sides would assume towards neutral states full responsibility for the conduct of warfare in the air, on land and on the sea.

Paris, July 2 (AP)—Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos was reported today to have informed the Chamber of Deputies' Foreign Affairs Committee that France and Great Britain might override Italo-German objections and create an extended Anglo-French patrol around all Spain.

France and Great Britain possibly would put the proposal to a vote of the non-intervention committee in London despite Italo-German claims of power to veto such a scheme.

Joseph Keating Given Remand

Police Allege His Truck Struck Car of Max Preston

As the result of an alleged "hit and run" motor accident, that happened on the Campbellford Road, north of Stirling, last night, Joseph Keating, Campbellford truck-driver, was arraigned in local police court, before Magistrate A. J. Butler, K. C., today charged with criminal negligence. His case was enlarged for one week.

Keating was arrested in Campbellford by the Provincial Police last night following an alleged "hit and run" accident north of Stirling during which Max Preston, Stirling, sustaining a compound fracture of the right arm and is confined to the Belleville General Hospital suffering from other fractures and severe bruises. Dr. R. S. McCreary attended the injured man. Provincial Constable Wm. McBrien investigated the accident north of Stirling and as the car he found the rear vision mirror on a truck lying in the left ditch near Preston's car, that was badly damaged after having been allegedly sideswiped by a "hit and run" driver.

Preston gave the investigating officer a full description of the truck he alleged struck his car, Constable McBrien forwarding this information to Campbellford, where Constable G. Campbell placed Keating under arrest. He was

Royal Court Is Gorgeous

23 Canadian Women Presented To King And Queen

By MOLLIE McGEE

London, July 2 (CP)—Twenty-three Canadian women were presented to their Majesties at Buckingham Palace last night and participated in a spectacle even more gorgeous than the two Coronation courts held in May.

The 200 debutantes and matrons presented were every color imaginable at the ceremony justifying the name of 'Rainbow Court' given when it became known members of the Royal Family would choose gowns forming a rainbow of pastel shades.

Green was much favored by the English debutantes, one of whom appeared with a red velvet sling holding in place an arm broken in an automobile accident.

The King wore the blue-grey uniform of Marshal of the Royal Air Force—marking the first appearance of such a uniform at court.

Wears Lower Part of Crown.

The Queen for the first time wore the lower part of the crown, which consisted of a regal circlet with fleur-de-lis and crosses, in diamonds with the famous Kohinoor diamond glittering in the centre. Her gown was of gold brocade with a small scroll design and a train of cloth of gold richly embroidered.

The Canadians were presented by Mrs. Vincent Massey, wife of the Canadian High Commissioner, who

Arranged Bet At Race Track Jockey States

Frankie Mann Says He Met Feder At Race Track

$2,416 Bet On Winning Horse With Many $10 Bets

Toronto, July 2 (CP)—Jockey Frankie Mann told Magistrate Jas. Cowan today he arranged a bet at Thorncliffe track with Manny Feder last year. Feder in court today pleaded not guilty to a charge of conspiring with Mann to defraud the public and elected trial by the magistrate.

Mann testified he met Feder at a Toronto hotel and was asked if he "would like to make a bet on a horse." He said the meeting was arranged by a jockey named "Casaro."

Mann said June 8 last year he received a telephone call at the track and then met Feder a second time. They decided on the sixth race the next day. Feder asked the jockey if his horse St. Omer could win but Mann told him he didn't like the animal's chances and they selected Deedie as the logical horse to win.

The jockey said they considered the race was between Deedie and Omareen.

Just having sometimes a horse you do not look to as doing anything was mentioned. The jockey was asked,

"Yes," Mann replied.

R. Richards, superintendent of pari-mutuels at the track in 1936, testified eight horses were entered in the race which was won by the favorite "Deedie." Of the $11,138 pool $2,416 was bet on Deedie, he said.

Betting records showed that $2.00 bets on Deedie were fewer than on the other horses but $10 bets were more numerous on Deedie.

"Come-Back" Money

"Isn't it a fact that most of the $10 bets directed that came in were from bookmakers who feel they have no chance and begin to outlast?" asked Sir Murphy, K. C., Feder's counsel.

"I can't say," replied Richard. "Anyone can buy the tickets."

"I know that," returned counsel. "But do not wires come in at the last minute betting money?"

"I don't know," replied Richards.

Omareen, he added, was the second favorite and ended in second.

Edwin Allen, judge at the track, was asked if he could tell whether a horse was being "pulled." Allen replied some persons imagined they could do so "but it is very hard to see." He said he could not recall whether the whip was used on Deedie.

Scottish Scholars' Wit Or Just 'Exam' Howlers?

Active And Passive Verbs Still Trouble Pupils

WHAT 'TARZAN' MEANS

Glasgow, July 2 (CP)—It may be an outburst of precocious native wit or just homework juvenile style, but in any case recent examinations in Scottish schools have produced a bumper crop of "howlers."

Here are some of the best reported by the Glasgow Herald:

Tarzan is a short name for the U. S. King. Its full name is Tarzan of Eagles.

The fire of London burned down all the old residents and after rebuilding five days Mr. Chatgopher Wren put it out.

An active verb shows action: "a he kissed her". A passive verb shows passion as "she kissed him".

Stalemate Over Patrol Results in Decision To Review Situation

Earl of Plymouth, British Chairman, To Call In All Powers

BELLIGERENT RIGHTS

Bulletin from Paris Tells of Report As To Supply of Arms

London, July 3 (AP) — Europe's "hands off Spain" conferees, stalemated over opposing proposals for isolating the civil war, tonight decided to call all twenty-seven non-intervention powers for a full-dress review of the situation next week.

The Situation.

That was the upshot of a meeting of the chairman's sub-committee which found:

1. Germany and Italy formally rejecting Anglo-French proposals for full naval control of the non-intervention situation around Spain by the British and French fleets, and Italo-German counter-proposals for granting of belligerent rights to both Spanish sides.

2. France and Great Britain's rejection of the granting of belligerent rights, which would give the Spanish Insurgents a standing under the international rules of war.

Full-Dress Review.

The sub-committee will meet again next week. Then the Earl of Plymouth, the British chairman, will call in the non-intervention committee into session.

Paris, July 2 (CP)—The Associated Press today said French Foreign Office sources had confirmed reports that France and Great Britain had determined freely to supply arms, munitions and airplanes to the Spanish government unless Germany and Italy changed their attitude regarding non-intervention in Spain.

Don Budge is Tennis Champ

Defeats Von Cramm of Germany In Three Straight Sets

Wimbledon, July 2 (CP) — Don Budge won the world tennis championship for the United States today, defeating Baron Gottfried von Cramm of Germany, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

The Davis Cup star's decisive straight-set triumph climaxed a great year for the American who performed Wimbledon tournament. Enroute he also had relinquished Orwood Perry, now a professional. Budge dropped only one set — to Frank Parker in the semi-finals.

For von Cramm it was his second successive defeat in Wimbledon's final. He lost to Perry last year, 6-1, 6-1, 6-0.

Budge required only an hour and five minutes to annex the title. Immediately after the match both went to the Royal box to be presented to Queen Mary.

$3 per H. P. Cut Announced by Hydro In Eastern Ontario

Toronto, July 3 (CP)—General reduction of $3 per horsepower to users in Eastern Ontario was announced today by T. Stewart Lyon, chairman of the Ontario Hydro Power Commission.

The reductions will go into effect August 1 and will continue until July 31, 1938, and will affect all types of consumers.

Mr. Lyon said consumers would save an estimated $180000 by the reduction.

Details of local rate reductions are in the course of preparation and new local rates will take into account not only the lower wholesale rate but the amount of the surplus of local communities during 1938.

"Freedom is the essence of our life within the British Commonwealth of Nations. We like to maintain that freedom." We co-operate with other parts of the British Empire in discussing questions of mutual interest.

"The fact we have our own representation in other countries is evidence of that great liberty and freedom within which we live, we prize, and were it imperilled in any source whatever would bring us together with the rest of the Empire."

Like all friends, there had been periods of frustration, but through them all things went on the same. Canada and France common had been "kept closer to our hearts, due to the things which divided."

THE KID DERBY

To the Editor of
The Ontario Intelligencer,
Dear Sir,—

Having just witnessed the assembly of the Kid Kar Derby, on the Market Square, Thursday, I'm not in connection with the practical side, the mechanical side, let us consider the moral benefit obtained by the kids who built the cars in mechanical knowledge the interest which will be of inestimable benefit to them in developing the mechanical and practical side of life. It will lend strongly to make better and more useful men, the practical men of them in every way.

Yours truly,

MOTORCYCLE RACE

Belleville, July 1, 1937.

Editor Ontario Intelligencer and To the Citizens of Belleville:

It is with the deepest feeling of regret that we learned of the rescinding of the recommendation by the Council to permit the running of the Motorcycle Race scheduled to be run in the City of Belleville on Labor Day.

It was no regret that we as members of the Kiwanis Club, personally, or as an organization collectively, would not be permitted to view this sports event, but due to the fact that as the proceeds, or at least our share of the proceeds emanating from this event, constitute the main part of the Kiwanis Club's revenue for 1937, it must necessarily mean that we would be forced to cut down on its grants to the Children's Playground in West Belleville and East Belleville, the Y.O.N. and other worthy causes that we have been pleased to contribute to in the past.

When the Kiwanis Club instituted the idea of erecting children's playgrounds in Belleville there was no discrimination shown in the location of same, but were placed in central zones which, in the opinion of the club were so located as to be within easy reach of all sections of the city.

Another contribution we shall be unable to make through lack of funds, one which should appeal to the youth of the city, is that to the annual Boys' Camp at Moira Lake, fifty boys and the girls enjoyed sunshine and healthful diversions at the Camp as the guests, last year.

Having no other fund producing activities during the year, and being interesting in the motorcycle race, our source of revenue depended largely on funds derived from the race, as matters stand now, we will be unable to carry on with our original plans of contributing to the various causes which we have been pleased to finance during the past.

In our past activities, the club and its members, individually and collectively have made sacrifices of varying natures that would be worked together with no thought of sacrifice in order that the causes for which the club was working would benefit.

Is it so much then to ask the citizens of Belleville to make the sacrifice of a few hours and the afternoon of the day on which the race was scheduled to be run, in order to help the worthy causes of the people of our city?

In the petition presented to the Council by a number of West Hill residents, it was noted that the noise of the preceding day and night caused by the motorcycle riders was one of the principal causes of complaint. This was done last year as we understand it, not by the competitors, but by motor cyclists who accompanied the entrants in the race.

This nuisance will be overcome this year if the race is permitted to be run, for the Kiwanis Club members have guaranteed to police the entire course on Sunday, no motor cycle to be allowed on the course at any time on the Sabbath.

In the near future, members of the Club will interview citizens in their homes, in various parts of the city, especially those on the West Hill. We respectfully ask that these residents give members the call upon them a fair hearing. We feel that there are several points regarding this event that have not been made quite clear to several residents of our city.

After all, the sacrifice made is well worth the price for not only will the business places of the city reap the benefit, but your child and my child will continue to enjoy the splendid playgrounds, with added features from time to time; parents of th city will have that peace of mind knowing that their children are safe in the hands of experienced playground supervisors and, and the most important of all they are at all times safe from the many dangers which abound along th highways and city streets.

We respectfully request that citizens give Kiwanis members an impartial hearing when they call upon them, and do their share in helping us to continue to maintain these several projects which affect so vitally the life and the youth of the city.

Yours sincerely,
J. E. LOGAN,

Reunion Held By Bradshaws

Executive Is Elected At First Gathering At Napanee

The descendants of another U.E. and potential family, who trace their lineage as United Loyalists back to the early days of the country, met together for an initial gathering at Springside Park, Napanee, on Dominion Day, 1937. Napanee was cheerful for this gathering as the original settler, the late Henry Bradshaw, made his home in the early 1800's near the present village of Marlbank, some miles north of Napanee, and the cause of its comparatively central location.

Car loads of relatives from Fenella, Cobourg, Belleville, Deseronto, Kingston, Clayton, N.Y., and Cardinal, N.Y., motored about noon and soon tables were set under the trees of Wallace's Park, some forty persons sat down to a sumptuous repast after Rev. W. H. K. Bradshaw of Carthage invoked a divine blessing upon the gathering.

During the various courses, the chairman spoke briefly to the group and called for an organization. Following the following officers being duly sanctioned for the ensuing year. President: Mr. Harold Bradshaw of Belleville, vice-President, Mrs. Dr. L. Campbell of Kingston; Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. M. Ostrander of Deseronto; Committee of Management, Messrs. Wilson Norton of Depauville, N.Y., Wilbert Campbell of Newburg; Gordon Bradshaw of Belleville and Mrs. Wilson Hart of Napanee. It was unanimously decided to hold the second re-union on Dominion Day, 1938, at the civic camping ground, Belleville.

This gathering brought together relatives who in some cases had never met or who had not met for many years, and was an inspiration to all and several tales of former years were re-told. Another member present, was Mr. M. Ostrander of Deseronto, who is the youngest was little Master Kenneth Bradshaw, son of Mr. Keenan Bradshaw of Cobourg. It was also proposed to gather material for the preparation of a genealogical tree for future references.

Wheel Buckles. Youth Thrown Over Handlebars

Catapulted over the handlebars of his bicycle when the front wheel buckled and the machine crashed to the pavement on West Bridge Street, hill at noon today, Marshall Spafford, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Spafford, 167 Wellington Street, sustained severe facial lacerations, bruises and had several of his teeth knocked out as the result of the accident. Young Spafford was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital in Martin's ambulance where medical attention was provided by Dr. R. B. Gibson. According to police report the following investigations it was understood that the young cyclist was proceeding down West Bridge Street hill when suddenly the front wheel of his bicycle either buckled beneath its weight or the wheel tangled into the front forks, hurling Hi ...rider head-foremost over the handlebars crashing him headlong to the pavement. The force of the impact on the lad's sustenance and found him to be dazed condition, which promoted the calling of the ambulance. Subsequent reports were to the effect that Spafford suffered no danger-ously injured, but had sustained severe lacerations and the loss of a number of teeth.

POLICE COURT

"This man is not well. I suggest he be given an examination by Dr. Doyle, of the Ontario Hospital," declared Crown Attorney R. G. Donnan, K.C., at Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. at the opening of this morning's police court session. Thomas Kerr, middle-aged resident of Point Anne appeared on a charge of vagrancy, Kerr appeared outwardly normal as he stepped into the court proceedings.

Two local inebriates intimated their willingness to pay the conventional fine for drunkenness and were sentenced to 15 days in the common jail. Being old offenders the lads were debarred from the customary ten days to fifteen. The majority of the cases listed for this morning's police court session were adjourned owing to the absence of witnesses.

In a drawn case which followed the regular session, Magistrate Butler disposed of the charge of the theft of bicycles. The trio of lads had made restitution and characters of evidence was offered on their behalf. "You boys must realize the gravity of this matter. Stealing is a very serious charge and you could be sent to jail for what you have done. I hope this will be a lesson to you and others," concluded His Worship as he sentenced the lads upon their entry plea.

The disposition of these three cases disposed of considerable disappearance of a large number of bicycles that have been stolen in Belleville during the past month. All of the bicycles to have been reported stolen except one have been recovered and returned to their owners, it was announced during the court proceedings.

Demilitarization

This development, putting solution of the crisis in the hands of the army, came as influential politicians considered the cabinet break-off diplomatic relations with the Soviet government.

Russia, the Japanese army declared, had repeated the invasion of the Manchoukuoan border which led to the outbreak of hostilities for possession of the barren sandpits that form the Amour River area. The mediating Amur is the northeastern boundary between Siberia and the Japanese-inspired state of Manchoukuo.

In Hsinking, the capital of Manchoukuo, authorities were reported to have begun an immediate dissolution of forcible means to cope with the grave situation.

An electric atmosphere was said to prevail throughout all Manchoukuo as a result of the whirlwind developments of the last few hours.

The statement that solution of the crisis lay with the army came as an utter surprise in Tokio, as proposals to withdraw her troops from the disputed Amur area if Japan would do likewise.

Asked if the forces of Japan and her Manchoukuoan allies were ready to withdraw, government officials answered emphatically:

"That is a matter for the supreme command to decide."

Pupils Honor Miss Townsend

Holloway—On Friday, the pupils of Kerr Hill School presented to their teacher, Miss Marie Townsend, a silver cream and sugar set. Jo Fay and silver salt and pepper shakers on the occasion of her retirement from the teaching profession. Miss Three Ketchaem made the presentation while Mr. Barry Morgan read the address as follows:

Although completely taken by surprise, Miss Townsend replied in a few words thanking the pupils for the gift and the feeling which prompted it.

Following is the address:

Holloway, Ontario.
June 25th, 1937.

To Miss Marie Townsend.

Dear Miss Townsend,—

We, your pupils at S. S. No. 15, Thurlow, feel we wanted to take this opportunity, before our school closes for the summer months, to express to you our deep regret and that of our parents as well, that you are now to be retired from the teaching profession.

During the past years that you have spent in our school you have proved yourself to be very faithful, and conscientious in your duties to your duties in the class room, and you have helped to fit us for the work we have in life not alone by instilling into our minds knowledge gained from text books but also by trying to train us in the important secrets of health, honesty and purity which should be just as valuable to us now and in the future.

Your work in preparing for closing and concerts has been useful, not only in providing entertainment for our parents and friends, but because it has helped to enable us to appear before the public in later years.

No doubt you have been disconcerted at times, and perhaps have felt that your efforts at our behalf were not always appreciated as they should have been, but we assure you that we do appreciate your every care here, and will always cherish gratefully and pleasant memories of our days together.

The following poem "The Two Temples," describes the work of a teacher so fittingly that we feel it might appropriately be quoted here;

A builder builded a temple,
He wrought with care and skill,
Pillars and grains and arches,
Were fashioned the while;
And men said when they saw its beauty:

"It shall never know decay;
Great is his skill and his genius."

Thy fame shall endure for age."

A teacher builded a temple,
She wrought with skill and care,
Forming each pillar with patience
Laying each stone with care,
Yet no man praised her efforts,
None knew the marvellous plan,
For the temple the teacher builded
Was unseen by the eyes of man.

Gone is the builder's temple,
Crumbled into dust,
Pillars and grains and arches
Food for consuming rust.
But the temple the teacher built
Shall endure while the ages roll,
For that beautiful unseen temple
Was a child's immortal soul.

However, if the rumours which we have been hearing are true, we know about to change your occupation, and we wish you every happiness and success in your new life, and hope that your home will not be far away so that we may at least be able to see you often.

We ask you to accept this gift as a tangible expression of our love and esteem, and we hope it will always remind you of your pupils at Zion Hill school.

Signed on behalf of the pupils.

Irene Ketcheson, Phyllis Beatty, Harry Morgan, Donald Sills.

One picture is better than a thousand words, according to an old Chinese proverb, so the following two pictures are presented as equal to two thousand words. They are photographs of the same house in Before and After pose—remodelled under the Home Improvement Plan, depicting in convincing manner the remarkable improvement which can be made in a frame house through the application of asphalt sidings... Elimination of upkeep costs, improved appearance, insulation, are but a few of the advantages to be gained.

The Home Improvement Plan offers so many opportunities for alterations, repairs and extensions to the home with a view to making homes more comfortable and better looking on well as protecting existing investments and making new and profitable investments which will pay dividends in comfort, contentment and actual dollars through increased value that every home owner should thoroughly investigate the possibilities the Plan affords. Belleville citizens are giving the Plan careful consideration and already a number of loans have been made by the banks under the plan and improvements to homes are under way. Residents of the farm areas are keenly interested in the possibilities of the Plan and are taking advantage of it.

A HEROIC BOY

A Wellington Boy Scout, Alfred (Jimmy) MacDonald, fourteen years of age, has won a place in the hearts of the people because of his successful and heroic rescue of a seven-year-old girl and her three-year-old brother at Wellington last Saturday. But for him there is little doubt that a double tragedy would have been enacted. As it was the situation called for every resource commanded by the most capable and coolest person, and all these factors were satisfied in this boy. He not only saved first the little girl, but getting direction from her went for the brother who had sunk to the sand at the bottom of the lake in five feet of water. His training came in for exercise. He directed the summoning of a doctor and himself set to work to resuscitate the boy. By the time the doctor arrived the almost drowned boy was showing signs of reviving.

This Scout had learned well his lessons in Scouting. He had trained himself to swim, had learned how to command a situation and assume command of a crowd at a time which demanded leadership for successful co-operative effort because time meant everything. He had the doctor ordered and revived the boy whom he rescued.

He is an honor to the Boy Scout Troop of which he is a member and to the entire Boy Scout organization.

It is interesting to note that some years ago, James Callow, who was Patrol leader of the troop to which MacDonald belongs, gave his life in an attempt to save a drowning man at this same village. How much of this heroic event was the inspiration of the rescue last Saturday it might be difficult to say. The fact is that these Wellington Scouts performed deeds which showed they possessed all the elements of a true Christian and reflected honor on them and their families, on their village and on Scouting.

Those who have not well equipped themselves in life for service to their fellows if duly should call, will miss an opportunity to help those in difficulty.

A brave boy, capable of the most heroic and manly acts, is one of the best evidences of the spirit of self-sacrifice which is in every human heart.

KNOW YOUR ANSWERS

"Stop Guessing," a booklet published by the Motor Vehicles Branch, is having a wide reading public. 5,500 Industrial Accident Prevention Association branches requested 50,000 additional copies for their employees operating motor vehicles.

The booklet is an extensive questionnaire covering all points of good driving, with the notation that "the real driver knows the answers," and that applicants for driving licenses may be expected to answer all or any of the 50 questions listed.

Contained in the pamphlet is a simple set of rules, which if followed by every driver in the province, it is claimed, would book make the current "Play Courtesy" campaign a life-saving reality.

The rules are:

1. Consider the rights and privileges of others.

2. Drive your car at a reasonable and proper speed at all times.

3. Give full and individual attention to your driving. If you want to enjoy the scenery or "window shop"—park your car.

4. Know your stopping distances at all times. Reasonable speed in fair weather or on a dry road surface may be dangerous in rain or snow.

5. Keep your brakes, lights, steering mechanism and tires in good operating condition. Failure to do this is an indication of a dangerous and irresponsible driver.

6. Don't insist on your "right of way". Your life and health are much more important.

7. Watch the car ahead, and don't follow too closely.

8. Never pass another vehicle on a hill or curve or at any point where the view is obstructed.

9. Slow down at crossings, street intersections, schools and when passing parked cars.

10. Observe road signs and signals. They have a definite purpose—to prevent accidents.

11. Be particularly careful when passing pedestrians or bicyclists. Put your foot on the brake, then blow the horn if it is absolutely necessary.

12. If you drive—don't drink. If you drink—don't drive.

Observe this golden rule: Drive as you would have others drive. In other words: "TRY COURTESY" every inch of the way.

Copies of the pamphlet may be obtained without charge from the Accident Receiving Division, Motor Vehicles Branch, Queen's Park, Toronto.

SO ABNORMAL AS TO BE incredible, are conditions in Germany and Russia, according to R. E. G. Davis, executive of the National Council, Y.M.C.A. who studied the Youth Movement in Germany and Russia recently. In both countries the youth from eight years onward are regimented and trained to be robots for the state, placing the state above everything else, turning them into fanatical zealots who will give their lives for the state and even turn in their parents as traitors should they hear expressions even in the privacy of the home which would question implicit obedience to the "All Highest" as exemplified by the Dictators of the day. Youth training in Germany is compulsory, with groups arranged according to age, in camps, etc. In Russia it is not compulsory to join the Youth Movement, but it is expedient for, to get good jobs are given to members of the movement. Ten million youths are in training in Russia and Germany—taught that religion is a weakness that kindness is a myth, and that turning the other cheek is a heresy—trained to be men of iron and blood where nothing else counts but the ascendancy of the state and where no greater honor can be achieved than to die for the State, the Dictator and his idols and ideals.

In Russia and Germany the parents may have their doubts as to the teaching of the Dictators but the children have not, they are trained into a fanatical idolatory which lets the state do the thinking and knows nothing but obedience.

x

In Russia the children are trained principally for industry, and are the shock troops to increase production whenever it falls down in any department. A prominent leader in Russian life said that if America was the master of the machine at present Russia would surely overtake and pass her. Why, said he, we have wine list abounding in fruits in the past ten years than you have in the past one hundred years.

x

Russia regards religion as detrimental to her dreams of greatness, and when told that in North America Christianity is regarded as a principal contributor towards the best things of life, a prominent Russian official remarked that this was not so in Russia, where religion tended to be forward progress and consequently had to be frowned upon.

x

An incident at the Olympic games interested Mr. Davis, 40,000 members of Hitler's Youth Movement marched into the stadium and with tears in their eyes and uplifted hand gave Hitler the Nazi salute, in a manner which showed their fanatical worship of the dictator. One boy said to Mr. Davis, "I don't understand him, but I would die for him."

x

Men are nothing, the Cause is everything, is the watchword of German youth, trained to speak and live that motto.

x

They are proud to be called "Roast Beef Nazis", brown outside, still red inside. Dazzled and enkindled by parades, pageants, and the like—the makings of a nation with but a single thought and that a selfish one.

x

In Russia it is a criminal offence to discriminate on racial lines as shown by an incident revealed to Mr. Davis. Two white engineers from the United States refused to sit at a table in the hotel with a colored engineer. They were arrested and deported from the country.

x

In Germany racial hatred goes to incredible lengths. At a girls' training camp one of the most popular songs contained this sentiment: "When Jewish blood spurts from the knife things go twice as well."

x

A weekly newspaper containing pictures accusing Jews of criminal depravity is displayed everywhere. During the Olympics efforts were made to suppress it while so many visitors were in the country, but with very poor success.

x

Opposition to Christianity in Germany and Russia is based upon the belief of the governing forces that Christianity reduces ambition because it focuses attention on life beyond the grave, when it is much more important to concentrate on earthly things so as to make earthly conditions better.

x

The Youth Movement in Germany is a direct military training—use of weapons and disregard of death being the principal ideals aimed at.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

JULY 2nd., 1917

In the window of McKeown's Drug Store an interesting page concerning the history of Belleville. It is in the form of a full sheet poster advertising the celebration of Dominion Day, 1878, and the inauguration of Belleville as a city. The procession was participated in by the 15th. Battalion, the 49th. Battalion, firemen, military and I.O.O.F. bands. There was a programme of sports, a torch light procession and fireworks. A banquet at the Dufferin House was advertised to begin at 6 p.m. and from the menu and wine list abounding in fruits in the past ten years than you have in the past one hundred years.

OTTAWA PARADE

Back Stage in the Dominion Capital with WILFRID EGGLESTON

The question which are being asked most often about politics at Ottawa just now run along these lines:

What does Ottawa think of Premier Hepburn's repudiation of the Mackenzie King party?

What are the federal Liberals going to do about an organization in Ontario if Hepburn takes the local organization with him?

Is there anything to the stories about a Gardiner-Hepburn alliance?

How far will Duplessis and Hepburn go together in setting up a new central party leaning mildly toward fascism?

What does the federal government intend to take as its stand about the C.I.O.?

What effect will Hepburn's action in disavowing Mackenzie King have on the strength of the federal party and upon his own prospects?

Everybody has his own answers to these questions. The sentiments I hear often would if averaged up and tabulated answer them roughly as follows:

Ottawa meaning the government of the day, was more relieved than frightened by the defection of the premier of Ontario. His recent policies had become highly embarrassing to the federal party.

There is a serious danger that the provincial party organization may split as a result. In some centres the political machine will stay loyal to Hepburn, in other Mackenzie King.

Ontario federal members (Liberal) view this prospect with some concern. If it comes about it will make success next election much more difficult than in 1935, even if other conditions are favorable.

The Opposition Liberals in the House of Commons are hoping that Hepburn will spring a general election soon and thus permit the rapid rise of a couple of years between it's financial and federal election. Normally, the Ontario Liberals would not go to the people by 1938, whereas the federal party need not call an election until late in 1940.

There is no basis at all to the rumors of a Gardiner-Hepburn alliance, and so far as the writer can discover there never was.

One basis, however, of backstage negotiations between Hepburn and Duplessis, in which Hon. H. H. Stevens' name is mentioned. Aberhart has also been considered but his star is on the wane. It is believed here. A new party, representing the "Big Interests" and using the phase "National" in its title, might come to being soon, some observers think.

The federal government is definitely pledged to grant the widest freedom of association in any organization it chooses. This sentiment has been repeated in unmistakable terms by the Minister of Labour. It is in line with principles and will be maintained.

Ottawa, generally speaking, believes that Premier Hepburn is going to split the strength of the open following he will be able to pick up any substantial measure of support from his present party by his manoeuvres.

A few bright fragments from the Canadian-American conference held at Kingston last week.... there were two federal M.P.'s present, 'Billy' Moore, of Oshawa, who made a shrewd observation on Canadian economists by an attack on Adam Smith's theory of free trade, and who was warmly received; and Paul Martin, M.P. for Essex East, who drew down on his head a severe reprimand from Dr. Shotwell of the Carnegie Foundation when he called attention to the treatment Canadian economists received in the Detroit border.... he politicians were storm centres as usual.... Lord Tweedsmuir's definition of an old definition of a man as 'a political animal' said that vice-regal representatives were an exception to the definition.....he himself, he confessed is a bit anti-political himself in public addresses to what he called 'Canadian Generalities'.....Dr. R. C. Wallace of Queen's whooping the delegates, promised that because of the strong old-time Presbyterianism of Queen's, he would promise them a fine week; however, it rained heavily all Wednesday afternoon and part of Friday.....Dr. Coats of the Dominion Bureau gave some fascinating figures on Americans in Canada.... If you could count them, on any typical day in the typical year, you would find about 300,000.....In addition there are 80,000 permanent American born in Canada and so with the United States that every tenth person the ordinary active Canadian meets as he goes about his daily job is an 'ex-pat American'.....Prof. Griffith Taylor of Toronto, who cannot lecture without 'Gymnastics and acrobatics' was supposed to be broadcasting his speech....when he darted right across the platform to a distance of 20 feet from the microphone the chairman was forced to shout: 'Dr. Taylor, you're on the air'....observing that Anaximander was the first geographer, the chairman commented that Professor Taylor was about to give 30 minutes of Anaximander-casting.

Robert J. C. Stead was born in Canada and spent nearly all his early life in the Canadian west. Before he became a really engaged as chief publicity officer of immigration and other departments, he used to turn out a novel of Canadian life every two years or so.

'Bob' recalls that one of his novels had the honor of a mention in Punch, which either was duly impressed by the recognition, but didn't like the book. The Cow-puncher' being referred to as an 'Ontario cowboy'. He protested to the editor, who promised to take it up with the reviewer.

In due course a copy of the reviewer's reply was sent to 'Bob'. Lord Tweedsmuir's book had been rendered penitent by the Author's complaint, the reviewer now said that he was quite satisfied, from a reading of the novel, that Mr. Stead had never even seen Canada!

The moral is, presumably, that when you're writing about Canada you don't write either and every English reviewer knows—from wide west novels, and, nowadays, the movies.

Ray Thompson Feted by Friends

The many friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Thompson, Massassaga, gathered at their home on Monday evening, June 28th, in honor of their son, Raymond, who is leaving Tuesday for Ottawa, where he is to further his studies with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

About nine o'clock, the chairady, Mrs. Robert Adams called the group to order and a short program followed. Musical selections were given by the Hillside brothers, several humorous readings were much enjoyed by an appreciative audience. At the conclusion of the program Alma Ackerman was asked to read the following address:

R. R. Y, Belleville, June 30

Dear Raymond:—

It is with a feeling of gladness mingled with sorrow that we, the representatives of Massassaga community have assembled to be with you on the eve of your departure for a world of unknown fascination. We are glad because we understand that your life's ambition is about to be realized. We are sorry when we think of the active church worker we are about to lose. You took a great interest in all sorts of boys work, you worked faithfully in the Trade during its four year existence, you held a mid-weekly meeting session of a Trail Rangers group. You took an active part in several oratorical contests, bringing home honors to us each time. The silver cup which adorned our church for one year.

We realize that we were discouraged many time while taking an active part in church affairs. Higher hand than ours, prompted you to continue in that capacity and not give up the task entirely. Perhaps, Raymond you felt that we didn't appreciate your efforts. But we really did and feel that you'll realize this fully after you've gone, especially when you are alone with your thoughts. We hope until you are better acquainted with your new fellow workers that you will derive a great deal of comfort and benefit from rambling over thoughts of happy school day hours and pleasant entertainments where you came in contact with your children and present associates of Massassaga.

During life's darkest moments we desire that you keep in mind these words:

We all of us have a load to take. That load is the road of life,

We each of us have a share of joy,

And each have a share of strife.

But since we all must travel that road.

In sunny or stormy weather,

We each can lighten the others load

If we all pull along together.

We will miss your bright eyes and happy smile at all our gatherings. Our best wishes go with this gift for a long happy successful career.

May God's Blessing go with you.

Signed on behalf of the Massassaga Community.

Alma Ackerman,

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Adams,

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jose.

Raymond made a suitable reply and thanked his associates for the beautiful leather travelling bag, presented to him by Albert Wallbridge.

A lovely selection of delicious refreshments were served by the ladies of the neighborhood, during the social hour.

Later, everyone left wishing Raymond much success in the phase of his young life.

Large bouquets which would easily be prize winners at any horticultural exhibition banked the front of the church. Rev. W. J. Scott delivered an inspiring and appropriate message. WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, July 2—(AP)—The stock market revived today after an early decline and advanced fractions to a point or more.

Issues in demand were Bethlehem, U.S. Steel, Republic, General Motors, Chrysler, Goodyear, U. S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck Case, Boeing, United Aircraft, American Telephone, Consolidated Edison, Anaconda, American Can, General Electric, Allied Chemical, Southern Pacific and Paramount.

Shares under mild pressure were Westinghouse, Du Pont, New York Central, Northern Pacific, Baltimore, and Ohio and Union Carbide.

Wheat rose, Corn and Cotton dipped. Bonds were steady. Foreign exchanges were narrow.

Transactions at the rate of about 700,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, July 2 (CP)—A slightly better price tone prevailed on the Toronto Exchange today but activities was at low ebb. The turnover was no better than a quarter million shares for the session which was the first in some years. The business was mainly in the golds with few industrials, including Dominion Steel and Coal B, Imperial Oil, British American Oil and C.P.R. showing fair trade. Minor gains predominated at the close.

The Saturday local market holiday and the close-down of the New York Board on Monday next no doubt had a depressing influence on potential buying power. Sporty buying appeared in the golds.

Kerr-Addison, Moneta and Red Lake were taken in quantity at higher prices and the turnover at 1um to strong prices was considerable in Macassa, Wright Hargreaves, McKenzie, and Stadacona. Pickle Crow O'Brien, Central Patricia and Kirkland Lake closed with gains.

Base Metals were well ahead on the day, Noranda added more than a point. Steels were up a point and International Nickel gained about a point. Waite Amulet, Ventures and Base Metals Corporation showed gains.

International Petroleum gained about 3-4 and the other senior oils were steady with the junior group lost ground.

Higher prices prevailed in the steel, food, implement and bank stocks.

Market Comment

We have repeatedly pointed out that investors and traders need have little fear about the future of the market so long as the business trend continued satisfactory. Consequently, it is most interesting to read what the Royal Bank of Canada has to say on Business Conditions in Canada in its latest Monthly Letter:—

"Business throughout Canada during the early months of 1937 has been maintained at a level well above that in the corresponding months of 1936. The index of physical volume of production for the first four months of 1937 was 117.8 as compared with 106.5 in 1936, while the index of industrial production advanced from 107.8 to 124.6. This improvement has been general and there are but few branches of industry where the increase in operations has not reached substantial proportions. The improvement in the production of iron and steel, newsprint, nickel, copper and gold is particularly striking. Wholesale prices have been steadily rising, employment has increased, and retail sales are in greater volume than at any time since 1931."

The New President Of Crown Life

Howard Ferguson to Succeed Sir Robert Borden

The announcement made this week of the election of the Honourable O. Howard Ferguson as President of the Crown Life Insurance Company, one of the most progressive insurance companies of the Dominion—is one of exceptional interest and significance. Mr. Ferguson succeeds the late Sir Robert Borden, to whose death, it will be moved from our midst one of the greatest personalities and public figures of our day and generation. As president of Crown Life for the past nine years, Sir Robert brought to the service of the Company those same high qualities of mind and character that distinguished his devotion to the service of the state, and under his leadership, the traditions established by the Company's first president, Sir Charles Tupper, and by his successors, were fully maintained. Mr. Ferguson succeeds to a line of men of distinction, and to the task, by no effort, but all of whom, in their turn, contributed largely and wisely to the successful growth of insurance in Canada. That Mr. Ferguson will worthily fulfil his responsibilities in this new capacity is indicated by his long experience as Premier of Ontario, his successful representations for Canada as High Commissioner to the Dominion of London, his capacity for administration, and his gift of a definite desire to serve his fellow citizens in all sections of the country—all evidence that he will devote his outstanding ability and unique personality to advancing the destinies of the Company he now heads. And, in so doing, he will also contribute to the further welfare and progress of Canada.

Captive Lovers on a Honeymoon Ship Ablaze with Mutiny

Shorter stories of the week half the world, as the last slaver sails on to that desperate voyage, "Slave Ship," opens Warner Baxter and Wallace Beery in a pulsing tale of the slave-trading era, with Elizabeth Allan and Mickey Rooney among those on the boat as, with decks reddened with mutiny, it roams the seas on its final fury-racked voyage.

In the most colorful role of a colorful career, Warner Baxter, plays Captain John Harmon, a soldier of fortune of two seas, who defies the navies of the world, is betrayed by a shipmate and fights at last for love in the greatest sea adventure of them all.

Wallace Beery, whose long list of shipboard roles reads like a veritable history of the saltwater cinema sinks his teeth into a meaty role that presents him as the villainous mate of the slaver...big fisted, bullheaded, genial, and treacherous to his dying breath, one minute a roaring beast, the next, a gentle child; friend and foe alike to the captain he serves...and betrays.

Elizabeth Allan, the temperamental coquette of a swift bark engaged in the slave trade, and its courageous captain, Warner Baxter, who plucked her from "shanghaiing" to settle down as the new life with his young bride, Elizabeth Allan. As they sail on Baxter's boat on the honeymoon cruise which is to mark the end of his days as a slaver, they find that they have been betrayed by the mate, Wallace Beery, and the crew, avid for more slaving profits. The honeymoon cruise is turned into a voyage in which they are continually brought face to face with danger and death. Escaped by the crews of every nation, and torn by mutiny aboard, the slave ship sails on through adventures on the high seas and along the African coast, and it is a dramatic climax which clears the decks for the captive couple and sends the ship to its final destruction in flames.

The story of "Slave Ship," which is based on the novel by George S. King, was written by William Faulkner and Sam Hellman and Gladys Lehman. George Sanders, Jane Darwell and Joseph Schildkraut are among those who appear in the large cast.

This scintant fast-paced romance carries the above favorites from France to America against a series of thrilling and dangerous settings including a crack luxury liner and the smartest restaurants of York and Paris.

Leo Carrillo and Colin Clive are featured in the supporting cast.

"Mountain Justice" and "This's Living Is Fun Whistle"

Rarely does a modern motion picture present such strong dramatic situations and characterizations as those in "Mountain Justice," melodrama starring Josephine Hutchinson and George Brent, which opened yesterday at the Capitol theatre.

"Daring" is perhaps the most appropriate descriptive word to use in connection with this movie. Those who made it, handled its direction and the workings of that theme with bare fists, not kid gloves.

The picture brings home to audiences the fact that there are places and people in United States whose code and mode of life is entirely different from those of more populous communities.

She agrees to remedy these conditions. Chiefly, she wants to establish a clinic with the aid of a genial old doctor Guy Kibbee, her one sympathizer, so that children may be reared under proper auspices in the benighted village.

Her cruel, ignorant father Robert Barrat, and her other neighbors is set against all "furrin" ways. He is also set against his pretty daughter, and a younger daughter as well, played by Marcia May Jones, and even to lash them with a bullwhip.

There is a final struggle, in this fighting for her life, Miss Hutchinson as "Ruth Harkins" is compelled to kill the miserable old tyrant.

George Brent defends her in the trial that follows. He is a brilliant young attorney from "Big Creek," who loves her. But there is no chance for him or any other lawyer to win a case in that benighted village, and the girl's plea of self-defense is not accepted. She is found guilty of first-degree murder and receives a long jail sentence.

By a thrilling bit of strategy she is spirited out of jail and flown in the last airplane in an adjoining state, whose governor, familiar with all the details of the case, refuses to grant extradition papers for her return.

"Mountain Justice" is perhaps the best thing Josephine Hutchinson has done for the screen.

'Gray Goose' of Florida Leaps and Bounds over Course To Win Ontario Title Easily

225 Displacement Boats Give Thrills At Picton Regatta

FAST TIME MADE

Belleville Punt Sailors Capture Most of Awards With Their Classes

Picton, July 3—A Floridan "Grey Goose", the pride of the American Power Boat Association roared through to a world's record of 86.812 miles per hour, over the historic Bay of Quinte course here yesterday, when it flashed over the line to not only annex the 225 inch cubic displacement power boat championship of Ontario, but won for its owner the beautiful Prince Edward Yacht Club Gold Cup.

The issue was never in doubt. Ten thousand lined the shores of the course and gave vent to their approval as the beautiful boat, owned by H. P. Gingras of Rockledge, Florida and driven by H. E. Cannon, well known southern power boat driver, raced into the lead at the starter's gun and never relinquished it. With a cloud of spray flying high in the air from her speeding pontoons the Florida flash showed a clean pair of heels to nine entries, the pride of Canadian and American speedboats in all three heats. Charles F. Wheaton's "Shadow II" of Toronto led the rest of the pack to finish in second place, with Elliott Gardner's "Silver Bullet" of Scotia, New York, annexing third place money.

The race was the blue ribbon event of the Dominion Day Regatta sponsored by the Prince Edward Yacht Club, in the second day's activities of the six day centennial celebration marking the one hundredth birthday of the town of Picton.

Wilson Forced Out

Harold Wilson of Ingersoll, driving Miss Canada IVth finished in sixth position and was never in the race. The Quebec entry, Miss Quebec II driven by Jack McInnes and last year's champion in this division at the annual National Exhibition ran into bad luck and finished in fifth place. Other entries were "Top Hat", Fred Howard, Cleveland; "Miss Capers", G. M. Olive, Montreal; "Zalzo", Dr. J. E. Wolfe; Toledo, Ohio; "Skippy III", Dr. James Boyd, Hamilton; "Zippy", Murray McMaster, Kingston.

Gar Wood, Jr., of Algonac, Michigan, son of the famous Harmsworth Trophy driver of International fame drove his Class "A" open outboard to victory in both heats of this particular class race with Frank Wheeler of Picton, Ont., roaring over the line in the second position.

In the 151 cubic inch displacement class for inboard motors, Albert Bartell, Niagara Falls, N.Y., flashed across the line a winner, but was disqualified shortly after Clerk of Picton.

Bartell's class "Y" boat also annexed the 210 cubic inch class with Frank Harris' orange-colored "Flame" coming second and annexing an extra lap following a tie with Elvin Campbell of Wellington.

In the Bay of Quinte free-for-all Lawrence Roblin showed a clean pair of heels to "Buff" Cooper's "Donna Marie". Douglas Ponds in an exceptionally fast second heat driving annexed the Class "F" outboard event with Tom Lewis of Amber, N.Y., second.

Picton and Prince Edward County were en fete for the occasion, miles of bunting and "millions" of flags formed the streets and centre and side sections of the town into a brilliantly colored spectacle.

"Old Boys" from all parts of the United States and Canada converged on their old home town for the centennial celebrations. The harbor, one of the most beautiful in Canada, was crowded with craft of all description. Stately cabin cruisers, the last word in nautical luxury, jostled over the placid waters of the bay, vying for positions with the lowly canoes of local enthusiasts.

Graceful yachts, yawls cutters and sloops added a splendid touch of color to the scene with billowing white sails heeling over to a breeze which was ideal for racing. The weather was perfect for the occasion. In the morning a typical June sun shone down in all its glory, but towards early afternoon a heavy haze formed behind fleecy white clouds, which brought to the thousands lining the course a welcome relief of cooling comfort. The results:

Local Sailors Win

Belleville punt sailors made a most impressive showing at the regatta and practically all the principal awards and trophies were won by the Belleville Yacht Club. Maurice Callaghan with six fine crew was successful in annexing the major trophy of the regatta, the first placing being first with "Al er You" defeating Frank Duke' family with his Jola and Harry Semark with Allegro. This was a fight to a finish in a light breeze, the Jola at one time enjoying a comfortable lead but "After You" was carefully handled and crept up on the finish line scant yards ahead. Semark who has held the cup for the past two years went out when part of the rigging was carried away. The boys from Belleville won championships and these were presented at the dance last night at the conclusion of a most successful day.

The R.C.Y.C. entered their best dinghies and two of their best sailors in the regatta with the result the Toronto Club entered up in this class. Robert Burke with his smart boat, who has raced in England and elsewhere, simply toyed with the opposition in his class and with Mr. Fleming easily won the feature race. Twenty-four dinghies took part in the race and it was a beautiful sight as the boats sped down with the starting line at all abreast and sailing fast in a spanking breeze. The weather "backed down" a lot of time but the boys in the cockpit simply held the spinnaker and took their medicine. These dinghy sailors sure have a lot of fun and showed unlimited nerve in the handling of these boats, with plenty of canvas to the wind.

Prizes Presented

At the conclusion of the racing, sailors, power boat men and members of the various aquatic clubs in Ontario and the United States, gathered at the Armouries, where the prizes were awarded by Commodore Burke. It was a lengthy list, that had to be read through but when Judge McLean at the mike in his most witty manner, the time passed very quickly. Judge McLean in welcoming the guests told the inhabitants of the Town of Picton and the County of Prince Edward was their's until Monday night. He expressed the great pleasure of the committee in the fact, that so many from the United States had come over to join in the celebration of 100 years of progress in the county.

"I hope you enjoy your visit to the old County in a new country", said Judge McLean "and we, the boys who are in charge of today's regatta the event will be an annual affair. What we have in store next we hope, that you will leave for your several homes at the conclusion of this celebration with only the kindliest of thoughts for the people of Prince Edward County". The speaker congratulated Commodore Wood, Mayor Jones and all those in any way were connected with the success of the regatta, "it was a well managed regatta, from start to finish and I am sure both the visiting sailors and the R.C.Y.C. got a big kick out of the competitions", said the speaker. The prizes were then presented in the form of memorials manner, that the regatta as a whole was conducted.

George Wilson New Champ In Kid Kar Derby Sponsored by Kinsmen's Club of This City

54 Entrants Flash Down Course To Give 5,000 a Real Thrill

SMART PARADE

Mayor Arnott Presents Cup To Winner After Contest

Amid wide acclaim a new Dominion Kid Kar Derby champion was crowned on "Derby Hill" in Belleville as over 5,000 persons saw George Wilson of this city, drive his white-toned streamlined "White Streak" "Kid Kar" across the finishing line to win the second annual Belleville Kinsmens Club Kid Kar Derby on North Front Street, yesterday morning. Wilson's newly-built car was undoubtedly the class of the race, as his driver led all heats participated in and was runaway in front of Walter Wessels, who finished second in the finals. Walter Turner, last year's champion and the first Dominion champion, failed to qualify in the preliminary round and was eliminated in his first heat. Bill McBride again finished well in the coveted money class being third this year.

Flashing beneath the finishing tape with such momentum, that it took the efforts of three adults to stop his Kar, George Wilson, 111 Chatham Street, smiled happily to the throng and with Associated Movie Newsreel cameramen grinding their cameras, young Wilson returned to the starters' stand to accept the honors he won. Kinsman Mayor Richard D. Arnott, on behalf of the Belleville Club, presented the large silver trophy to the 1937 "Kid Kar" champion, George Wilson, "It is with great honor and privilege I present you with this cup, emblematic to the "Kid Kar" championship of the Dominion, George. To what do you attribute your success of today, to?" asked His Worship.

Built His Own Car

"Well, I built my car carefully, kept it oiled and greased well, as a matter of fact I oiled and greased it after ever heat. It was a great race and I am glad I won, thank you." was the newly crowned champion had to say to the throng and as he held a microphone in his lap to record the sound as the Associated Newsreel camera was focused on him, grinding methodically to be subsequently flashed on the silver screen all over the continent.

The 1937 Kid Kar course on "Derby Hill", North Front Street, was extended some 120 feet by General Chairman Cleo Codling, with the result that many of the "Kid Kars" failed to negotiate the course and were automatically disqualified. The race was not completed without incident, as numerous spills and many hair-breadth escapes were witnessed. Two minor accidents, that brought Martin's ambulance and Course-physician, Dr. Ralph Bird, into rapid action. Gerald Bird, driving his "Bird Streak" had the misfortune of turning his machine over as it raced down the starting-ramp. Inside of this machine was a large stone, used for ballast. The stone became dislodged, as the machine turned over, and striking young Turner in the back, causing a bad bruise, as the machine fell over backwards atop of driver. Wallace Anderson, Point Anne, also received bruises and minor cuts as his machine crashed into the curb when it became unsteerable. Fifty drivers experienced spills, but no serious damage resulted.

The Belleville Municipal Band augmented by Johnstone's Kilties band in a parade preceding the race preceded the Kid Kar Derby this year, forming at the Market Square and marching north on Front Street to "Derby Hill". The parade, under the direction of Kinsman Ted Jobson, saw children of all ages and sizes representing decorated bicycles, tricycles, as clowns and trailing along with their pets canines, all sizes and shapes of, being paraded. Especially of note was a Mr. Gerald Bird and his unknown pair of Newfoundland dogs. The parade was headed by Police and Motor Cycle Kid Kar Derby that culminated ten months of laborous efforts on the part of Belleville Kinsmen's Club, headed by Chairman Cleo Codling, Secretary Norman Garbutt and their associates.

Lyle Smith Wins Trophy

The Bank of Commerce Trophy, a handsome large silver tray awarded to the best built and best looking Kid Kar in the race, was won by Lyle Smith, 361 Bridge Street, while month-long passes to the Bulls Theatre and Belleville Recreation were given the following for splendidly constructed cars—Robert Wilson, and Ernie Hamilton and the newly crowned champion of the Kid Kar Derby this year, Alfred Wease, Bull Street, Forest Thompson and Vernon Welch. The prize for the youngest driver in the race went to Ronald Sullivan, 309 Front St., and the oldest driver to Robert Wilson. The prizes for the Kinsman's Club Kid Kar Derby were awarded by Mayor Arnott, the numbers of the lucky winners being drawn from decorated bicycle tel—No. 5—Billie Doyle, second—No. 12, Best decorated bicycle girls—No. 2 first and No. 3 second. Best decorated bicycle Joyce Highest slow—No. 3, Ronald Sullivan No. 50, Biggest dog—Jack Dell, Jr., Belleville Kiwanis owner of pair of Newfoundlan2 sheep dogs.

(54 Entrants)

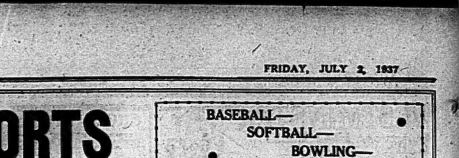
Fifty-four youthful Sir Malcom Campbells lined up their Kid Kars in the second annual Kinsmens Club Kid Kar Derby in Belleville yesterday, at 1337 corner of Front ing from the railway over-head bridge, North Front, on the steep to steep ramp had been erected and North Front St. Kid Kars were pulled into the race course with speed and dexterity, to a point east of the Market St. intersection where the finishing line was. Designated officials were stationed strategically out in white paint in which the drivers were instructed to guide their cars.

The result of many months' efforts in constructing colorful chassis that were attractive to the human eye, and Kid Kars capable of speed, for commendable comments from the large gallery, that gathered on Derby Hill, to see the race course down the course with surprising momentum, as the Kid Kars, each his owner, a lad between the age of 10 and 15 years, and driven by the builder, making the entire race one of accomplishment and thrills for the winner and more especially to the newly crowned champion, Master George Wilson. The conceivable line and mechanical device that could be applied was brought into practice by the youthful Henry Fords in the period of construction, and the competition even guard railings being erected around some of the veteran driver, who experienced spilling last year. Metallic frames, wooden frames, apparently out from planks, rubber-tired wheels, solid tires, front wheel steering, every imaginable equipment of speed was seen on the completed machines. The frame of Champion George Wilson's "White-Streak" was made of one solid piece cut from a regulation plank. The wheels of the car were salvaged from two old toy mowers, well balanced and timed, while the hood and radiator of the "White-Streak" was made of cardboard, painted along the designs of a racing automobile, while replicas of exhaust pipes and all other racing car adornments to add color and glamour to the race.

Four Cars to Heat

With four cars to a heat Starter Cleo Codling got the first heat away shortly after 10.00 a. m., the crowd not encroaching upon the course this year as wes the case in 1936. The course was roped off with a telephone service from the starters' platform to the finishing line, while a loud speaking broadcasting outfit was erected to keep the onlookers informed of the heat winners' name and car. Ted Jobson, Kinsmen Club member Leslie Pearsall was at the mike" and his pleasing voice carried well over the crowd. Kinsman Bill Hurst assisted in the announcement and a special public ad broadcasting equipment attached to the automobile was in charge with a loudspeaker placed on the car. Kinsmen Harold Plaglin, Ken Downs were in charge at the finishing line, while Kinsman Lloyd, heading these members in charge of the starting. Members of the Belleville Rotary Club, Kiwanis Club and Y's Mens' Club were in evidence and assisted their fellow Kinsmen, the Kinsmen Club in staging this popular annual event.

Heat Winders



The winners of their first heat yesterday were Ray Prouse, 69 Everett St. who finishing second in the 1937 contest, was the only crowned champion. Bernard Meagher, 9 Octavia St., Eugene Rosebush, 26 South John St., Forrest Wright, 18 Bridge St., Walter Wessels, 76 Coleman St., and his brother Ted Wessels, Earl Allen "F" Chatham St., Fred Hurley, 19 Benjamin St., Keith Wager 134 John St., Bertram Stapley, 28 Dundonald St., Phil McBride, 61 Everett Ave., and Joe Black, 15 Alexander St. Four of the qualifying heats saw cars fail to complete the course, with all four contestants in the heat disqualified under the rules for not negotiating the course correctly, or not approximately one-quarter of a mile in length.

The semi-final heats were a duplication of the primary heats with Ray Prouse, 69 Everett St. winners of the semi-final heats over Bertram Stapley, George Wilson, Walter Wessels and his brother Ted Wessels and Phil McBride. The final heat of the race resulted as follows: 1st, and champion, George Wilson; 2nd, Walter Wessels; third, Bill McBride and fourth partwam Stapley.

George Wilson, 1937 Canadian Kid Kar Derby Champion, whose machine the "White Streak" won the first place in the Kinsmen Classic, was the recipient of a handsome Waterman's fountain pen, suitably engraved, the gift of Todd the Druggist.

HARD LUCK SERIES

Consolation Event Is An All-Belleville Affair

Belleville lawn bowlers won two of the three tournaments during the annual Dominion doubles sponsored by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club on their spacious green at the Exhibition Park on Dominion Day. The coveted primary tournament for the Robertson Trophy, was won for the second year in succession by the team of Greene and Topping of Kingston, with the Belleville trophy team composed of C. J. Symons and L. E. McLean, Belleville, winning the Consolation tournament for the H. Fish Cup. The "hard luck" tournament was won by the team of Townsend and Mitchell, Belleville.

Eight clubs were represented at the annual Scotch Doubles, sponsored by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club, teams from Warkworth, Brighton, Kingston, Stirling, Cobourg, Norwood Havelock and Belleville all competing in one of the keenest competitions seen in Eastern Ontario in many seasons. The final play in the Consolation series was not completed until shortly before 7.00 o'clock, however.

In the primary, or major event of the day, all bowlers competed. Those to advance to the third round were Greene and Topping of Kingston, who beat Badley and Meino also of Kingston. In the third round Bryant and Backus, Belleville won over Renaud and Rosebrugh, Warkworth, the team of Whitby and Tompkins, Stirling triumphed over William and Hyman of Belleville and Wilson and McCartney, Kingston won over Symons and Correll, Belleville.

In the semi-final of the Primary Greene and Topping, Kingston, won from Bryant and Backus Belleville, 14 to 6, while the winner Billie Whitby and Tompkins, Stirling, won over Wilson and McCartney, Kingston. In the final, however, Greene and Topping of Kingston, defeated Whitby and Tompkins of Stirling, 14 to 11 after continuous hard play and keen competition as the score indicates.

In the "hard luck" series, consolation event, played off on the same day as the primary or Consolation tournament, the scores being close in most incidents and extra play being necessary to decide score of the games. Advancing to the third round was the team of Sulman and McGie, who won over Belair and Hayworth both of Belleville, 19 to 8 after many hard ends. In this round Fraser and Taylor, Kingston, defeated Allen and Dingman, Warkworth, 11 to 10 in another terrific battle while C. J. Symons and L. E. McLean, Belleville triumphed over Badley and Meino, Kingston, 15 to 7 and Al Symons and Correll defeated Bryant and Backus 7-3.

In the Consolation semi-final round Sulman and McGie won over Fraser and Taylor, Kingston 8 to 8 in a hard fought game while C. J. Symons and L. E. McLean trimmed their fellow club members Alf Symons and Correll to the tune of 13 to 8.

In the finals those two veterans and distinguished lawn bowlers, Arthur McGie and Charlie Sulman, Belleville, went down to defeat at the hands of two club members, L. E. McLean and Charlie Symons after a terrid series of ends to conclude one of the best Scotch Doubles, tournament ever completed by the Belleville Lawn Bowlers Club.

CYCLE RACES AT MADOC SUCCESS

Bruce Bristol, Madoc, Wins Six Lap Race For 500 C. C. Machines

A large crowd turned out to participate in the Dominion Day celebration held at Madoc. A full program of sports was lined up for the day. In the morning a gala parade was held with the majority of local business men and citizens taking an active part.

The afternoon entertainment consisted of bicycle races, running races and a game of hockey baseball which has become quite a feature of these celebrations at both players and spectators enjoyed the game immensely.

The main attraction of the day proved to be the dirt track motorcycle races put on by the Quinte M.C.C. with members of the various units of the club competing. Gordon Devine acted as official starter and Hank Walbridge looked after the finishes. Spectators were kept informed of the various events as announced by a sound truck with Messrs. 16 - Room School Plans are Exhibited to Trenton Council

Proposed New Public School To Cost $115,000

BUILDING FIREPROOF

Trenton, June 28—(Special)—Council was shown a set of plans for a new sixteen roomed school recently passed to be constructed on the site of the College Street institution costing approximately $115,000. According to the three blue prints drafted by a Toronto architect and produced at the regular meeting of council on Saturday night, the school is to have eight classrooms on each of the two floors and two large playrooms, one of which can be turned into an auditorium on the main floor. The building is to be of reinforced concrete and fireproof. Pictures, such as desks and window shades will cost additional and a 5 per cent architectural fee will also be extra. Mayor H. R. Cory and town clerk W. J. Potts were authorized to borrow $18,000 from the Bank of Montreal at an interest rate not exceeding 5 per cent for local waterworks improvements. The loan will be expended in the following manner: $7,500 for drilling and equipping a new spring water well about a half mile away from the present well in the township of Murray, Lot 10, Concession 1.; $4,000 for laying a fresh water main under the river and $3,500 to sink a six inch pipe from the well inside the boundary of the town to the pumping station at the airport. It was decided to use local labour for use waterworks expansion programme at a 35 cents per hour wage in cash. A ruling prohibiting Saturday parking between 5 p. m. and midnight on Dundas Street from the government bridge west to the C. N. R. tracks and on Front street north to Elgin street was passed and becomes effective July 1st. Persons violating the parking by-law are liable to a fine of $5 on the first offence and $10 and up on the second commitment. Hugh O'Rourke, chairman of finance, reported the tax relief cost the town $1300 for the month of June. A by-law fixing the car dealer's license was given the new police cruiser and it is expected that the vehicle will go into service this week. R. H. Hunter asked permission to hold the annual tag day for the Blind and was granted the same. Mayor Cory announced that August 2 was a civic holiday. Providing council can see their way clear the Trenton airport will be installed on Bay Street. Orders were issued to have town weeds cut weeds on vacant lots and around unrented buildings. A letter from fire engineer Jesse Baker inquiring if he could have a day off every third week after his duties as police officers was read. Commenting Mayor Cory said there have been no provisions made to pay a man filling Mr. Baker's position, while he is having a holiday.

(Yacht Club Talked to Rotary)

Addressing the local Rotary Club last night William Lake, a charter member of the Oshawa and Bellville Yacht Clubs, explained the formation of a boating organization thoroughly. "I don't know whether this gathering realize it or not but Trenton has the best facilities for boating of any centre in the county" Mr. Lake said and continued. The sheltered water in the harbour at the mouth of the river is especially adapted for speed boating. With the proper support I am sure in a short time to get behind a yachting project." He continued further and informed his listeners that the recently formed club already boasted 30 members and the number is steadily increasing. The old Silver Slipper dance hall on the street has been made the club's headquarters for this season and the club is planning a grand opening sometime next week. Not only does the yacht club provide healthful sport but it is also an asset to the municipality, he stated declared. On July 14 a boating regatta will be held here it was hoped clubs from clubs from Toronto, Oshawa, Belleville, Kingston and Picton are expected to enter crafts of all types into the races. KINGSTON WINS OVER NAPANEE 4-1

Oshawa Also Defeats Petes With Turner On Mound

(By the Canadian Press)

Stratford and Nationals trimmed London twice in a home-and-home holiday doubleheader yesterday and replaced their victims at the top of the fast Intercounty Senior League. The three leaders of the four-team loop bunched with only a few games separating them. Strathroy brimmed the lowly Brantford Alerts in both ends of their double bill.

Stratford took the first game at London 6-2 then behind the five-hit hurling of schoolmaster Earl Craig took the second game 4-0. Craig held the Londoners in check all the way and in the second game only twice did the London team have a runner past second base. Strathroy lost the king-pin position for the first time this year when through the double defeat.

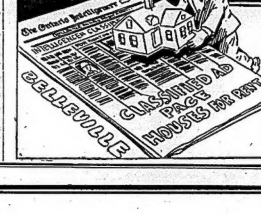
Errorless Ball for Ponies

Brantford, winners of only two games in nine starts, were no match for the tricky Strathroy club. The Royals finished up the pennant race with a 3-1 win in the first game and took the nightcap 6-5 by a game behind London for third place.

Tommy Jamieson, ace hurler of Kingston Ponies, won his fifth straight game, when the Ponies defeated Napanee 4-1 in a fast Central Ontario Baseball League fixture. Besides his fine pitching Jamieson drove in a pair of counters with a single and a double as Kingston played errorless ball.

The Ponies stayed at the top of the league standing despite Oshawa's 6-4 win over Peterborough in the other league game. Champions of Ontario's Senior class, Oshawa let the heavy-hitting league strike-out king, Biddle, rest as Turner pitched excellent ball. The Petes were errorless but left 11 men on base.

TENNIS



Taking four of a possible five points the Point Anne tennis players defeated the Stirling netsters in a regular scheduled feature in the Bay of Quinte Tennis Conference at the Consecon Village yesterday, to take a firm hold on third position in the league standing.

Competition was most keen throughout the entire five games played which resulted in extra games in almost every event of the day.

In the men's doubles, Clarke Fraser and Art Genereaux of Point Anne, won over Ken West and D. Ashley, Stirling, 7-5, 6-4, and Jack Hart and Tom Bowler, Point Anne, defeated Harry McGee and Harry Lovelrood, 7-5 and 6-3.

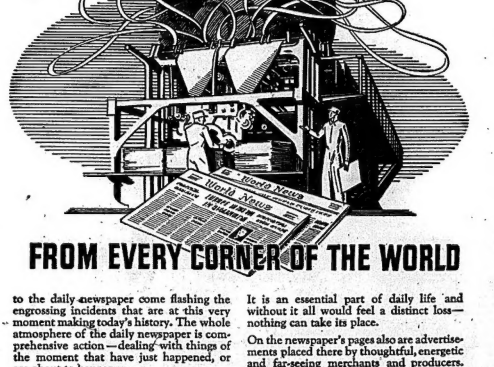
In the mixed doubles, Ken Nicoll and Miss Betty Nicoll, Stirling, won over W. Ward and Miss Pearl Tulk, Point Anne, 7-5 and 6-4, for Stirling's only win of the day. M. Carter and Miss Ilsen Williams, Point Anne, triumphed over Miss Julia Orull and Billy Meagher, Stirling, 6-4 and 10-8, the latter set going into extra play. In the ladies' doubles the team of Mrs. Willis Dillabough and Mrs. Donalda Long, Point Anne, defeated the Stirling ladies, Miss Marion Fairburn and Miss Phylis Stockdale, 7-5 and 7-5.

Two other scheduled tournament between the Bay of Quinte Tennis Club and Trenton Tennis Club at Trenton was postponed until a later date.

Varsity Youth Striking Asset

Prof. Morgan Cote of McGill Sees Them As "Leaders"

Hull, England, July 3 (CP)—According to Professor A. E. Morgan, former principal of McGill University, Montreal, modern university youth of Canada constitute "one of the very striking assets of Canada."



"In the universities one sees the best examples of those who are going to be the leaders of Canada tomorrow," said Professor Morgan, who has just returned to Great Britain.

He declined to make any comment upon his resignation as principal of McGill. He said he had no definite plans for the future beyond taking a holiday.

"If one dared to generalize, one would say that the youth of Canada is less sophisticated and more optimistic than the youth of Great Britain," said Professor Morgan.

"This does not mean that conditions have been easy for him. Emphatically, they have not, and the unemployment of youth has been very serious. But their spirits do not seem to have been dampened and one fails to find evidence of cynicism."

Discussing Quebec province, the ex-principal of McGill said "the province is in some ways the most reactionary part of Canada. At the same time, it is a stronghold of the older culture, both French and English. In that respect it makes a great contribution to the Dominion as a whole both as a leavener and a steadying influence.

to the daily newspaper come flashing the engrossing incidents that are at this very moment making today's history. The whole atmosphere of the daily newspaper is comprehensive action—dealing with things of the moment that have just happened, or are about to happen.

When white paper leaves the printing presses in the daily newspaper office, it is no longer some inert material, but an active powerful force reaching the thousands who thirst for its contents.

Practically every Canadian family reads a daily newspaper. It is an essential part of daily life and without it all would feel a distinct loss—nothing can take its place.

On the newspaper's pages also are advertisements placed there by thoughtful, energetic and far-seeing merchants and producers. The best traders in Canada—the firms which grow in prestige year after year—know that the daily newspaper is as necessary to them as their raw material. When the fight is hardest—they have often proved this—it pays to strengthen their newspaper lists.

INSTALMENT 14

If Aunt Cecile noticed the anguish in Jeanne's blue eyes she didn't mention it and half an hour later Jeanne left her to go back for another call at the Bartletts' apartment.

The next morning Jeanne walked back to her rooming house to see if there was any mail. The brisk walk down Park avenue brought color to her cheeks and a sparkle to her eyes. The week end was almost over and she had to see Aunt Cecile only once more. They were going downtown that afternoon. Tomorrow Gordon Bartlett would be back and, working hard again, she would be able to forget Bryan.

There was only one letter for Jeanne at the house, a note from Mark, written in his large, straggling hand. She tore it open rapidly. Mark never wrote to her and so she was anxious when she began to read it. It took only a few minutes and then with a gasp Jeanne sat down in the nearest chair. It was a cruel note—making insinuations about her being at Gordon Bartlett's penthouse over the week-end.

"Now I know why you've never been satisfied with me", he wrote. "I'm only a small town boy trying to earn an honest living."

Jeanne started at the note and then slowly tore it into small pieces. Mark's insinuations left her trembling with indignation.

"It isn't fair of him," she cried sleepily. "I have done all I could to be nice to him and this is the way he treats me."

He said nothing about announcing the breaking of their engagement, he only let Jeanne understand that the next visit she paid to Hilton she would find her bodiced left for people that she and Mark were not going to be married. The unfair accusation he had taken after looking after her at the Bartletts' on Friday night was more than she could bear. Always unreasonable, he had rushed to the conclusion that she was staying in the apartment when Gordon Bartlett was there. He was not an gentleman enough to wait for an explanation.

Tears came to Jeanne's eyes, tears that she had been holding back ever since she had seen Bryan, and with a sob she threw herself on the narrow cot bed. Her whole world had been thrown topsy-turvy in the past month. There was no hope any longer that she might hear from Bryan. That was over now. And there was no one she to help her take her mind off her troubles. Mark, always unstable, had turned against her. Lance Lawton, in love with Cilly but unhappy in his devotion, could spare no more than a passing moment for a girl out of his own class. And Sandra was the only girl Jeanne had ever known very well since she had been living in the city. Sandra, with her smouldering black eyes and low, drawling voice, had wanted a man with money, and not finding him, had taken Bryan away from Jeanne as casually as she would have bought a new frock. Was there nowhere in the world a person who was honest about love?

At one o'clock Jeanne got up reluctantly and went into the small dark bathroom to bathe her face. She couldn't go to see Aunt Cecile with reddened eyes and a mouth taut with crying. She had to go there with a bright face and gay chatter on her lips as though she were Cilly Bartlett, wealthy and pampered, with nothing on her mind more troubling than how to have a good time.

No matter how unhappy Jeanne was she always took pains in her appearance, so with steady hands she lipsticked her soft young mouth and drew her hair over her blonde ironing. Even her hair seemed to have lost its brightness. Unhappiness was like a severe illness. It made one look bleak and colorless.

The walk to the National Hotel helped to restore her spirits and by the time Jeanne went into Aunt Cecile's suite she looked the girl she had to play. In the sofa comb's hair frock and becoming brown felt hat, she might very well have been a gay young society girl.

"You're as pretty as a picture, Cecile," the old lady told her, giving her an affectionate kiss. "And have you been doing to make your cheeks so pink?"

"Walking on Park avenue," Jeanne said with a smile.

"I'm afraid it has been a dull week-end for you, my dear," Cilly's aunt said. "And when I read this in the paper I realized what you had given up for me."

She motioned to the society page of the Sunday paper lying on the footstool by her chair.

"In the paper?" Jeanne echoed, her heart sinking.

"Yes, your name was mentioned in the list of guests at a house party."

Jeanne sat down quickly in the chair opposite Aunt Cecile's to steady herself. "Oh, Dale Lord's party," she said, trying to sound casual.

"Yes," the old lady nodded. "It sounds very gay, skating and skiing, and satisfactory I kept you in the city when you might have been having a lovely time with your friends."

"It doesn't mean a thing to me," Jeanne protested hastily. "I don't care a bit about winter sports."

Aunt Cecile shook a finger at her. "You're a dear girl to say so but when the Martins came to Italy last year they told me you were an excellent skater."

"Not any more," Jeanne faltered. "You see, I hurt my ankle last year so I thought it was better not to skate it."

"You are saying that to reassure your old auntie but I like you for doing it. As I told you yesterday, Cecile, I'm very proud of you. And I have something here I want to give you to remember me by. I was going to leave it to you in my will but there is no reason why you can't have it now to enjoy it while you are still young."

The old lady got up and walked into the bedroom, bringing back a large leather jewel case. She unlocked it with a tiny key suspended from a chain that she wore around her neck. And when she pulled out the covers of the case Jeanne gasped aloud. She had never dreamed any one had such a profusion of beautiful jewels. Aunt Cecile opened the big leather box and handed Jeanne a ring.

"It belonged to my mother and I had it reset in Paris this year. The old-fashioned setting didn't show the real beauty of the diamond."

It was the handsomest ring Jeanne had ever seen, a large blue white diamond with sapphires set in a circle around it.

"How beautiful!" Jeanne said in an awed voice. "You shouldn't part with it."

"Nonsense. Wear it. I want you to have it."

Jeanne slipped it on the third finger of her right hand.

"Does it fit?"

The girl nodded.

"Good...It looks lovely on you. Long slender fingers like yours are made for beautiful rings."

"I can't take it, really," Jeanne protested.

How could she give the ring back to Cilly's aunt without hurting her feelings. It was impossible to accept it. Of course in the morning she could turn it over to Cilly but she was afraid to have such an expensive jewel in her possession until then. What if something happened to it?

"I will be very much disappointed if you don't accept it, Cecile," the old lady said decisively.

So there was nothing else that Jeanne could do but thank her for her generosity and keep the ring on her finger.

It was too cold and snowy to go for a ride so Aunt Cecile ordered tea to be sent up to her room and the two of them sat by the blazing wood fire eating the delicious little cakes and sipping the fragrant hot tea. It was so pleasant that Jeanne almost forgot she was playing a part and that tomorrow she would be Jeanne MacDonald again and working busily as Gordon Bartlett's secretary. And then the pleasant interlude was interrupted. Aunt Cecile's maid came into the room and told Jeanne she was wanted on the telephone.

"A gentleman to speak to young Miss Bartlett," she said.

Jeanne hurried to the telephone, grateful that it was in the foyer and not in the living room. Who could be calling her at Aunt Cecile's? Bryan was the only person who knew her whereabouts except Lance and she was certain that neither of them would try to get in touch with her there.

"Hello." Her voice was fearful. "Cilly?"

It was Gordon Bartlett.

"No, that is . . ." Jeanne faltered.

"Miss MacDonald? Gordon Bartlett, at last," in amazement.

"A few minutes ago. I decided not to stay over until Monday."

"I see. I'll call you later if I may."

"Of course. Parks told me some wild story about your staying here in Cilly's place but I can't make heads or tails of it. Call me as soon as you get away from there."

Jeanne paused and hung up, thankful that it had gone off as well as it had. Taking another person's identity was a dangerous game, she thought as she went back into the room. It had never occurred to either Cilly or Gordon that Gordon would be back before Monday.

Aunt Cecile was busy in the bedroom arranging for her packing so Jeanne did not have to make any explanation about the call.

"You've been a sweet child," the old lady said as Jeanne slipped into her coat, preparing to leave. "Are you sure you don't want me to see you off tomorrow?" Jeanne asked, thinking it was the only polite thing to do.

Aunt Cecile shook her head decidedly. "I don't abide farewells in railroad stations. Besides, I am taking an early train."

Jeanne said good-bye to her with genuine regret. She had grown fond of Cilly's aunt in the past two days and she knew the old lady liked her.

As she hurried down Park avenue in the cold, windy twilight she thought what a fortunate girl Cilly Bartlett was and how happy her life could be if she chose to make it so. But lately Jeanne was growing more and more convinced that it takes more than money to make happiness.

Veterans Hold Annual Picnic

Over 700 Enjoy Outing At Cedardale On Thursday

Under rather cool weather conditions the annual picnic of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada Unit No. 30, Belleville, was held at Cedardale on Dominion Day. Over 700 veterans and their wives and children enjoyed the day's outing.

In buses, trucks and motor cars the Veterans' caravan left Belleville early yesterday morning and after a day of sporting events and aquatic sports the party returned last night. The tug of war trophy, donated for annual competition by Mr. P. H. Wills, of this city, was won by the 3rd Division team, composed of W. Ford, Art Newman, C. Reid, M. McGuire, D. Sweezy, R. Stewart, P. McTaggart and one other member.

During the day favours in candy, fruit, ice cream and soft drinks were provided the kiddies on the grounds at the expense of the local unit of the Army and Navy Veterans of Belleville. The picnic was under the supervision of Chairman Jim Lazenby with Sam Pointer in charge of the transportation.

The conventional picnic races were held, with prizes that had been donated by local merchants, being awarded the winners in the various events. The picnic was one of the most successful ever attempted by the Veterans of the city. The winners of the various events were not recorded during the day's programme.

$50 Taken Out Of Hotel Room

Marysville Hotel Scene of Robbery Wednesday Night

While business was being conducted as usual robbers nonchalantly walked into the Hotel Marysville, operated by Mrs. M. Cavanaugh, and stole $50.00 in cash from a money box in Mrs. Cavanaugh's personal apartment sometime Wednesday night.

Provincial Constable Wm. McBrien investigated and learned that other rooms in the hotel had been rifled, but only money stolen. Mrs. Cavanaugh asserted that the locked cash box in her room was intact at 6.00 p.m., but was found broken open and lying on the floor, when she went to retire at midnight.

It is believed by police, that the robber walked into the hotel during the height of business hours on Wednesday night and silently climbed the hotel stairs to walk into the opened apartment and break open the cash box, removing its entire contents. No disturbances were heard by any of the hotel employees, so silently did the robber complete his work, in not only Mrs. Cavanaugh's apartment, but in other rooms he also rifled in search of money. It is believed the robbery was consummated by some party, who knew the general conditions of the hotel and the actions of the employees. No suspicious strangers were reported to have been seen in that vicinity Wednesday night.

Elderly Couple Hit by Train

Driver Did Not See Train In Time To Avoid Crash

St. Thomas, Ont., July 2 (CP)—A few hours after Mr. and Mrs. Harry Keeling, of Detroit, set out on a vacation, death overtook them and today their bodies rested here, awaiting the arrival of relatives to claim them.

The middle-aged couple were killed instantly shortly after noon yesterday when their light motor car crashed head on with a Wabash Railway locomotive at a crossing three miles west of Talbotville on No. 3 Highway.

A driver's permit found on the man enabled police to establish identification and late last night authorities established contact with a daughter, Mrs. J. Potter, in Detroit.

The collision occurred when the car driver made a desperate effort to swing down the right-of-way to avoid the locomotive which he apparently failed to notice until he was less than 100 feet from the crossing.

The speed at which the car was travelling, however, prevented the driver from making a short turn and the locomotive and automobile came together with terrific force.

The entire carried the car back across the crossing about 60 feet; then the car suspended and Mrs. Keeling's body fell clear of it. Her husband's body remained in the car. The train came to a halt 50 feet further.

FRANK CLIFFORD SMITH NEWSPAPERMAN DIES

Montreal July 2 (CP)—The long career of Frank Clifford Smith as a newspaperman, author and playwright, ended last night. Death, culminating long illness came to the 72-year-old writer at his home here.

NO FORMAL DISPLAY AS CANADA HONORS HER 70TH BIRTHDAY

(By The Canadian Press)

Ottawa entered her 71st year of nationhood today as her people returned to the everyday tasks of office and farm and workshop after celebrating their 70th Dominion Day.

Favored, except in Quebec, by clear weather, celebrations were mostly informal, outdoors affairs. Military units touched off 21-gun salutes in headquarters points throughout the Dominion, but there was little formal display.

Keynote of the observance was contained in an exchange of messages between President Roosevelt of the United States and Canada's Governor-General, Lord Tweedsmuir, speaking from Hyde Park, N.Y., the President pledged the continuation of warm friendship of the American people.

In reply, Lord Tweedsmuir said Mr. Roosevelt's good wishes were welcomed with gratitude and affection by Canadians. They carried as a pledge of fellowship between neighbors and friends, but as the congratulations of the pioneers, who blazed the trail for us to follow." The Governor-General's broadcast message was delivered from a British cruiser in Vancouver harbor.

Premier Mackenzie King cabled greetings to his fellow-Canadians from Brussels where he continued his informal talks with European leaders on world peace and international trade.

In parts of Ontario skies were overcast, while Quebec's holiday was disappointing with rain bringing postponement of sports programs and a military display on the Plains of Abraham. The Prairies and British Columbia, however, had perfect weather and in the Maritimes the weather was fair and cool.

July 1, 1867, brought into effect a constitution for Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and Dominion Day brought special festivities in all nine provinces. In the famous Fraser Valley of British Columbia the people of Chilliwack crowned their cherry Carnival Queen. At Winnipeg Caledonian games, like those in Drumbo, Ont., were held in Chilliwack Park.

Prince Edward Islanders celebrated under the traditional maple. 2,700 Charlottetown school children especially happy as the day also marked the start of summer vacations. Throngs gathered in Lorne Valley for the annual gathering of the Clans under the auspices of the Caledonian Club.

The holiday was not without its tragic note. Thirteen lives were lost in accidents eight of them in Ontario, the rest in eastern Canada.

EARHART PLANE MISSING IN PACIFIC, 'SOS' HEARD

Earhart is Forced Down After Missing Island In Mid - Pacific Ocean

Distress Signals Signed By Call Letters of Plane Heard

PLANE WILL FLOAT

Two-Man Rubber Lifeboat And Belts, Flares As Equipment

Honolulu, July 3 (AP)—Distress signals signed with the call letters of Amelia Earhart's monoplane flashed over the Pacific today in the midst of a frenzied sea and sky hunt for the famed aviatrix missing in equatorial waters surrounding Howland Island.

Amateur radio operators in Los Angeles heard repeated bells of "5 O S—KHAQU" shortly before 1 o'clock a.m., Pacific (5:30 a.m., E.D.T.). This was more than fourteen hours after the intrepid flier and her gasoline supply would last but 20 minutes on her flight from Oakland New Guinea.

The Amateur Walter Meichsner and Carl Haase, said the signals were so weak they could hardly hear them through static. They said that once they caught the letters "L-A-T" for latitude, the signals were blotted out by interference.

"KHAQU" is the call of Miss Earhart's plane, last heard from by radio yesterday at 3:15 p.m., E.D.T., when she reported she and her navigator, the veteran Fred Noonan, could not sight land and were nearly out of gas.

Ship Hears Signals.

Another report signed with the plane's call letters and seeking radio contact was picked up by the Coast Guard cutter Itasca off New Zealand township Arabiru, the San Francisco Coast Guard station said.

The Achilles, many miles south and east of Howland Island, reported:

"Unknown station heard to make: 'Please give us a few flashes if you get us. 7 p.m. 53N 157W' (position). This station made KHAQU twice (Continued on Page Three).

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thomson
Toronto Service Meteorologist

"Fourth of July weather, eh?" It is popularly thought that it always rains on the Fourth. There is, of course, strong chances that it will in some places where the thunderstorm frequency is high for July, but the actual sight the chances are for fair weather. (This is not a forecast!) The thunderstorm activity for the month are in Florida and New Mexico. In general, thunderstorms occur after three or four hot days. If the Fourth dawns hot, humid and calm, then the chances are quite for a change. If the weather is clear and bracing, it will probably be fair all day. It is recorded that Thomas Jefferson made observations on July 4, 1776, exactly as he did daily for many years.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, July 3—Pressure is low over Labrador and the Gulf of St. Lawrence and is high over the prairie region of the Great Lakes, Alberta and the North Pacific States. SUSPEND PUBLICATION DURING THE STRIKE

Philadelphia, July 3 (AP)—Publishers of Philadelphia and Camden, N.J., newspapers suspended publication last night for the duration of "the emergency created by the general trucking strike" after the publishers made their announcement after a conference with Mayor S. Davis Wilson.

The action was necessitated, the publishers stated, because of the impossibility of mailing deliveries and because they did not wish to "subject their employees and the public to danger of serious injury."

The newspapers affected were the Inquirer, the Record, the Evening Bulletin, the Evening Leader and the Daily News of Philadelphia and the Courier Post and Evening Courier of Camden, N.J.

The walkout was called by the Joint Teamsters' council of District No. 2 to protest against the Committee General Contractors' organization "invading the teamsters' movement".

C. I. O. Purge Is Underway

Union Axe Falls On Strike Captains In Steel Sector

Youngstown, O., July 3 (AP)—A C.I.O. "purge" began today in the Mahoning valley, a day full on the Red and two other strike fronts in the Mahoning Valley steel sector.

John Owens, district C.I.O. strike director in Ohio, announced without comment the removal of Hall, now in jail under charges of heading a "dynamite ring," as strike captain in the Niles Warren, as well as dismissal of Harry Wines and John Grajeker replaced Hall. Owens also stripped two of his Youngstown strike lieutenants of their membership.

Communist participation in the strike was claimed in circulars distributed through the valley today. In the circulars Phil Bart, "Mahoning Valley secretary of the Communist party," said:

"Of course the Communist party and its members in the steel mills participated in the drive to organize steel and all other unorganized industries. The Communist party joins with all Democratic forces in the struggle against reactionaries, open shop violence, and fascism."

Phillip Murray, chairman of S.W. O.C. (the C.I.O. steel affiliate which held the charter May 27) said at Pittsburgh he "knew nothing about" the removal of the Ohio strike leaders.

AWARDED ALBERT MEDAL

London, July 3—(CP Cable)—The London Gazette announced last night that the king had awarded the Albert Medal to Lieut.-Commander R. G. Scourfield for gallantry in saving the life of a fireman when the oil-tryer Hunter struck a mine off the coast of Dublin Bay.

The Hunter was on non-liner service when she struck at the time. Her death list was eight.

Pan American Clipper III Starts Experimental Flight

British Crew Leaving England At Same Time

STOP AT BATWOOD

Port Washington N.Y., July 3 (AP) —The flying boat Pan American Clipper III left the harbor here at 7:25 a.m., E.D.T. today on the first leg of an experimental flight to England.

The ship, with 22 persons aboard to be off on the new trans-oceanic venture, apparently were more interested in the fate of their mutual friend, Capt. Fred J. Noonan, Amelia Earhart's companion on her world flight, than in their own hop.

They were Capt. Harold R. Gray and his crew of six in Pan American Clipper III, making the same type of experimental flight to Europe that Captain Noonan and other Pan American Airways fliers made to Manila two years ago in preparation for the present trans-Pacific air service.

British Crew Leaves.

Today's flight by the American ship is being made in Britain's crew leaving Southampton, England, in an Imperial Airways flying boat, H. Caledonia.

The route for the day was 1,072 miles to Botwood, Nfld., with a stop at Foynes at Shediac Bay, N.B.

The Batwood schedule called for a short hop to Foynes, Irish Free State from where they will take off Monday for the last leg to Atlantic, presumably with an eastward crossing to Poynes by the Pan American Clipper.

The clipper, a 22½-ton Sikorsky S-42B, is powered with four Pratt and Whitney engines of 800 horsepower. She has a cruising radius of about 3,000 miles at 160 miles an hour. The Caledonia is a 20-ton ship.

At the completion of the double crossing, the observations of double crews will be combined in preparation for the establishment of a trans-Atlantic passenger service. Neither passengers nor mail are being carried on the experimental flights.

Allied Workers In Hespeler are Asked to Join

Woollen Mill Strikers At Peterboro Now 600 Strong

TWO INJURED

Police Get Trucks Through To Mill But Loads Not Brought Out

Peterborough, Ont., July 3 (CP)—Now 600 strong, striking woollen mill workers today sought to further increase their ranks, calling upon allied workers in Hespeler, Ont., to join them in a sympathy strike. The drive, which brought 300 local workers into the C.I.O. affiliated union, continued after their first clash with police at the Dominion Woollens and Worsteds mills.

Stanley Beley, 25, and Mrs. H. Wood, 60, were recovering today from injuries received when police charged a picket line and threw a tear gas bomb while escorting transport trucks through the ranks yesterday. Both striking weavers suffered head injuries.

At Toronto Premier Mitchell Hepburn, commenting on the outbreak, said additional police assistance would be given the town if it were needed. Attorney-General Conant said at the same time no investigation of the flare-up had been asked.

The strike started in the company's Auburn plant with 300 quitting work and establishing picket line, demanding increased wages and improved conditions. They were joined by 300 from the Bonnerworth plant yesterday.

For several days strikers have prevented trucks from the mill back at their picket lines, but through the company's hired shipment of materials valued at $60,000, Chief Inspector Albert Eight city policemen rode the bumpers and running boards of two machines as they headed for the mills, accompanying to run the picket line.

The strike crowd, pickets and sympathizers, closed in and pushed one truck back to the road. One man and attempt a warning was given but then bullets were thrown and a gas bomb tossed into the crowd by Chief Inspector William Parry. Immediate attempt was made, however to load the trucks when they finally got through to the mill.

Farewell Said At Paris Today

Paris, July 3 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, left this noon today for Cherbourg where they will board the Empress of British Empress bound.

Philippe Roy, Canadian Minister to France, and M. Rochereau, Canadian representative at Geneva, Fouiqueu du Parc of the French foreign office and Jean Desy, chief of protocol present in Paris were at the station to wish the visitors bon voyage.

Mackenzie King waived a smiling acknowledgment as the train moved away.

'Full Liberty of Action' By France and Britain Seen in Patrol Crisis

Paris, July 3 (CP-Havas)—France and Great Britain would be forced to resume "full liberty of action" towards Spain with the end of the non-intervention patrols, French newspapers proclaimed today with unusual unanimity from right to extreme left.

"Germany and Italy have broken upon themselves a heavy responsibility in torpedoing the non-intervention policy" wrote the communist-ley of the conservative newspaper, Le Figaro, "since the assuming this burden, France and England in turn recover their full freedom of action. "We shall see if it suits them to export arms and munitions of war to Spain. If they do, then Valencia will be the principal beneficiary."

Referring to the German-Italian proposals that Great Britain and France recognize the Spanish Insurgents belligerent status, Le Matin said that to accord this right to General Franco "would be to throw ourselves into a perilous adventure with our eyes blindfolded."

Pertinax, noted commentator of the Conservative newspaper Echo de Paris, wrote: "The counter-proposition of Germany and Italy are evidently founded on the hypothesis of a credulity, Naivete, and timidity almost unlimited on the part of England and France."

Marriage With Former Heir 'Lovely Fairy Story' to Bride

Pretty Marta Rocafort, Cuban, Weds Tonight Alfonso's Son

HIS SECOND MARRIAGE

Havana, July 3 (AP)—Pretty Marta Rocafort, daughter of a Cuban dentist, delightfully termed her scheduled marriage tonight to the Count of Covadonga, once heir to the throne of Spain, "a lovely fairy story."

The Count, eldest son of ex-King Alfonso XIII of Spain, and his bride made plans to return to Spain soon after their marriage in the presence of President Federico Laredo Bru, Col. Fulgencio Batista, and scores of Havana society.

It will be the 20-year old Count's second marriage to a Cuban commoner.

Only three months ago a divorce court dissolved his marriage with Edelmira Sampedro, for whose love he renounced his right in Wqoee to the now-vacant Spanish throne.

Over his father's objections, Alfonso married Edelmira, whom he had met in a Swiss sanitorium as he convalesced from the results of hemophilia, the hereditary blood disease from which he suffers.

Lead is Held By De Valera

Returns In Irish Free State Election Are Few

Dublin, July 3 (AP)—President Eamon de Valera's Fianna Fail today maintained a comfortable lead over William T. Cosgrave's Fine Gael as returns from Thursday's general election, held under proportional representation, were counted.

The standing, on the basis of complete returns from 26 constituencies:

Fianna Fail	17
Fine Gael	8
Independents	2
Labor	2
To come	106

De Valera, in Clare, and Cosgrave, in Cork, both were among the first to be announced as re-elected. Sean Macentee, Minister of Finance, Cesar Traynor, Minister of Post and Telegraphs, and Lord Mayor Alfred Byrne, Independent, were returned from Dublin constituencies.

Malcolm Defeated.

In Dublin Southeast, Cosgrave's lieutenant, General Richard Mulcahy, former commander-in-chief of the Free State army, was defeated by James Larkin, Independent Labor candidate.

A plebiscite on the new constitution was held simultaneously with the election, and early returns showed two to Dublin constituencies favored it while in Sligo a majority of 11,036 against it was returned.

A feature of the election was a large proportion of invalid ballots. Many voters were not expected to be known until next week, including the fate of the proposed new constitution.

In County Clare, de Valera polled 16,412 votes, almost double the number of his nearest opponent. Cosgrave received 8,506 votes in Cork, about 1,000 over the nearest government candidate.

The new Dail will have 138 members in comparison with the 153 who formerly sat in the parliament.

On the constitutional question, a majority of 11,036 votes was rolled up in South Dublin alone, early returns showed.

Miss Round Again Champ

Recaptures For England Single Tennis Crown

Wimbledon July 3 (CP)—Dorothy Round recaptured the all-England women's singles tennis crown for England today, defeating the hard-hitting Polish star, Jadwiga Jedrzejowska 6-3, 2-6, 7-5.

Miss Round, 27-year-old clergyman's daughter, thus climaxed an amazing comeback after two years of comparative tennis obscurity. She was married during the Wimbledon of the United States, who bowed to Miss Round in the quarter-finals of the current championships.

Is To Wed In September.

The English girl originally had planned to write "finis" to her tennis career with this tournament in order to devote preparations for her marriage, in September, to Dr. Douglas L. Lumsden, established today, however, that she might reconsider and join Great Britain's Wightman Cup team in the series with the United States at Forest Hills, N.Y.

Mme. Simone Mathieu of France and Adeline Yorke of England won the all-England women's doubles championship today, defeating Mrs. Phyllis Mudford King and Joan Ridman of England, 6-2, 6-3.

Mme. Mathieu and Miss Hitman had eliminated the defending champions Kay Stammers and Freda James of England, in the quarter-finals.

Inventor of Electric Shaving Device Victim of Complications

New York, July 3 (AP)—Col. Jacob Schick, 59, inventor of an electric shaving device, died in Presbyterian Hospital here today of complications following an operation for kidney ailment. A widow and two children survive.

Col. Schick, whose offices and factory are in Canada, was reported a couple of weeks ago to be too ill to be advised of reference made to him in a congressional tax inquiry at Washington.

At that time it was charged by Representative Lewis (D.) of Maryland that Col. Schick's death had not been received at the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and the Colonel had died this morning.

Announcement of the death later by his private secretary, unavailable at present.

Schick died at 4 a.m. He was operated on here last Feb. 24 for the removal of a kidney. Afterwards he went to Montreal.

Soviet Agrees To Withdrawal Naval Patrols

Wave of Relief Sweeps Japan As Tension Eases

MOSCOW STATEMENT

Negotiations For Permanent Fishery Treaty Impend

Tokyo, July 3 (AP)—Russo-Japanese tension eased today after Soviet Russia agreed to withdraw naval patrol vessels from disputed Amur River islands between Siberia and Manchoukuo.

The Soviet office announced the incident growing from a clash between Russian and Japanese-Manchoukuan forces June 30, was settled, according to a statement Japan's government had promised to recall her forces from the trouble zone.

A wave of relief swept over the nation when newspaper extras made public the agreement reached in Moscow. One of the best indications that the situation was no longer tense was the appearance seen in Premier Fumimaro Konoye's departure for a week-end of golf and swimming at the seaside.

(An official communique in Moscow announced the Russian evacuation had been ordered after the Japanese ambassador, Mamoru Shigemitsu, called at the withdrawal of Japanese - Manchoukuan military forces. But the Japanese had given no excuse for his defeat.

The better German, he said "if I hit a boom it was my own fault."

Lost 7 Days In Jungleland

New York, July 3 (CP)—Snatched from the dense African jungle after being lost for seven days, four of them paddling in a canoe, Philip Holland, described as a millionaire Canadian gold mine operator and his wife were recovering today at Nairobi, Kenya Colony.

A movie expedition headed by Mrs. Osa Johnson, American explorer, rescued the couple after their airplane had been forced down, according to a message to the New York office of the expedition.

The Whitmanares were flying to Nairobi to get Mrs. Johnson when they were forced down. The expedition, on their return trip after recovery from injuries received in a plane crash in California in which Mr. and Mrs. Osa Johnson's pilot was killed, had just arrived from Hollywood.

When the Whitmanares were several hours overdue, Mrs. Johnson and Al Klein, African hunter, set out at the head of a search party. When they found the plane, they searched them to Nairobi.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitmarsh were described as suffering from exhaustion and hunger, but uninjured.

ELABORATE PLAN TO KILL DIMITROFF TOLD BY POLICE

Moscow, July 3 (AP) — Russian police officers today solemnly recounted today an elaborate plan to kill Georgi Dimitroff, Secretary General of the Communist International, alleging the plan was plotted in Paris at the instigation of the Gestapo—German Secret Police.

Dimitroff was the chief Soviet leader in Leningrad, Zakovsky said in a further elaboration of asserted spy activities in the Soviet Union. Zakovsky yesterday disclosed more than 100 persons, many of them generals, and more than 70 "liquidated" — liquidation usually meaning execution.

Writing in the Communist youth newspaper, Komsomolskaya Pravda, Zakovsky charged also that the Gestapo chief in Paris had been "carried out an important espionage role on behalf of Poland," and that Gestapo agents had been executed after he confessed plotting the poison air force officers, allegedly at the instruction of Polish intelligence agents.

Wall of Flame in Coal Mine Seals Fate of Many Men

Flooding Necessary To Extinguish Fire in Shaft

30 DEAD

Stoke-on-Trent, England, July 3 (CP)—With eighteen men trapped inside by flames and deadly afterdamp, Sir Byrom Chesterton pit was to be flooded today—the only way authorities could extinguish fire that burned in the coal after two explosions yesterday.

A death list of thirty was officially issued when four men were found dead. Eighteen others died in hospital of wounds and all hopes of rescue of the eighteen inside out alive, failed before a wall of flame in the shaft.

A terse official account posted at the pithead gave little indication of the horror of the underground blast and the sheer heroism of rescue workers who battled until exhaustion to save their trapped comrades.

Statement By Mine.

"A fire occurred in a working face in a four feet seam between the hours of 6:30 and 7 a.m. today (Friday)," the statement said. "It was later followed by an explosion of which three men lost their lives. In the progress of rescue operations and sealing of the affected areas another explosion occurred, involving several persons."

It was learned that forty night shift miners were at work when the fire started. One of the men rescued, having made sparks fly from machinery "Run for it!" the fireman shouted just before the explosion.

Rescuers' Heroic Effort.

Rescue parties rushed into the blazing pit while other crews started sealing-off operations. There was a second explosion. Four of the five-man crew were killed, the captain dying on the way to the ambulance to speak.

Colliery officials were among the party of seventeen entombed by the blast. The pit became a raging inferno, preventing rescuers from working for more than a few minutes at a time.

Pitiful scenes always part of a mine's tragedy were repeated, with wives and children wailing fearfully at the mine head for news of their menfolk. Each additional stretcher brought fresh misery as its tragic burden was identified. Similar scenes were reported at the North Staffordshire Royal Infirmary, as ambulances brought the badly burned men for emergency treatment.

Canadian Drew Berkshire Side of River, Called Favorable Side

By PAT USSHER.

Henley-on-Thames, England, July 3 (CP)—L. Hasenohrl, Austrian oarsman, today won the historic Diamond Sculls, defeating John Coulson of Toronto.

The Austrian won easily, covering the mile and 400 yard course in nine minutes, 12 seconds.

The Canadian drew the Berkshire side of the river, which was considered the slightly more favorable position, but was soundly defeated.

Hasenohrl, who defeated Arnaud Rigaitta to a climax and was rowed in glorious, sunny weather, a fine contrast to the cold, wet day in 1936, Joe Wright in 1927 and Jack Guest in 1920. All were of Toronto. In 1931 Bob Pearce of Hamilton, Ont., won.

Hasenohrl built up a commanding lead after the Toronto Argonaut hope hit a boom one minute from the finish. But the Canadian had no excuses for his defeat.

"The better man won," he said. "If I hit a boom it was my own fault."

Defeated Man Is Expelled

A. Stephen Loses Standing in C.C.F., Accused of 'Popular Front' Idea

Vancouver, July 3 (CP) — A. Stephen, defeated candidate in the June 1 British Columbia election in Alberni-Nanaimo riding, was expelled from the B. C. section, Cooperative Commonwealth Federation last night "for his action during the election in running as a C.C.P. candidate without the necessary qualifications and for openly advocating unconstitutional activity among the membership."

In Alberni-Nanaimo riding Stephen was given support of C.C.F. clubs despite the previous suspension by the provincial executive of the party for advocating a "popular front" of the working class parties, including the Communist party.

(The provincial convention of the C.C.F. in 1936 voted against such an alliance with other groups and instructed that the executive to retain political independence for the C. C. F.)

Mr. Stephen was defeated in Alberni-Nanaimo by Hon. George S. Pearson, Minister of Labor.

One Killed in Head-on Crash

Seven Others Including Three Small Children Injured

Windsor, Ont., July 3 (CP)—The body of George Holland, 56, Detroit, rested in a funeral home here today, while seven other persons, including three small children, are confined to hospital following a head-on collision near the village of St. Joachim, 12 miles south of here yesterday.

Four of the injured are in serious condition. Mrs. George Fountain, 21, Amherstburg, is in critical condition with several fractures and a deep forehead laceration. Condition of her three grandchildren is considered serious because of possible internal injuries and shock.

Holland died almost immediately of a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Wet Pavement.

The collision occurred on a rain-slicked stretch of pavement some of seven mysterious accidents. The road is straight at the point where the heavy sedan driven by Saffir, with his sister-in-law, Mrs. Saffir, as passenger, collided with the other car, driven by William Holland.

Holland's father, George Holland, was sitting in the front seat and Mrs. Fountain and the rear seat with her three grandchildren, children of Mr. and Mrs. George Fountain, Jr., Amherstburg. Holland Sr. was hurled against the windshield and died as a result of injuries received when he was thrown in the front of the automobile.

Passing motorists and St. Joachim residents pulled the injured from the wreckage and placed them on the roadside until the arrival of ambulances and doctors.

AMBITIOUS LAD WANTS WORK BADLY

Some people would call him a tramp, but Gerard Albert Lee Albert Hachey of Saint John, New Brunswick, is anxious to get to work this morning via the thumb, freight car and other modes of transportation. Not one to be classed in this category, Albert wants a job, and wants it badly. He will work on a farm, in a gravel pit, in fact anything that is productive of turning some much-needed money into the pockets of Albert's frayed trousers.

This clear-eyed youngster, shabby garbed but clean, has left his home in New Brunswick three weeks ago and footed it to Ottawa where he expected to find the elusive pot of gold at the end of his travelling rainbow.

But Albert likes Belleville. He would like to remain long enough to earn sufficient money to buy a new complete clothing outfit. Then down in Saint John's a mother and four younger sisters and brothers will welcome him. He lives at home, and these are many months to feed.

"I told mother I would not be home money as soon as I could earn some," he said, as he finished a cup of coffee and a sandwich. "No, I haven't any money with me, nor did I have any when I left home."

"Gee, I'm comfortable," youngster said wistfully, "I wish I could get a job."

Officials of the local Employment Bureau went to work and in all likelihood, Albert will soon realize his hopes.

Service will be held in the school room in order to obviate the necessity of darkening the windows and fading the screen in the church. Formal announcement is made in another part of this paper.

SUPERB TRAILER IS VISITOR HERE

Trailers may come and trailers may go, but the latest model to appear in these homes on wheels passed in the city today en route on a tour of Canada. Owned by Mr. F. Bradford, Pennsylvania's oil magnate, the streamlined beauty of the trailer drew the attention of a large crowd of interested spectators.

The front-third is built along the lines of an observation railroad car with gleaming glass affording occupants an excellent view of the passing countryside. The kitchen is the last word in modernism. Hot and cold running water is available. Leather-upholstered lounge and chairs occupy the front part of the trailer. Refrigeration is there. A gleaming Hotpoint electric stove is another feature. Mr. Doran and three children complete the party, with a chauffeur and Mr. Doran's plane foreman. The trailer is hauled by a powerful sixteen-cylindered Cadillac coupe.

POLICE BLOTTER

No arrests were necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours, but despite this fact the cell block at the police station was the largest crowd in some weeks, when 16 tramping were given shelter there last night. Taking into consideration the summer months usually are a general falling off of transients slumbering indoors, the number is the largest to appear at the police station in quite a while, judging since the advent of warmer weather some weeks ago. No reason for the general influx was given by police, however.

Four out-of-town motorists, who were apprehended driving their motor cars at an excessive rate of speed along East Dundas St. and police learned were apprehended by Traffic Officer Doug. Ellis. Court summonses will be issued, police stated, in the light-hearted speed laws, that were recently passed by the Department of Highways, prior thereto it was considered safe to run 35 miles per hour law in the city, to its fullest measure, they say.

Cottage Burns On Bay Shore

Summer Home of Dr. Jack Marshall Totally Destroyed

A pile of smouldering ruins is all that remains today of a summer cottage situated on the shore of the Bay of Quinte near Ridey's Parkson on the Trenton-Belleville Highway. Owned by Dr. Jack Marshall of this city, the cottage was totally unoccupied at the time, was totally destroyed by fire of unknown origin at a late hour last night.

A guest at a party being held in the nearby cottage of Dr. G. A. Marshall discovered the blaze when he looked out a window. Other cottagers were shooting from the burning building, and a number of them were on the scene. Members of the party hastily formed a bucket brigade and extinguished the roof of a cottage approximately fifty feet away from the burning building owned by Mr. W. J. Cooke, Ann Street, and which was directly in the path of blazing sparks driven in that direction by a westerly wind.

A car owned by Lorne Mohawk, Belleville insurance official, parked near the burning cottage was rescued before any damage was done.

The cottage which was fully furnished was covered by insurance.

Power Grader On Beach Job

3750 Feet of Road Is Now Being Constructed

Officials of the Belleville Beaches Association are not letting the figurative grass grow beneath their feet. At present a powerful grader, loaned by the Township of Thurlow is busily engaged in the construction of a summer road which will extend from Foster Avenue to the city limits, a distance of approximately thirty seven hundred and fifty feet. The road which is being built with a dirt base, will in all probability be reinforced with a topping of other material later in the season, Beaches officials stated today.

At the completion of the construction of the road, the grader will be utilized in grading the beach proper and the land to the rear. Those in turn will be rolled by the city roller. When this is done, one hundred and fifty loads of sand will be placed on the beach, the two building lots one for men and one for women, erected. These are expected to be completed by the end next week, Mr. Reg. Moncrieff stated today.

Nature Hasty, in apparent sympathy with the plan is lending a helping hand. A point considered by the committee in the Spring is acting as a breakwater, with the result that the wind and water of the Bay is gradually drifting sand on this part of the beach.

This sand will come in, if the proper thing is done" said the Mr. Moncrieff.

"This point, in particular is assuming a real beach like appearance, as the sand coming in from the Bay is gradually covering the place which last year went a vigorous cleaning last Spring."

BICYCLE RIDERS TO REPORT TO CHIEF

Disregarding laws and continued warnings regarding the riding of bicycles upon the sidewalks of the footbridge resulted in the apprehension of a local teen-aged lads by local police for this illegal practice yesterday. Repeatedly residents of the city, who traverse the footbridge during their journeys to and from their respective homes, have complained to the police relative to boys riding bicycles on the approaches and even on the footbridge itself, some of the boys being known to Chief Constable Ponton and other members of the force. The names of the boys were obtained and they were instructed to report to the Chief Constable today. Police Court proceedings are likely to follow, police intimated today. This practice must stop, the police added.

Drives Car Afire To City Firehall To Put Out Blaze

A resident of Point Anne by the name of Xavier Guibord, failed to Dominion Day when he noticed that the rear of his motor car was in the rumble seat of his coupe.

He stepped on the gas and raced a mile into the city hall, pulling up at the fire station where the Chief Constable and firemen with a small hose on the seat of the car, soon had the blaze out before any great amount of damage was done.

Madoc Village Incorporated 60 Years Ago

Community Club Sponsors Impressive Fete To Mark Anniversary

RACES ARE HELD

Madoc, July 3 (Special)—Madoc Village suitably observed its sixtieth anniversary of its incorporation with a monster celebration at the Agricultural Society's Fair Grounds on July 1st. The program was sponsored by the Community Club just recently reorganized, and the efforts of the executive were amply repaid with a most successful demonstration. Shortly after seven o'clock the donkeys brought here for the donkey baseball game were paraded through the main street, escorted by members of the Quinte Motorcycle Club and the competition in the bicycle races.

At the grounds some 1500 people gathered to witness the program. The local athletics, both boys and girls, put on a show, the leading event of which was a mile bike race for senior boys. The following were the winners:

Bicycle Races:

Boys' Junior—1st, Newton Kincaid, 2nd, Orley Bennett.

Boys' Junior—1st, Bruce White; 2nd, Archie Walton.

Running Races:

Girls' Senior—1st, Olive Carswell; 2nd, Thelma Foster.

Girls' Junior—1st, Verla White; 2nd, Elinor Carswell.

Boys' Senior—1st, Gordon Illing; 2nd, Keith McCoy.

Boys' Junior—1st, Cliff Carswell; 2nd, Harold Clovelly.

Following the athletic events, the Quinte Motorcycle Club conducted a 2 mile race for 350 C.C. Motorcycle, four contestants lining up at the start. Jack Kincaid, Madoc; Elgin Crawford, Belleville; Jack Dwyer, Trenton and Max Lang, Man. Belleville. The event was won by Kincaid of Madoc, who made the six laps in 5 minutes and 10 seconds.

The Donkey Baseball game was the next feature. This event was a laugh-provoker from start to finish their way to victory, although no one knew what way they were. The Bristol proved a good man as he was non-tossed during the game and scored a run for his team. Jack Fraser was the best of the out-fielders, successfully dragging his mule to the right spot at the right time. Hoke McCoy was continually in difficulty as his mount proved slightly untamed. The teams comprised Norman Reynolds, Jack Bristol, Vaughan Jack, James Watson, Ken Ellis, Ken Bristol, Ken Bird, Jack Martin, Charlie Johnson, Harry Gordon, Rob. Moore, Ken West, Ted Hailstone and Percy Gunn.

The motorcycle club again took charge and the heavier machines, the 1000 C.C. provided a thrilling race as Bruce Bristol of Madoc, drove seven times over the just a few feet ahead of Roy Hay of Belleville in three minutes and 58 seconds, breaking the track record established here last year by George Pepper of Belleville. The other contestants were Warren Hill, Madoc, Rowald Dafoe, Madoc and Bert Pallett of Belleville.

An Australian pursuit race was next and this event was by the Bristol followed closely by Roy Hay, Ross Dyer of Kingston, was forced out by an upset.

The crowd was treated to some balloon shooting by Bristol who succeed three hits in four tries.

Roy Hay ended his day's win in the plank jump when he drove his machine at a mile a minute clip up the planks and into the air, after clearing almost 23 feet.

The stunts were climaxed by Bristol down through a barrier, of gasoline and oil.

At the end a 5-mile race for all 500 c.c. machines and the winner of the 350 c.c. class was won by Roy Hay of Belleville who came out Bristol by a scant few feet.

At 6.30 a large number turned out to witness an exciting softball game on the Armouries grounds when Invanhoe defeated Madoc 9-8 in a hard fought duel. The batteries were Thunler and Thompson for Ivanhoe and Wartman and Irwin for Madoc.

Carlisle Declares for Close Co-operation Of Labor, Shareholders, Management

In the "Finance at Large" column of the Globe and Mail by Waddington Jeffrey, Financial editor, appears the following:

Reasonably-minded Canadian citizens will find themselves, it seems to me, largely in accord with the views of C. H. Carlisle, president of Canada Bread Company, that active and sincere co-operation between labor, management and shareholders is the quickest and most effective way to overcome industrial unrest. Most workers, whether in office or factory or plant, will agree and even those who turn towards costly strikes and labor mediation as a minority of cases will say that it is because they have been led to disbelieve in the activity and sincerity or even in the existence of the co-operation. Often they are mistaken in their belief and the problem is to bridge the gap by both deeds and words.

C. H. Carlisle can speak with more authority than most. He has been from the beginning in 1909 the chief agent in the starting and building up of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company. He has given several services to Canada Bread Company in the last three years, and in neither company has there been a strike nor any serious differences with labor in that time. In the case of the Canada Bread Company this is as apparent as it is in the case of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company. His explanation of his views as given elsewhere is worth reading by every industrialist, shareholder and worker.

A grand ball was held in the Armouries at 10 o'clock and some four hundred young people stayed to dance. Music for dancing at the best heard here in some time and was provided by the Trenz Bridge Pavilion orchestra.

Plans for the coming Community Club are as follows: President, N. F. Bristol; first vice-president, Don Wyrick; second vice-president, Dr. M. Walbridge; secretary, James Watson; treasurer, Harry Ellis; membership convener, Charlie Johnson; Recreation convener Quinn; Social convener, Geo. West; Advertising manager, Vaughan Jack.

Colorful Parade is Seen at Picton

Historical Scenes Depict One Hundred Years of Progress

Picton, July 3 — Thousands thronged Picton streets at ten o'clock this Friday morning to view the floats that depicted the one hundred years of Picton's progress. They were well worth seeing and a great deal of credit for their realism was due to the C.G.I.T. leaders who planned the scenes of special historical importance, and Reg. Abraham, who was the skilful make-up artist, and helped with the costumes.

The procession was led by Picton band, followed by the fire fire truck, next came the floats, decorated cars, and lastly and very much old-time horse-drawn vehicles, actually driven by old ladies and gentlemen in costume of long ago. The floats were as follows: 1 Truck load of baskets and beautiful flowers, Rockyer's greenhouse. 2 Mound Builders and their crude utensils, Blakely's hardware. 3 Kente Indians in the forest, Colborne Huff. 4 Sulpician Priests and their relations to the Indians at East Lake in 1809, Sr. Gregory's home. 5 Board of Police in early days, gentlemen in costume, Judge and Mrs. Ponton. 6 Stage Coach, Mrs. Gifford's Grocery. 7 Early Days in Cobourg Flour Mills, The Gazette and the Cobourg World. 8 Settlers were very attractive although Mrs. Bell of Belleville, made a short speech. Music during the evening was directed by Leslie Hearn, church organist.

Fatal Blast In Magazine

Explosion At Milton Plant Blamed On Intruder

Milton, Ont., July 3.—(CP)—An unknown man was so terribly mangled his body could not be identified and the dynamite magazine of the Gryson Lime and Slag Co. at the lime plant here was levelled to the ground in an explosion early today.

Five hundred pounds of dynamite stored in the magazine did not explode, the blast being limited to a few stocks.

Circumstances of the tragedy are still a mystery, but it is believed a transient attempted to break into the dynamite shed to steal a quantity of the explosive, a wrecking bar was found near the door, evidently pried from its hinges. A number of caps had been stolen from one of the ships and were discovered on the ground near the wall of the building.

The intruder was believed to have forced his way into the structure and either ignited or dropped several stocks of dynamite which exploded.

The Gypsum, Lime and Alabastine Company plant is located four miles south of Milton on Trafalgar. The shock was heard in the district, but no other damage was done other than to the magazine itself. Police are investigating in an effort to identify the dead man.

Fine Display On City Mart

Fruit And Vegetables Attract Large Crowd of Shoppers

Evidence of the bounty of the crops of the immediate area growers of Belleville and surrounding districts was amply furnished at the city market this morning when one of the most attractive displays of fruit and vegetables, farm and dairy produce seen at the local mart this year, attracted a large crowd of Saturday morning shoppers.

Homegrown strawberries, new potatoes making their initial appearance of the year, were featured also making their 1937 debut, in fact fruits of practically all kinds made an attractive display.

The strawberries which were of exceptional quality and quantity moved briskly at varying prices. The general price was ten cents per box berries were available at two boxes for twenty five cents, and in some cases three for the same price. Case lots were not quoted.

First...Raspberries Offered

Raspberries, the forerunners of a bumper crop, according to vendors were offered thirty and twenty five cents the box and were soon disposed of. Cherries made their 1937 bow in a fairly large quantity with the popular Richmond selling at prices ranging from ten cents the box to twenty cents for twenty five cents. Gooseberries of the small variety were plentiful moving fairly well at ten cents quart. Other fruits which were plentiful moving fairly well at the market were the early English varieties, Japanese plums, Imported peaches from the Peach State of Georgia were offered by several vendors, but the price was too Hamper lots were not available.

While the fruit display was one which stood out with its general attractiveness the exhibit of new vegetables ranked easily with the best ever seen on the city market. Delicious finger carrots; new blood-red beets which were outstanding both in size and quality, new peas and string beans headlined a splendid vegetable array which found a ready response in the purse strings of Saturday morning marketers.

New Potatoes

Forecast by several vendors as being the advance guard of one of the best crops in years, potatoes took a sharp decline in price today, with peck baskets being generally quoted at 50 cents. Some exceptionally good quality potatoes were offered at 60 cents with berry box quotations being 10 cents.

Meat and garden seas also took a decline in price as the quantity increased. Cabbage was offered at 5 cents in some quarters and quarts at 10 cents although in the latter hours vendors disposed of their stock at 5 cents the quart. New string beans were scarce and sold at 10 cents for the box. Asparagus at 15 cents the pound; beets, onions, carrots and lettuce at 5 cents; new cabbage at from 5 cents per head up; summer squash at 5 cents the bunch, radishes at 5 cents and three bulches for 10 cents and new cauliflower from 5 cents per head upward rounded out a splendid vegetable offering.

Eggs Higher.

The inside market was a hive of activity as shoppers took advantage of the fine exhibit of farm and dairy produce. Eggs showed a slight increase in price with "A" selects selling generally at prices from 22 cents to 25 cents the dozen. Medium were quoted at 20 and 21 cents.

Young broilers again dominated the chicken display selling at from 65 cents to 90 cents the pair. Young chickens and fowl sold from 50 cents each up. Farmers' butter remained steady with two pound rolls quoted at 55 cents, and in some cases a straight price of 30 cents the pound was asked. New honey made its appearance today selling at 30 cents the section.

While fish and fresh lake trout attracted the attention of fish lovers from within a radius of 100 miles northeast of Howland Island and after having overshot the tiny target on a number of occasions, the New Guinea

Cruiser to Rescue

A heavy smoke belched from the funnels of the gleaming white, 350 foot cutter Itasca, visible for nine miles from its Howland Island anchorage, as it ploughed forward on a smooth sea in quest of the 180,000 Bartlett flying laboratory.

While the cutter hunted by sea the woman who started a world flight "just for fun," a United States navy flying boat aped over the 1,800 mile distance from Honolulu.

Lieut. Commander Thomas Dyer joined the hunt from a position half way between here and Howland, where it had been stationed six give any possible aid to Miss Earhart on the next leg of her flight.

The flying boat itself undertook a hazardous night flight to join the search. Carrying a crew of eight, it took off from Pearl Harbor and headed directly for the spot of land which the veteran aviatrix and her navigator aimed.

Watch Night for Plane

Throughout the night, The Itasca, stationed at Howland originally to assist the aviatrix and Noonan, aboard the cutter within a 100 miles radius of the island, watching for distress flares.

In the glare of a rising sun, officers of the Itasca said, Miss Earhart apparently overshot the island a mere sand spit a mile and a half long and but two feet above the water, and was forced down a short time later.

George Palmer Putnam, husband of the missing flier, was in constant radio communication with the guard headquarters at San Francisco. He expressed the belief his wife and her companion would be found safe.

Basque Lifeboat Carried

The plane had a two-man rubber lifeboat, tubeella, flares, a signal kite and emergency food and water rations.

Miss Earhart first flew to Honolulu in March to start her equatorial globe flight record. A take-off accident caused her to return to the mainland and again start around the globe in the opposite direction, going from Oakland, Calif., her starting point, to Miami, Fla., in May.

Clock hops she passed San Juan, Puerto Rico, Dutch Guiana, and Natal, Brazil.

Natal Atlantic Check-up

At Natal her ship received a last-minute check-up before she and her navigator hopped eastward across the Atlantic for Dakar, French Senegal, 1,900 miles away on the West African coast.

It was not her first ocean hop. She was the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic and the first person—man or woman—twice to fly the ocean, making her other first flights was her solo from Honolulu to California: Jan. 11-12, 1935.

Lost Fliers Saved Before

New York, July 3 (CP)—Anxiety for the safety of Amelia Earhart and Captain Fred J. Noonan, missing in the lake states stages of their round-the-world flight, was lessened today by the recollection of other fliers who have circled the seas and lived.

Occupants of at least eight aircraft known to have ditched during flights have been rescued after forced landings at sea. In four cases the fliers had drifted for days before rescue from three to nine days.

Miss Earhart's Parents Dramatic

Perhaps the most dramatic rescue was that of Commander Allen S. Rodgers and four United States Navy fliers who drifted for nine days after they were forced down in the Pacific in December, 1926, just 1,000 miles short of Hawaii, their goal on a hop from San Pablo Bay. A submarine located and rescued the crew.

On a flight now recorded as the "first failure" of trans-Atlantic air history, Walter Wellman, newspaperman, and his crew were rescued by a steamer in October, 1910, after their non-rigid dirigible "America" was forced down about 800 miles off Cape Hatteras in an attempt to fly from Atlantic City to Ireland.

HOW PASSENGERS, CREW AND CARGO WILL BE CARRIED IN TRANSATLANTIC FLYING BOATS

This sectional diagram shows clearly the disposition of the crew, passengers and cargo in the new 30-ton flying boats built for Imperial Airways of Great Britain which will soon begin survey flights with a view to opening a transatlantic commercial air route between Ireland and Newfoundland.

Earhart is Forced Down

and disappeared. Nothing more since then.

The Achilles' message said the radio was heard on 3105 kilocycles, which is the frequency assigned to Howland Island for night communication.

Miss Earhart was generally believed to have come down in charted waters somewhere within a radius of 100 miles northeast of Howland Island after having overshot the tiny target on a number of occasions.

PICTON'S CENTENNIAL

Picton, the county town of Prince Edward, is celebrating its centennial of existence as an incorporated municipality. Set in a county of unusual attraction and one in which the rural life plays the greatest part, Picton and its surrounding county have always shown a unity of spirit and today the celebration accordingly takes the nature of not only the county town's centennial but also as a county fete, for Picton is a vital part of that county.

The celebration has taken the form of a reunion, the best form of program, because of the kindred ties which have always knit the families of the town and county. No county and town possess more the spirit of the family than Picton and Prince Edward County.

From far and near have come old-timers to join in the celebration and to meet old friends.

The town has given itself over to the returned folks and its other guests. The county has taken no small part in the planning and in the performance. The spirit of welcome has travelled far beyond the bounds of the scene of the ceremonies which have taken on much of the spirit of a district function because the entire surrounding district feels a pride in the birthday rites of the town of Picton, Belleville, as the nearest city, one, which has its roots in the same stock as that which founded Prince Edward County and with which it is indelibly linked by the ties of blood and friendship and similarity of aims takes deep interest in the events of these days and greets Picton on this occasion and wishes it every prosperity and hopes that its record of happy homes, prosperous families and developing industries may ever continue.

It is one hundred and fifty-four years ago since the first of the pioneers, the United Empire Loyalists came into what is now Prince Edward County. Here they hewed out homes and laid the foundations of that civilization and culture which are the guiding principles of the life of this district today. The names of these pioneers are perpetuated throughout this part of Ontario and are still borne by their descendants in Prince Edward. Hence it is not to be wondered at that the people generally wish to pay tribute on this occasion.

What these pioneers have accomplished is difficult to the comfortable age of today to understand for modern life differs so greatly from the primitive conditions under which a pioneer has to live, making largely his own tools and furniture as well as his home, hewing out the glades from among the forests, and travelling through paths which he has had to cut or make, or making his way down the well-known waters of the Reach and the Bay of Quinte to other places of settlement. Picton was settled early as might be expected from a place which has grown to the importance of a county seat and which has so centred the interests of the county.

It was in 1837 that Picton's residents sought incorporation. The civilization was long underway by that time, and since that year progress has been steady. Indeed these parts of Ontario are linked with earliest annals of Canada. The great Samuel de Champlain in his map of 1612 referred to what is now Prince Edward County and there was indicated here an attempt to delineate the Bay of Quinte. Champlain was the first to navigate the Trent River and the Bay, and Prince Edward County was the site of bitter struggles between the Iroquois and Hurons. In a thesis prepared by Miss Rosa E. Eaton on the County, it is pointed out that after the destruction of the Huron missions, a band of Cayugas crossed Lake Ontario and settled in Prince Edward County. Their villages were of the Kentes. Sulpician missions were established. Sieur de la Salle himself in 1669 visited the county and was granted a seigniory including Amherst Island. After this the fur-trading interest predominated and so Prince Edward remained covered with primeval forest for a century and the chief quarters after the days of Champlain. The coming of the Loyalists began the era of development, results of which are to be seen today on every hand.

With this historic past it is no wonder that Picton and Prince Edward people take pride in their home, their town and countryside and look to a still greater future.

A state to prosper, must be built on foundations of a moral character; and this character is the principal element of its strength and the only guaranty of its permanence and prosperity.—J. Currie.

The press is not only free, it is powerful. That power is ours. It is the proudest that man can enjoy. It was not granted by monarchs; it was not gained for us by aristocracies; but it sprang from the people and with an immortal instinct, it has always worked for the people.—Disraeli.

A WELCOME TO SUMMER

A welcome to the summer breezes blowing
A welcome to the blooming of the rose,
The winter winds we grieve not for their going
To a far land that summer never knows.

The summer trees their shadows deep are flinging
Along the shore where wavelets laugh and play,
The bob-o-link his gayest song is singing,
The robin trills a merry roundelay.

Dear summer days! the welkin now is ringing
With all the joy and glamor of the past,
And in my heart a vision it is bringing
Of life and love that will forever last.

Could I have known that summer days are fleeting,
That summer's fervid joys so soon are past,
I would have stilled my heart throb's beating
And held life's summer joys secure and fast.

But even now the memory I cherish
Of summer days, when we walked hand in hand,
One mind, one heart—all other aims to perish—
Enchainment reigned o'er our fair summer land.

—Helen B. Anderson.

EMIL LUDWIG, WHO WROTE A LIFE of Napoleon, has arrived in Washington to write the life of President Franklyn Roosevelt. He said that just as he had written a life of Napoleon without "battles", he intended to write a biography of Franklin Roosevelt without "taxes". Said he, "It is difficult to write about such a great character who is leading silent revolution. He is the most loved and most hated man in the United States. It will be the most dangerous book I have ever written." Life of a person quite a jar to learn that such a wonderful writer as Emil Ludwig will try and fit President Roosevelt into type, while still alive. Napoleon should been dead long enough to gain a halo of sorts and make good writing material, but to write a biography of Franklin Roosevelt while still alive, and while the years have passed the ultimate test of time, looks like erecting a monument to a man, with the record of his great deeds, before he has passed into the shadows where Death hides his heroes.

"PORK" FOR THE CONSTITUENCIES of Congressmen is sought at Washington from the one billion and a half relief estimate for 1938, and a great scramble is on in consequence. Each Congressman wants to garner in as much as possible of the relief expenditure for his constituency, while President Roosevelt wishes to deal with the disposition of this immense sum on a higher national plane that the greatest good for the greatest number. The Congressman from Bohunk, being a professional politician, whose horizon is bounded by the Four Corners and the line of the next constituency can not see anything nationally, with his eyes blinded with the vision of much money passing through his hands in patronage to "repair fences" for the next election.

EVEN CHARLES LAUGHTON, English film actor, remembered for his fine portrayal of Henry VIII, in "The Private Life of Henry VIII," has been caught in the net of Uncle Samuel in regard to income taxes. Uncle Sam says Laughton should have paid a lot more than he did on his Hollywood earnings, while Laughton remembers that it is all such a beastly bore, don'tchaknow. Laughton has an English holding company to which his Hollywood earnings of $195,000 for 1935 were assigned, and also his 1936 earnings. He is paid $20,000 a year out of the funds of the holding company and Uncle Sam wants to know what, why and wherefore. Holding companies have become quite popular among the millionaires of the land of Uncle Sam, and the same are organized in Canada, the Bahamas, England, and any old place but the good old U.S.A. where they made their dough.

School has now closed and the pupils are enjoying holidays.

A very large crowd assembled on Monday evening in the S.S. rooms to bid farewell to Miss Mae Miss Evelyn McAnroy before her departure from our midst. Mr. Arthur Gough acted in capacity of chairman and a splendid programme of musical numbers, readings, instrumentals and readings were very much enjoyed and a purse made some very complimentary remarks upon the good work and willing assistance of Miss McAnroy. During the evening Miss McAnroy was called to the front and the following address was read by Miss Doris Dafoe, and some very dainty gifts consisting of linen, silver and cut glass were presented by Misses Mary Ainsworth, Dafoe and others.

Following is the address.

Miss McAnroy:

We gathered here are anxious to have a part in tonight's gathering. We are sorry to see you leave us for you, whom we respect and love. We know we have given you many worries, but we hope many happy things that we should not have done, but we want you to understan that the mistakes in our attitude toward you have been of the head and not of the heart.

We could, if we would, have learned more about you and your hobby than those found in our text books. Knowledge of your kindly and pleasant manner, your cheerful smile and greeting will long remain with us, and we hope we may profit by the kindly criticisms which you were good enough to give from time to time. We believe we shall make better men and women having been taught by you for four years. We are truly glad for the happiness in store for you and we ask you to accept these gifts as a testimony of our affection for you. Our sincere wish is that much joy and happiness may come to you in your new home.

Miss McInroy replied very nicely and thanked her pupils for their kindly remembrances and assured them she would retain with interest their promotion in school.

Mrs. Wm. Hodgen then gave the following address and Messrs A. Gough and S. Sherry made the presentation of a large solid walnut dinner wagon:

Dear Miss McInroy:

It is with the spirit of friendship and good will mingled with pleasure and regret that the residents of Foxboro and community have assembled to spend a social time together. It gave us pleasure when we learned of the important step which you are soon to take and one and all, we wish you every happiness and success and we feel that your home will not be just a house.

For a house is built of bricks and stones,
Of sills, and posts and spars.—
But a home is built of loving deeds
That last a thousand years.

With these thoughts still in mind it is with regret that we shall lose you from our community as your pleasant, genial manner has endeared you to all, and your kindly assistance given so willingly at all times has been greatly appreciated. Your services were a great help in the League and in the Christmas entertainments where your work in the training of the younger scholars was witnessed and in the public school where you have given unstintingly of your time and talents, not only to improve the minds of the pupils but the moral condition but of still greater importance, in their spiritual welfare, for who can measure the untold effects of the influence of a Christian teacher over pupils with whom the hours and days of the week are continually associated. We feel sure that you will imitate the teacher and as the years roll by we feel that you will see the result of such noble work. We are also pleased that you have chosen as your partner in life one of our own boys as Mac-Lean's home has always been one in our community. He was ever willing to assist in the work of his church and a good sport on the ball field, and as a slight token of four associations you have had with the people of Foxboro.

Signed on behalf of the community:

Mrs. Arthur Wall.
Mrs. Stanley Sherry.
Mrs. Arthur Gough
Mrs. Floyd Bartlett.
Mrs. Wm. Hodgen
Mr. Arthur Gough
Mr. Stanley Sherry

Miss McInroy then replied, thanking all for their kindness to her and also for the beautiful gifts which she assured them were greatly appreciated. For she's a jolly good fellow" was heartily sung and after singing the National Anthem a bunch of sandwiches, cakes, tarts, and coffee was served and the people dispersed to their several homes.

Farewell Tea Miss Dayman

On Friday evening a large number of the school section gathered at Wellman's school to tender a farewell party to their teacher Miss Grace Dayman who has taught for the past six years in that school. Mr. John Reagle was chairman and the pupils rendered two selections, Miss Watson sang a vocal number. Brief addresses were given by Mrs. Carman Nic. Messrs. Roy Dayman, Victor Dayman, Mervin Watson, Elward Todd and Carl Wellman. A couple of community singing were also enjoyed.

Miss Alma Johnson read an appreciative address on behalf of fifth class pupils and Miss Lois Dayman presented Miss Dayman with a silver butter dish and knife.

Mrs. Lindsay Pollock read an address on behalf of the school section and Miss Dorothy Hinds made the presentation of a leather serpentine.

Miss Dayman graciously replied to both addresses thanking her pupils for the kindly remembrance.

At the close an appetizing lunch and coffee was served and all enjoyed a social half hour with the teacher before her departure to her home in Colborne.

The address follows:

S. S. No. 8 Wellman's.
Dear Miss Dayman:

We have come to the school-house tonight to express our gratitude to you, our teacher who during the six years in the section have served faithfully and endeavored yourself to all.

As pupils we love and respect you, as ratepayers we thank you for the care and beautifying of the school property as well as your principle of good citizenship given to our young people.

As a community we have enjoyed your company in our homes and appreciate the time and talent you have given so freely to our social life.

As parents we remember the cuts bandaged, the "tummy aches" doctor'd, the care of physical and moral health as well as mental. Briefly in addition to capably teaching the three "R's", you have upheld the high ideal of one of the noblest professions and you may truly take your place as one of the wise builders.

A builder builded a temple,
He wrought it with grace and skill
Pillars and doors and lofty spire
All fashioned to work his will.

And men said as they saw its beauty
It shall never know decay,
Great is thy skill, oh builder,
Thy fame shall endure always.

A teacher builded a temple
With loving and infinite care,
Planning each arch with patience
Laying each stone with prayer.

None prized the unceasing efforts
None knew of the wondrous plan
For the temple the teacher builded
Was unseen by the eye of man.

Gone is the builder's temple,
Crumbled into the dust,
Solace each stately pillar,
Food for countless rust!

But the temple the teacher builded
Will last while the ages roll;
For that beautiful unseen temple
Was a child's immortal soul.

—Signed on behalf of S.S. No. 8.

To you Irene, we extend a cordial welcome to our community, our social life and to our church. And now may we offer you Edgar Guest's advice to a bride:

The Bride

Little Lady at the altar,
Vowing by God's book and psalter
Unto him who stands by you;
Thinking not of wedding gifts paid,
That youth's curtain has descended
And love's pretty play is done
But of the vows you've made.

Marriage, blushing little lady,
Is loves sunny path and shady,
Where you'll walk beside your wedded man
Or at other, greeting former
As you stroll to each tomorrow
You will come to joy and sorrow;
Will have babies to fret you,
Read the troubled book of life.

Bitter cares will some day find
Closer, closer, they will bind you,
If together you will bear them,
Sharing each the grief that's there them.

Love unites two happy mortals,
Brings them here to wedlock's portals
And then blithely bids them go
Arm in arm, through weal and woe.

Little lady at the altar
Never let your courage falter,
Never stoop to unbelieving
Even when your heart is grieving
Pray for wisdom, trust in God
Of disaster — stand together
Through life's fearful hours of night
Love shall bring you to the light.

—Signed.

May God guide you thro' the sunshine and shadows of life's checkered pathway.

We ask you as a slight token of our love and good will, to accept these gifts and may their use remind you of the friends gathered on behalf of Salem community.

END OF 3,581-MILE BIKE RIDE TO JAMBOREE

Philip La Fortune and Arthur Freeman, boy scouts of Victoria, British Columbia, are pictured on their arrival in Washington, D. C., at the end of their 3,581-mile bicycle ride from their homes. They bore, started their long trek to the ident Roosevelt, international scout Jamboree on April 22, when they crossed Puget Sound from Victoria to Seattle on a ferry. They carried a letter of good-will from Premier T. D. Pattullo, of British Columbia, to President.

PICKET CRITICALLY INJURED BY GAS BOMB

George Mike, of Aliquippa, Pa., a C.I.O. picket, is shown lying on the ground critically injured after being hit in the face by a tear bomb allegedly fired by a deputy sheriff as nearly 40 pickets engaged in fist fights and threw stones at non-strikers who attempted to enter the plant of the Moltrup Steel Products Co. at Beaver Falls, Pa. At the hospital he was said to have a fractured skull and was not expected to live.

Radio over Weekend

Radio over the week-end offers some programs of particular interest to listeners. Sport lovers will listen-in Saturday at 7.45 D.S.T. (6.45 Belleville Time) to Clem McCarthy describing the opening of the new Del Mar race track near San Diego, California, and the running of the San Diego Handicap. Movie fans will be interested in the fortunes of Bing Crosby's string of thoroughbreds from which he expects great things at Del Mar. Bob Burns says that Bing should go down to the track Sunday to see his hopes finish the races they start Saturday. WEAF, WGY, WHEN, etc., red network.

Golfers, Band at 8.30 (7.30 Belleville time), at Prospect Park, Brooklyn, will please music lovers, one of the best bands in the world, it is said. WJZ, WHAM, etc., blue network.

At 11 o'clock (10 o'clock Belleville time) there will be broadcast an Indian Pow-wow at Flagstaff, Arizona, which should be interesting, with 7,000 Hopi Indians taking part, besides Comanches, Navajo and other tribes. Warwhoops, 'n' everything!

Sunday at 3 o'clock (2 o'clock Belleville time), the Magic Key of RCA offers an exceptionally interesting program with Irv. Cobb a headliner, and John B. Kennedy, editor of Collier's, describing the Boy Scout Jamboree at Washington, a very Front Page affair. Other entertaining numbers are listed on this program which is broadcast over CBOT and a blue network.

Don't forget W. C. Fields at eight o'clock (seven o'clock Belleville time) especially as Jack Benny is off the air. Bill and Charlie McCarthy will tangle again and Charlie promises to 'mow Bill down' while Bill threatens to reduce

Cubs and Giants Trying Hard To Be on Top of Loop July 4; Yankees Can't Be Dislodged

Team In That Position Will Likely Win National Crown

YANKEES SAFE

Murderers' Row Breezing Along With Four Game Lead

(By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer)

Although they're nearly a 1,000 miles apart and haven't even seen each other in almost two weeks, Chicago's circling Cubs and New York's just — tough, Giants are swinging at anything and everything in sight to be on top of the National League in time for the United States July 4 holiday and the big league baseball deadline.

Tradition has it that the outfit at the head of the parade July 4 will be in the same spot when all the chips are counted on the closing day.

In the American League this year, only the end of the world or their own skeletons can keep the Yankees out of the driver's seat for the mythical mid-season mark. Hopped to a 8-3 setback at the hands of Washington's Senators yesterday, murderers' row is still breezing along on a four-game lead, clinching the July 4 "championship."

(Cubs Holding On)

But over in the National League the Cubs are holding the reins by a measly half-game lead on the Giants.

After galloping over the Cincinnati Reds, 10-1, behind Lon Warneke's six-hit pitching, the Cubs opened against Philadelphia Friday with a twi-night bill. Then they'll be idle until they resume their league lead with an 8:30 p.m. (C.S.T.) date with the Phillies.

Giants downed Boston's somewhat punchless Bees 4-3. Carl Hubbell turned in a seven-hitter and fanned seven others.

That Yankee defeat didn't change the American League standings since the second place Chicago White Sox also were lashing out on the 'Nats, before Jim Walkup's six-hit shutout. The Sox were stymied and dropped a 4-3 verdict to the Browns.

Boston's Red Sox found Philadelphia Athletics a cinch and came through 8-4 in their series opener. Brooklyn Dodgers' rookie John Hamlin fanned seven batters with seven hits for a 3-0 win.

Cold weather caused the Tigers—Indians get-together, and the Cardinals and Reds weren't scheduled.

ATLEY DONALD SHOWING BOYS

Newark Hurler Wins Twelfth In Four Without a Loss

(By the Associated Press)

They're tagging Atley Donald with the nickname, "Stonewall," around the International League clubhouse since his slender Newark righthander is out to prove his perfect record isn't just pure luck.

It's hard to reconcile the fact that a pitcher with a record of nine and one wants to go out and show the boys. But that's the position Donald is in at present.

He had another fine performance up his sleeve last night as he halted Syracuse Chiefs with four hits at Bears ws 5-3 for their sixth in a row.

Defeat dropped the fourth place Chiefs a full game astern of second place Montreal Royals, who defeated Rochester 7-3, and a half-game behind the idle Buffalo Bisons.

The Bisons were rained out at Toronto and Jersey City and Baltimore were not scheduled.

Yesterday's Stars

(By the Associated Press)

Augie Galan, Cubs — had ninth inning homer with mate on base beat Pirates 6-5.

Ed Linke, Senators — pitched hitless ball in three inning relief trick as Nats defeated A's 8-3.

Carl Hubbell, Giants — fanned seven and allowed seven hits to whip Bees 4-2.

Jim Walkup, Browns — defeated White Sox 4-3 with six hits.

Lefty Hamlin, Dodgers — blanked Phillies 3-0 with seven hits fanning five.

Ben Chapman, Red Sox — hit homer with two aboard and two singles in 8-4 win over Athletics.

Holiday games didn't affect the standing, Oshawa and Kingston in their proper stride winning from Peterborough and Napanee.

It's getting to be quite the custom in the "Central Ontario" for the losing team to outhit the winners. Napanee proudly have the best record in this respect.

Last year the southpaw starlet Speed Riddle were the talk of the league, but now righthanders are attracting the attention, particularly Jamieson of the Ponies, Turner of Oshawa and Russ Kitchen, Peterborough.

Oshawa established some kind of a record a week ago when they collected 19 hits and left 16 men stranded on the paths.

The home and home "umps" system does seem to be working any too smoothly and it wouldn't surprise to see neutral arbiters being used next year.

Art Scarlett, Gibbard's fleet outfielder, won the base-running contest and the bunt and run to first at the Peterborough Field Day.

Kingston will be all set to take on the Cgdensburg Can-Am team in a charity game last Monday but rain interfered. Half the proceeds are to go to the Wing-Standard Santa Claus fund.

Eddie Starr, Peterborough pepperbox pitcher is in bad of the play due to a fractured little finger, hurt during practice.

There's nothing fishy about Tommy Saunders' pitching at Napanee. Four are complete games and one in a relief role.

Ponies are scheduled to play their postponed game of June 5 in Oshawa today.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

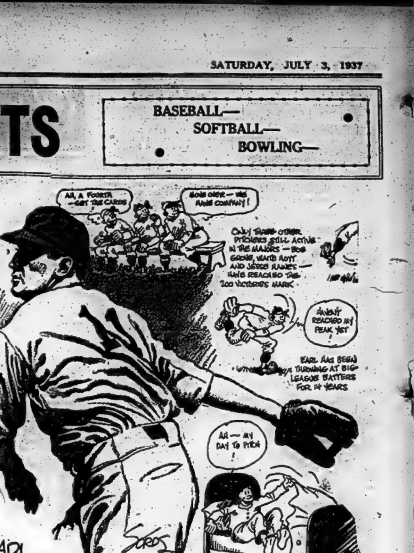
Ken J. Colling

Owing to the holiday last night's Central Ontario Lacrosse fixture, Oshawa versus the Belleville Flying Rovers, was indefinitely postponed. "We were afraid to take a chance directly on the heels of the big doings of Dominion Day, but next Tuesday we have a real treat for the fans. The group leadership will be at stake with the Peterboro Auburns as our opponents in the Trenton Arena," stated President Gord Delaney of the Flying-Rovers today. The Peterboro squad has not lost a game this year, rolling over their opponents with proverbial steam roller effect, but the Rovers expect to be at full strength for Tuesday night's tilt. The absence of their scoring ace, Joe Gould, was keenly felt at Oshawa, but it is hoped the aged veteran will be out for the Peterboro tilt. Incidentally free transportation will be provided lacrosse patrons wishing to attend the Peterboro game, tracks leaving the "Y" at 7.16 p.m. that evening.

Unofficially the two local playgrounds, sponsored by the Belleville Kiwanis Club, are vying for the kiddies of Belleville lead, night, but the big official inaugural will take place on Tuesday evening with pomp and ceremony festivities, His Worship Mayor Arnott, attending the official opening duties. There will be free ice cream, soft drinks and goodies for the kiddies. The work being done by the local Kiwanis Club in the matter of providing clean, wholesome recreation for the children of Belleville is most commendable and indulging our privileged children out into the sunlight is only one of the many great accomplishments of the Kiwanians. Whenever the stamp of the circled 'K' appears on any civic project the citizens can rest assured that particular venture is believed to be for the general uplift of or interest of the community.

Another asset to this community was the Kinsmen's annual Kid Kar Derby, a project that makes better potential citizens, as the entire idea is to have the boys create something in their minds and then put the same into practice. We understand the financial end of the Derby was most disparaging, however.

Johnnie Bawden, ace roundsman of the Gorbie Locks, and who hurled the Percival Store nine into a provincial softball championship in 1936 may be out of the game for at least a month. Johnnie is reported to have sprained his back while lifting a sled rail at the C.N.R. yesterday. If the injury is as bad as first reported, Bawden will not get back into the softball business until the play-offs roll around.



The application for affiliation of the Canniffon Baseball Club, in the South Hastings League, was officially received and accepted by the O.B.A.A. today. The Canniffon club will be handed a bye into the intermediate O. B. A. A. playdowns in the fall series. It is understood that the Rush-Rogers-Sherry-Sarrett aggregation may use the Foxboro diamond for their home grounds in the O.B.A.A. as the ruling is not as necessary under the provincial rulings.

For the second year in succession Ted Hinchey's Allegro won the "E" class open sailing race in connection with the Picton Yacht Club Dominion Day regatta. Unfortunately the Allegro was excluded in the "A" class results yesterday, but Ted's craft had defeated them several times by scores and a classy craft at that. All Mr. Hinchey has to do in 1938 is to win the class and the Picton trophy is his under sailing conditions, for the "A" class. Maurice Callaghan's After You was the victor over Leska Dimitry Joks, but only after the most torrid sailing seen in the Bay of Quinte waters in many years. It was the first time the After You 3rd had ever fully exercised power. Harry Sennark's Alaska having proved herself a real "dog" on previous. Incidentally it was Sennark's Alaska that broke his rudder post in the Victoria Day Thursday's race. The local pearl fishers and beachcombers in fact waiters next Wednesday, but we still are in favour of that Sunday sailing idea.

Unable to field nine qualified players Saturday the last night's Senior football tilt being defaulted, the Percival Store nine being forced to concede the night's honory to the league leading Corbins without a struggle. It is to be hoped players sign with the various clubs and then, just because their team is not winning, they fail to put in an appearance for scheduled games, thereby disrupting the league play. The individual players should bear in mind that the league will only cancel win every game, there must be a loser to create a winner. It's not so much in who wins the game, but the manner in which the contest is conducted and the spirit of sportsmanship that ensues. In order to give the patrons of softball present some amusement an exhibition game was played at Gilmour's Flats last night, but spectators failing to see a popular and regular league fixtures. A highly important game is on the books for Tuesday evening when Bell-Sargent and the Belleville Stargents will be at full strength, as both need the victory.

Twig Woodley's Kiwanis Juniors stepped into Canniffon and held the South Hastings League leaders to a one-all tie, out-hitting homesters three to two. The local boys played errorless ball and gave Lefty Weeks good support. Incidentally Weeks gained a moral victory over the veteran Ernie Smith, the former allowing only two safeties to the Kiwanis Juniors, the latter a trio of bingles. The local Juniors were scheduled to play this out and by the time they strike the provincial junior play-downs should be tough medicine for the conventional opposition.

KIWANIANS HOLD CANNIFTON EVEN

Weeks and Smith Engage In Smart Hurling Duel At Canniffon

Canniffon, July 3 (Special) — It was pitchers' night at Canniffon last evening when the Belleville Kiwanis Juniors battled the Canniffon "Stargers" to a one-all tie in a South Hastings League fixture when Lefty Weeks, the Belleville Junior moundsman gained a moral victory over the elongated Ernie Smith, former C. O. B. L. fire-ball hurler now pitching for Canniffon. Weeks limited the "Shaggers" to two hits, while Smith gave a superb ride for the Canniffon nine, but by Darrell Harry Blakely, former Belleville National star, at the Fair Grounds on Wednesday evening next.

EVERGREEN PURSE TO MISS COG

(By the Canadian Press)

Finding no sogey turf to her liking, Miss Cog, J. Waterman's colorbearer, ran away with the Evergreen purse, headline attraction at Hamilton race track yesterday. The daughter of Bostonian—one of his team's hits with Frank O'Neill and Stan Amo collecting the only other safeties counted by the Hookers, who left in the initial frame giving the Kiwanis kids their lone tally. Weeks and Jarrell were the only two to hit safely for Canniffon.

Score In First.

Belleville scored three lone tally in the first inning, Ronsky was safe on an error and advanced on Collins' infield out to score on Amo's subsequent safety. Canniffon scored almost in the identical same manner in the third, D. Sharpe being the man to cross the plate. Weeks was in fine fettle, only three Canniffon batters reaching first base and only Sharpe passing second. The Cook-Woodley aggregation got men aboard the runways in every frame, except the third, to have the left stranded. The Belleville juniors entertain the Foxboro nine led by Dr. Harry Blakely, former Belleville National star, at the Fair Grounds on Wednesday evening next.

Kiwanis Juniors—Ronsky 3b, Cole 2b, Wilson c, Ann cf, Weeks p, O'Neill 1b, McQuade ss, Carson rf, Flemmey lf.

Canniffon—L. Jarrell, Smith, K. Jarrell, Empson, Bleckman, Cole, Meeks, Rush, Sharpe and Simpson.

Score by innings:

Kiwanis Juniors	100 000—1	3
Canniffon	001 000—1	2

Baby Mine took the track at the rise of the barrier and coasted in four lengths in the van of Tea Jester. Dr. Lindsay Crossin took the mixed award. Miss Cog ran the mile and 1-16th in 1:57 2-5 and paid $7.80 for two.

Staghie Gallagher's Langstaff came from far back in the stretch to obtain a neck decision over Isaac Gaisty in the fifth event. The favored Calico Miss was just also other neck back in third position. Langstaff was knocked to the wagering and returned $14.75 mutuel. Jockey E. McDougall drove the winner over the six furlongs in 1:15 3-5.

Justa Jane hung up her second victory of the meet when she trounced six rivals in the six furlong second race. The mare was given a superb ride by H. Gehrig to beat out Dixie Princess, the favorite, by one length. Justa Jane also was passed up by the talent and returned $20.15 for a $2 straight wager.

The St. Lambert purse, feature attraction at the Blue Bonnets race track in Montreal, went to Ponsonby Peter. The Urbana Lane stable's representative closed with a rush in the last 70 yards and passed Colonel Arlie just before the finish. Tappanagh was third. It was Peter's third victory of the year, the Urbana Lane outfit accounted for a "double" when Colonel Arlie returned winner of the third event.

In Winnipeg today H. C. Hatch will try for his second successive victory in the $12,000 Manitoba Derby. The double-bloo was carried to victory by Sweepdan last year and Goldiure, winner of the King's Plate last May, has been made favorite to the extent that the Manitoba Jockey Club has ruled no Evergreen purse, headline attraction at Hamilton race track yesterday. Holiday Bride

by ANN DEMAREST

At the first drop store Jeanne came to she went to the telephone booth and called Bartlett. What he would think of Cilly's and her escapade she did not know. She could only hope that he wouldn't hold it against his secretary for failing to keep a dinner engagement. And she was relieved when he laughed and said it sounded like Cilly to plan such a thing.

"I'll see you in the morning, Miss MacDonald."

INSTALMENT 15

Jeanne did not see Cilly the next day until she was having lunch in the breakfast room. Patsy had told her that Miss Cecile had gotten home very late the night before. When Cilly strolled in, wearing velvet lounging pajamas and tiny high-heeled Turkish mules, she flung herself down in the chair across the table from Jeanne looking as though she had little sleep over the week-end. There were purple shadows under her brown eyes and her mouth had a tired, sullen droop.

"Has Aunt Cecile gone?" she asked apathetically.

"She was leaving this morning at nine," Jeanne told her. "Did you enjoy the week-end?"

Cilly frowned. "No," she said sharply. "Why did you tell Lance Larkin where I'd gone?"

Jeanne stared at her, taken aback. "He called for you . . ."

"So you had to give it away that I was at Debs Lord's house party," Cilly said bitterly.

Jeanne was hurt. "I didn't realize it was a secret."

"Oh it wasn't exactly a secret, Cilly said petulantly, "but Lance doesn't approve of Debs and uninvited he drove up for me yesterday. It was simply furious. He spoiled the whole day and then insisted on driving me back to New York last night, and I wasn't planning to come home until today. After this I wish you would say nothing to my friends when they call."

There were two spots of color on Jeanne's cheeks as she faced Cilly. Anger made her reckless.

"As far as I am concerned, Miss Bartlett, I much prefer to have nothing to do with your friends or you, either. I'm sorry I was hired to be your brother's secretary."

Cilly looked at her blankly. "Cilly said, 'I'm just upset. Lance makes me wild. He follows me around like a governess."

Jeanne looked at the girl with compassionate dislike. There was nothing attractive about Cilly Bartlett now. She looked like a spoiled bad-tempered child.

Jeanne took the small jewelers box out of her pocket. "Your aunt gave me this. I didn't want to take it but she insisted. Of course it is for you."

She held out the box to Cilly who snatched it from her impatiently. When she opened it she gave Jeanne strangely.

"She gave this to you!" she said, examining the diamond and sapphire ring. "There was an unpleasant memory for you, Jeanne."

Jeanne nodded.

Cilly laughed coldly. "Well, you must have made a good impression on her. What else did she give you?"

"Nothing."

Cilly's eyes narrowed. "Are you sure?"

Again Jeanne's cheeks flamed. "She bought my dinner two evenings, Miss Bartlett. Yesterday afternoon we had tea at her hotel. Aside from its the ring, there was nothing else . . ."

"Well," Cilly said. "I'm glad you played up to her. It's rather an attractive ring."

Jeanne got up quickly. She knew if she stayed another minute she would be quarreling with Cilly. In such a mood, the girl was better left alone.

Gordon Bartlett eyed Jeanne's flushed cheeks and disturbed eyes curiously when she returned to the library.

"Has anything happened Miss MacDonald?"

And to Jeanne's intense horror she found herself crying.

"It's nothing, really, Mr. Bartlett. I'm just a bit upset."

"I know you well enough by now to realize that you aren't crying without good reason. What is the matter? Is it Cilly?"

Jeanne shook her head without answering.

"It is Cilly," he said. "What has she been up to?"

"It makes me sick about it, Mr. Bartlett. And if you don't mind, I'll finish my work today and then I think you'd better find another secretary."

Gordon Bartlett rose from his desk. "I'll be back in a minute," he said in a manner which was he left the library.

When he returned a few minutes later he walked over to Jeanne's chair. "We'll have no more of this leaving. Miss MacDonald, I spoke to Cecile. It is all her fault. I'm very much ashamed of her, particularly after all you did for her when her aunt was in town. I hope you can forget it. In the future you need have no more to do with my sister. I won't have you leave. You are an excellent secretary."

"I still think it would be better if I left, Mr. Bartlett," Jeanne said looking up at him. "You see this first day I came here we had some trouble." And Jeanne told him about Cilly's objecting when Lance Larkin talked with her when she came to apply for the job.

"You poor child," Mr. Bartlett said after she finished. "You have certainly had a difficult time in this house. We will try to see from now on that there is no more unpleasantness."

"You're very kind, Mr. Bartlett."

He patted her on the shoulder. "Then you will stay. I'll appreciate it very much if you do this for me."

Jeanne nodded but she was still uncertain if her decision were wise.

Gordon Bartlett apparently had some influence with his sister. The next few days at the apartment were quiet and Jeanne had no more trouble with Cilly. She rarely saw her and when they did meet Cilly greeted her civilly. Jeanne thought with relief that perhaps some of her troubles were over now. The days passed easily enough and it was only when she went home to her small room that she found unhappiness hard to fight. Night after night she sat huddled in a chair, sleepless and aching with loneliness.

"If I only knew", she cried over and over to herself, "if I only knew why Bryan ended it this way—without any real explanation."

And then one morning on her way to work she met Mark. He had not called or tried to get in touch with her after writing the insulting note, and Jeanne had hoped she would never have to see him again.

"Hello, Jeanne," he said.

Jeanne thought he was eyeing her strangely but before she could answer him he went on, "I want to apologize for the note I wrote. I guess I just lost my head when I found you were at the Bartletts' penthouse."

"You might have given me a chance to explain, Mark," Jeanne said wearily.

"I know. Honestly, I am sorry, Jeanne. Look here haven't you time for a cup of coffee with me? I want to talk to you."

Jeanne glanced at her watch. "All right. I can spare about ten minutes."

He led her into a small coffee shop down the street and when they were seated at a table he bent forward earnestly and took her hand. "Why don't you marry me?"

Jeanne stared at him in amazement. She drew back her hand. "I know you're not in love with me, honey, but I'd do everything I could to make you happy, to help you forget . . ." He hesitated.

"To forget Bryan." Jeanne forced herself to say his name casually. "What do you know about Bryan and me, Mark? I've never told you anything."

"I know," he admitted, "but I was sure something was wrong, and I ran into Sandra one day and she said you weren't seeing him any more."

Sandra! Jeanne echoed the name bitterly and then she looked up at Mark. "I can't marry you. It wouldn't be fair. I'm not in love with you."

"I'm willing to take a chance on that," he said, bending forward to take her pale slim hand again.

Jeanne sat back in her chair. Mark's attitude puzzled her.

For a moment he was silent. "It is Bryan Patterson who is making you so unhappy now, isn't it?"

Jeanne lowered her eyes and nodded.

"I see." He reached over and patted her hand.

And again Jeanne felt that Mark was acting strangely. He had never been so gentle with her since that first night when Bryan went away.

"I have something to tell you, Jeanne," he said in a strained voice.

Then they walked out of the restaurant together she said, "Don't bother to walk up the avenue with me. It's too cold, and it's time for you to be at the office, isn't he?"

"I'm looking around for a new job," he said carelessly. "I told those guys where to get off the other day. Couldn't stand it any more."

Jeanne stared at him. "Mark, did you lose your job?"

He avoided her eyes. "Hot quit. I wasn't getting anywhere with that outfit."

Why had he asked her again to marry him, Jeanne wondered, when he was out of work. He knew as well as she that new jobs were hard to find. His whole attitude had been strange since she met him that morning.

"I must go now, Mark" she told him hastily, "I hope you find a good job."

"Thanks. I'll call you one of these evenings. Will you have dinner with me?"

TARZAN'S QUEST

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

When Brown said there was no place to land in the valley of the temple, Tarzan was unperturbed. They would find a suitable alternative in case they could not bring the machine to earth. The ape-man nodded. "Get more elevation, and tell me when."

Brown opened the throttle and commenced to climb in a great circle. He watched the altimeter. At two thousand feet he leveled off and circled the rim of the canyon to a point above the cliffs on the windward side. Then he shouted to Tarzan, "Stand by."

The Jungle Lord slipped the catch of his safety belt. Brown maneuvered the big craft into a position favorable to their venture. Then, as he brought the ship into a momentary stall, he shouted, "Jump!" The ape-man swung easily out onto the wing and leaped.

An instant later Brown followed him into space. The parachutes billowed out, and the two men swayed like giant pendulums in the wind. Their lives were in the hands of fate. They might land safely in the clearing—or be dashed to death in the trees!

AT THE BELLE

"Slave Ship" Stars Barrier and Beery

A spectacular drama that storms in epic sweep over half the world "Slave Ship" on the Belle screen now until Monday, matinee daily, stands head and shoulders above the general level of film fare to take its rightful rank as the mightiest of all the sea sagas.

The new Twentieth Century-Fox film, which co-stars Warner Baxter and Wallace Beery, pictures the adventures of the last slaver as, with mastery reckoning its decks, it sails on its last desperate voyage.

A honeymoon ship of horror, the slave ship has carried aboard its fiery-packed hulk Elisabeth Allan, who boards the vessel for a honeymoon and finds too late, that she is off on a trip that brings her consternation to face with danger and death. Mickey Rooney is also aboard as a spunky cabin boy who boasts stoutly that he is a man in a man's world.....and gets a chance to prove it.

To Warner Baxter falls one of the most colorful roles of his career, as a romantic scourge of two oceans, defying the navies of all the world and fighting at last for love in the greatest adventure of all.

Opposite him is Wallace Beery, in a role that dwarfs all of the famed actor's previous sea roles. As the villainous mate of the last slaver, Beery makes the big-fisted, bald-headed seaman a figure of continuous interest genial and treacherous to his dying breath.

A stirring re-action of the adventurous days of the slave trade, "Slave Ship" was directed by Tay Garnett. George Sanders Jane Darwell and Joseph Schildkraut are prominent in those featured in the film.

Many Men Put to Work On Home Improvements

Belleville Responds to Home Improvement Urge—Four Trades Benefit on One Job—Duplex Houses Popular—Modern Bathrooms in Demand— H. I. P. Makes Many Improvements on Farms—St. Urge Brings Out Private Funds —Belleville Bankers Report Increasing Demand for H.I.P. Loans.

While the wide-sweeping possibilities of the Home Improvement Plan, as set down by the National Employment Commission of Canada, has met with a splendid response on the part of the general public of this province, the revenues of benefit to be derived from the plan have scarcely been touched. Such is the consensus of opinion of a number of business and tradesmen of Belleville.

Designed primarily to inaugurate a restoration of building activity and consequently a return to prosperity, the plan has met with the universal acclaim of a large number of residents of Belleville and farmers of the surrounding rural districts.

Locally, men in close touch with the H. I. P. activities, state the plan is enjoying universal appeal, and is opening up to people of limited means an avenue to obtain funds which they could not get from any other source over the length of time granted them under the plan.

Covering a wide scope of activity, the reaction of the local public has resulted in a stimulation of building and a pronounced increase in the actual workings of many of the trades.

FOUR BELLEVILLE TRADES BENEFITED

Evidence of this is seen in the instance of one resident who changed his dwelling into a duplex apartment. Four different trades, carpenter, plumber, painter and electrician benefited directly from this single loan while supply firms also noted an increase in business.

The general urge on the part of the borrowing public however, is to enlarge their places of residence. Many have not only done this but have entirely remodelled their homes along a "double house" system whereby they not only derive sufficient revenue to pay their indebtedness but assure themselves of a definite income in the future.

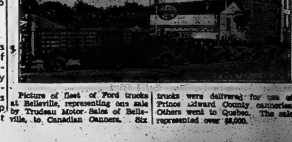
MODERN BATHROOMS INSTALLED

Another noticeable feature of the people taking advantage of the plan, is the number who have at last fulfilled a long-felt desire to instal modern bathrooms and sanitary plumbing.

FARM IMPROVEMENTS MADE POSSIBLE

Many rural homes and buildings have benefited greatly from the use of money secured under the plan. Farmers realizing the possibilities and the easy payment plan have taken advantage of the new system and have remodelled and beautified their homes, installed electricity, made much needed additions to house and buildings, erected new barns and machine-sheds and in some cases where the proper facilities have been available, installed bathrooms. Many a rural home and barn sadly in need of repair have received a new lease of life through the medium of this plan. New shingles and siding have given decrepit looking barns a new appearance. Coats of paint and repairs have caused many a family homestead to reinstate itself once again as the family pride.

PRIVATE FUNDS BROUGHT OUT



.....An indirect result of the plan, and one which perhaps was not foreseen by its originators, has been the expenditure of the private funds of individuals in the remodelling and beautifying of their homes and buildings which in all probability would not have occurred had not the advantages and feasibility of the plan been exemplified to the individual. Details of the plan and the easy financial arrangements opened up a new vista which had hitherto been closed either by neglect or procrastination. The resulting beneficial effects to all concerned with perhaps an earnest desire to help bring the long-delayed prosperity prompted people in a number of cases in Belleville and throughout the district to utilize private funds for the beautification of their homes. This in turn has added to the stimulation to business, building and the trades concerned.

SEE YOUR BANKER

On the other hand, as one official puts it, the plan has brought to home owners who have neglected their property through lack of immediate funds, or limited means, the opportunity to fulfill a long felt want in the securing of funds through their banker which otherwise they would be unable to obtain.

But as has been previously stated, the surface has not yet been scratched. There are plenty of homes in Belleville yet which could be converted from a dilapidated dwelling into a home of beauty with a little effort.

Help Prosperity.
See your banker.

GARBLED MESSAGE HINTS PLANE IS SINKING

Friends Think However Earhart Safe on Land, Take Dashes as Proof

Uncertainty Over Fate Caused by Signals And Puzzling Message

281 MILES NORTH ?

Miss Earhart's « Technical Adviser Believes She is On Land

Los Angeles, Calif., July 5 (AP)—Three long dashes on radio key transmission received at 8 a.m. (9 a.m. E.D.T.), on the wave length assigned to Amelia Earhart were declared today by Paul Mantz, her technical adviser, to be the most hopeful sign yet received that she is alive and on land.

The Pan-American station in Hawaii sent out instructions to her inducting her to send three long dashes of on land," Mantz said.

"George Palmer Putnam, her husband, telephoned me at my home at once ga that he was advised that three dashes were heard almost immediately after the instructions were sent out.

"We heard the dashes here and this is the most hopeful sign yet."

We understand that Earhart and the Itasca also heard the three dashes."

Garbled Radio Message.

Honolulu, July 3 (AP)—Navy officials said they received a garbled radio message early today, purported to have been sent by Amelia Earhart, which indicated her plane was sinking.

The message received by three United States navy operators was pieced together as follows:

"281 North Howland call KHAQQ. Several north. Can't hold with so much longer above water sent of."

The operators said keying of the message was poor and they were able to pick up only fragments of the message. It was received between 4.30 a.m. and 5.30 a.m. Pacific Coast time.

Garden and the calendar! July is generally the hottest month of the year, although August sometimes claims this distinction. Therefore, there may be no surprise expected. In the North make a last planting of corn. Keep on sowing peas. Plant more beets, kohlrabi, turnips and bush beans. Potatoes should be sprayed or dusted, and melons, tomatoes, squashes and bush beans protected from mildew and rust. In the South, tomatoes should be picked and ripened in the shade or sun amid many results. Late cabbages may be planted; rutabagas sown for winter use, and Irish potatoes may be planted. There is still time to plant more bush beans, beets and carrots. Plant Scotch kale for early fall.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, July 5 (CP)—Pressure is high over the region of the Great Lakes and on the Pacific coast and relatively low over the western provinces and the Gulf of St. Lawrence and to the southward of Lake Erie. Thunderstorms have occurred over northern where it has become somewhat cooler while in Manitoba and Saskatchewan it has been fair and decidedly warm.

Too Good a Shot, Winnipeg Boy Killed

Winnipeg, July 5 (CP)—Twelve year old Robert Hamlin proved too good a shot with his air-gun Saturday. His target was the flying cap of a .44 calibre cartridge stuck nose-first in the ground. From a distance of four feet Robert exploded the cartridge with the two-inch shell rifled into his head. He died in hospital.

Time (8.30 a.m. and 9.30 a.m. E.D.T.)

Officials took the message, if it was authentic, to mean the plane was about 281 miles north of Howland Island by Miss Earhart's navigator, and sinking slowly, forcing her to stop sending.

Reports Sometimes Confused.

Earlier this morning cross bearings taken on weak signals believed from Miss Earhart and her navigator, Fredrick Noonan, further confused weary Pan-American operators at Honolulu and Wake Islands.

The radiomen, who have maintained a ceaseless vigil in an effort to help the woman flier in mid-air globe girdling plane said the bearing placed the location of the mysterious transmitter at roughly 600 miles northeast of Howland Island This position, they said, was miles from any landfall.

A previous bearing taken by Pan-American and coastguardsmen here last night placed the sender in the vicinity of Gardner and McKean Islands in the Phoenix group, approximately 350 miles south of Howland.

Officials said the later bearing may be inaccurate because of the weakness of the signals. The British steamer Norona, 200 miles north of Howland, reported it heard a strong continuous carrier wave frequency near midnight last night, and for the last time at one a.m. (7.30 a.m. E.D.T.). Coast Guardsmen declared they last heard the carrier at Honolulu at 1.30 a.m. (6 a.m. E.D.T.).

Aviatrix's Voice Heard.

The Coast Guard cutter Itasca, whose radio was silent until messages presumably from the Earhart plane were intercepted by Baker Island colonists, 40 miles southward and by the portable station on Howland, began transmitting signals with the hope they would be received by the plane.

Station KGMB in Honolulu, a commercial station, instructed the mysterious station to listen for the Itasca signals.

At Santa Paula, Calif., Walter McClung, veteran Angeles amateur radio operator who repeatedly has announced interception of radio messages from Miss Earhart's plane, said he heard her voice again at 8:40 a.m. P.S.T. (11:40 E.S.T.) today, following four minutes later by that of her navigator, Captain Frederick Noonan.

U.S. Warships Search Seas For Aviatrix

Broadcast Instructions Are Followed by Signals

4 DISTINCT BREAKS

Wave is Heard in 3105 Kilocycles, One of Three Assigned Plane

Honolulu, July 5—(AP)—Spurred by definite radio signals on a frequency assigned to Amelia Earhart, warships of the United States navy sped today in search of the world famous aviatrix after a vain hunt in the broad expanse of Pacific three days ago.

One group including the giant aircraft carrier Lexington—transporting 57 fighting planes and 3,000 men—dashed westward toward tiny Howland Island from Honolulu.

A battleship ploughed southward from Kingman Reef, and the coast guard cutter Itasca in its search of the unfamiliar Howland waters, where Miss Earhart and her navigator, Fred J. Noonan, disappeared on their 20,000 globe-circling plane Friday.

Four Breaks Reported

In response to instructions broadcast by station KGMB here four distinct breaks in a carrier wave on 3105 kilocycles, were reported to the coast guard by Pan-American Airway listeners.

The broadcast instructions said:: "Earhart plane. Come in on 3105 kilocycles. Use key or voice. Key preferably. Put transmitter on one minute then listen and turn on four times. Follow these instructions immediately after this broadcast."

The four distinct breaks followed quickly, the coast guard said.

The wave was heard in 3105 kilocycles, one of three wave inputs assigned to the famous flier's plane.

Speed of Response Amazes

This amazingly fast response to KGMB's instructions heightened hope that Navigator Noonan and Noonan will be rescued from their plane, down either on a tiny atoll in the Pacific.

It came while radio listeners all around the Pacific and far inland sought anew to catch unexplained distress signals, voice or code "quest" which for two nights have conveyed hopes the missing aviators might be sending messages of help.

Voice of Earhart Heard

The last previous call in the series of mysterious radio signals was reported late last night from Cincinnati, Ohio, where an amateur said he recognized Miss Earhart's voice weakly giving call letters and position he interpreted to be within 25 miles of Howland Island.

Miss Earhart missed this mile island in a hair line landing hardly visible in the vast equatorial Pacific, as she and Noonan blazed a new air trail eastward from New Guinea, 2,570 miles away.

On Keel or in Ocean

Nearly out of fuel, and uncertain whether their plane was on the ocean's ocean came down at some undesignated spot presumably within sight of Howland Island. But with a possible refueling stop in Hawaii, it was estimated the fliers would not be needed to reach the Howland area.

The battleship Colorado, pushing southward from Honolulu, was over 500 miles on its 1,000-mile journey to aid the Itasca, carrying on the search alone in the face of dwindling supplies of fuel for its engine and water for its crew.

British Cruiser Leaves For Haifa as Trouble May Develop

'BUFFER' A MANDATE

London, July 5 (CP-Havas)—The Admiralty today ordered the cruiser Repulse to leave Malta for Haifa, Palestine, as the authorities in the Holy Land prepared for possible trouble later this week when the recommendations of the Royal Commission of Inquiry are published.

The Commission's report is said to advocate dividing Palestine into three separate states, with an Arab state to be fused with Transjordan and a "Buffer" state under British mandate.

Martial law may be established throughout Palestine Thursday when the long-anticipated document is published simultaneously in English, Hebrew and Arabic informed quarters said.

Arab and Jewish leaders both are known to oppose the solution the report is believed to suggest.

King and Queen Enter Ancient Capital of North

Key of City of Edinburgh Presented on Behalf of Hereditary Kingdom of Scotland — Procession to Holyrood Palace

Edinburgh, July 5 (C.P. Cable) — King George VI. and his Scottish Queen entered the ancient capital of their northern liege today.

It was a repetition of the cheering throngs of London on Coronation Day as Their Majesties drove in an open landau along stately Princes Street, while from Edinburgh Castle high upon the historic crag a royal salute of 21 guns boomed.

Lord Provost Louis Dunlop presented the keys of the city upon a red cushion and welcomed the King as he "ancient and hereditary kingdom of Scotland." Whereupon the King returned the keys to the Lord Provost, assuring him he trusted their safekeeping in his hands.

Then the guard of honor of the Scots Guards saluted and the National Anthem was played. Sir Fredrick Grant, Lyon, King of Arms, and his other Scottish officers of arms, in their magnificent Tabards, the insignia of their offices of the Edinburgh in scarlet and ermine robes, and the high constable of the city, with his silver rod of office, contributed to the colorful scene.

Crowds Line the Procession

The Duke of Atholl, commanding the first troop of Scottish Horse, led the procession, his men wearing khaki uniforms, slouch hats and scarlet puggarees. Behind were officers of the 1903 visit of King Edward VII. They were mounted on shaggy hill ponies.

Mining Town Is Threatened

Val D'Or Without Water Protection Suffers From Fire

Amos, Que., July 5 (CP)—Flames originating in a bedroom swept through Mother's Inn, and destroyed two other frame buildings early today in the heart of Val D'Or, 36 miles south of this Northern Quebec mining centre.

First word of the fire reaching Amos, on the Canadian National Railways old transcontinental line about 100 miles from the Ontario border, said the town was without water pumping facilities and the fire appeared to be little chance of halting the fire.

Bucket brigades, however, were formed by miners and villagers and water handed along lines of workers was used to dampen neighboring frame wooden buildings, being scorched by the flames, spread by a high wind.

While efforts to check the conflagration, the other buildings were soon damaged and the volunteers reported that the flames were moving to enfore a burned telegraph post collapsed and disrupted all outside communications.

Mother's Inn was a small, one storey hotel, and total damage from fire was estimated at about $15,000. The Val D'Or Hotel, also burned, was The Northern Quebec mining town, without a waterworks system, recently experienced today with destruction by fire. The hotel, which destroyed three buildings still are out of control.

While at camp the Regiment was given both open field and range work, under active service conditions as a result of the reorganization which changed the Isolated Machine Gun Platoon to one of a Tank complement. The Argylls are now under the command of Lt. Col. C. A. Gribbon, who accompanied the unit to Barriefield.

De Valera May Lose His Lead

Each Side Has 60 Seats With 18 Yet to be Heard From Dublin, July 5 (CP) — President Eamon de Valera's Fianna Fail party appeared today to have lost the majority lead indicated in earlier returns.

The government, with 18 constituencies to be heard from, had 60 seats, against an identical number for all others in the field.

Labour, with 11 seats, appeared likely to hold the balance of power in the new parliament. The principal opposition party, William T. Cosgrave's Fine Gael, had 41 seats while Independents were elected in eight.

Latest figures in the plebiscite on the new constitution held simultaneously with the election, showed a vote of 473,217 for its adoption and 272,878 against.

Observers predicted de Valera would be unwilling to carry on for long with the aid of Labour which has been increasingly critical of his administration of late. A new election in the autumn was also predicted in some quarters.

Rebels Seize Refugee Ship

French Warships on Way to North Coast to Intern Vessel

Paris, July 5 (AP)— French warships were en route today to the northern coast of Spain where the insurgent cruiser Almirante Cervera yesterday captured the French refugee ship Stanbrook.

The sloop Vauquois and the submarine Pascal were ordered to proceed to the Bay of Biscay, where the Stanbrook was said to have been fired on by the cruiser.

The Stanbrook was last reported en route to Bilbao under convoy of the insurgent warship Ciudad de Cadiz. When halted the vessel was believed to be carrying a large number of refugees from Santander, the principal port on the Bay of Biscay to be held by the government.

Santander dispatches to French newspapers said the Stanbrook unloaded supplies there yesterday and took aboard the refugees for the return voyage to France.

Compromise is Forecast In Neutrality Deadlock Of Four Great Powers

East Coast of Spain is Left Wide Open' Eden States

BRITISH VIEW FIRMS

Integrity of Spain And Main Artery Through Mediterranean Policy

London, July 5 (CP)—Foreign Secretary Eden declared today there now were no German warships in the Mediterranean "at all."

He spoke in the House of Commons while informed British observers were predicting a compromise on the Spanish non-intervention question, which is in deadlock with Italy and Germany on one side and France and Great Britain on the other.

Eden reviewed the whole "handof" Spanish situation for the House. He said Germany and Italy, by withdrawing their warships from the four-power non-intervention patrol, had left the east coast of Spain wide open.

"At present," he added, "there are no German warships in the whole Mediterranean at all."

Both the cabinet and the Imperial Defence Committee met today to consider Great Britain's future policy in the Spanish civil war and the relationships of the war to her Mediterranean communications.

The meetings came as observers credited Great Britain with stiffening her attitude. Evidence of this was seen in Foreign Secretary Eden's week-end speech in which he outlined a two-fold policy:

1. Preservation of Spain for the Spaniards;

2. Maintenance of the "main arterial road" through the Mediterranean.

Compromise Foreseen as Likely

British Conservative authorities thought there were indications Germany and Italy might compromise. The two powers have refused to let French and British warships take over the patrol areas abandoned when they withdrew. The non-intervention pact had attacked their control algae.

The non-intervention powers are faced with the unrecognized position of Italy and Germany, who have accorded full recognition to the insurgents, never to allow what they term a "Bolshevist" conquest of Spain.

London, July 3 (AP)—Great Britain, France and Russia sought further support today among the 27 nations represented in the Spanish non-intervention system.

Weekend Accidents in Ontario Probed by Police

(By the Canadian Press)

Inquiry was being pressed today into nine deaths that marked July 4 holiday and highways were crowded with tourists, to take advantage of the long, United States Independence Day holiday, but only three deaths were attributed to automobile mishaps.

Four lives were lost in drowning mishaps Thursday, the bodies recovered on the following Sunday. Three men W. Tupakka, Port Arthur, J. Mayerchak and M. Nitrowsky, Oakburn, Man., were drowned in Martinet Lake when their overturned canoe. A Toronto fisherman found the body of Eddie Gardner, nine, in Georgian Bay at Collingwood. The lad is believed to have fallen while fishing.

192 Killed in Car Accidents in The United States

TOTAL IS LOWER

New York, July 5 (AP)—Lives lost during celebration of the United States 161st independence anniversary stood at 310 today with just a single death directly attributed to fireworks. Automobile accidents were responsible for 192 of the deaths, drownings 70 and miscellaneous causes accounted for 48.

The Independence Day casualty list thus was larger than in 1936, but slightly above the average for the past eight years.

The day's toll was slightly below last year's total of 346.

Although the holidays passed without a single fireworks death, an Associated Press survey showed hundreds were treated for injuries from explosives. Thirty-six firecracker victims were treated in Chicago hospitals.

Haying Now In Full Tide

"Regular Barn Buster" This Year Say Farmers

It's haying time through the rural district of this and other sections of the Province just now, and perhaps never before has a better or larger crop of the sweetest product been observed in any year, where, pointed out one of the city's best known farmers today.

"It'll going to be a regular barn buster this year if they can cut it they have to extend the garage."

The danger of heat prostration in the haying fields will be greater this year, it is presumed by Mid. Two reasons are offered—there'll be more work to do this year, with a lack of real labor, and the season is likely to continue very warm.

Four Injured Near Trenton

Two Persons Suffering From Concussion After Head-on Crash

Trenton, July 5—(Special)—Four persons are in the Belleville General Hospital, two suffering from skull lacerations and concussion, following a head-on motor collision on Highway No. 2, one mile east of here late yesterday afternoon. The more seriously injured are Mrs. Gilbert Sarles, Sidney Township, and her eight months' old grandson Johnnie Acklon, Peterboro, both of whom suffered the skull injuries, while Gilbert Sarles, husband and driver sustained superficious scalp wounds, and the driver of the other car, who police say was John McRae, Toronto, is also in the hospital, but not seriously hurt. Dr. Gustin Wallace of Belleville attended. The injured persons who were bleeding profusely, were conveyed to Belleville in the Trenton ambulance.

According to Trenton police, who investigated, Mr. McRae was proceeding westerly near the Trenton Airport when he is alleged by police to have driven out to the left of traffic and unable to return to his position upon failing to pass a motor vehicle which was travelling east on into the automobile that was being driven in the opposite direction by Gilbert Sarles. Both vehicles were badly damaged about the headlights and fronts of the machines.

Dr. Wallace stated to the Ontario Intelligencer this afternoon that none of the injuries were serious enough to be classified as critical although the little Jackson child is quite ill and Mrs. Sarles suffered from shock as well as the concussion and fracture.

The investigations were handed over to the Ontario Provincial Police for further consideration, was learned today. Charges are pending, it was announced, however.

Year Sentence For Local Boy

W. W. LaRue Convicted of Theft of Two Pay Cheques And Car Theft

William W. LaRue, Thurlow Township youth, was sentenced to serve one year in the Ontario Reformatory by Magistrate J. F. Ponton, K.C., in today's local police court after pleading guilty to two charges of the theft of a motor car at Kingston. Two other charges, those of the theft of two pay cheques, one of which was his father's, brought before the magistrate to determinate in each incident, those sentences to run concurrently with the original year term, however.

At the request of the Kingston Police Department the charges of the theft of an automobile, alleged to belong to Ernest Frain that city six weeks ago, was heard in the Belleville court in connection with the charges of the theft of the pay cheques. The cheque charges arose from LaRue's cashing two Government cheques for $67.50 each, one of which he endorsed with his father's name when he left. LaRue was arrested on warrant, sworn by Provincial Police Constable North Bay last week at which time he was found to be in possession of the motor car stolen at Kingston. The accused man pleaded guilty on all three counts.

Broken Bottles Flung on Beach, Warning is Issued

Gangs of small boys who have reported themselves as still been causing pieces of broken bottles and other sharp-edged trash into the water along the civic bathing beach are warned by the Beaches Association officials of the danger to bathers as well as the spoilation of the place if they continue the practice.

Over the week-end, it was reported by Mr. Reg. Moncrief, scores of bathers and swimmers availed themselves of the facilities of the beach.

"Let's leave it safe for them," he said.

To this end police protection has been asked.

Canine Tears Flowers, Goes To Dog Pound

Activities in Local Police Circles Rather Serene Over Week End

Dragging a long chain behind it a collie dog was taken into the keep of the police and lodged in the city dog pound by P. C. Evans yesterday, but only after destroying the prized flower beds on Mc-Donald Ave.

The canine had apparently broken away from its kennel, which was undoubtedly secured with the chain, irritated residents on McDonald Ave., complained the dog was running wildly through their family flower beds, dragging the long chain behind it, and upsetting the floral displays. The dog is now in the custody of the dog pound and will be destroyed to morrow unless claimed.

P. C. Evans also found a bicycle apparently abandoned on Front St., yesterday claimed by its owner, who had left it a little longer than expected.

Peterborough Police requested assistance in the recovery of a 1927 model Essex sedan, stolen from that city Sunday. The vehicle carried Ontario licence plates number B 5.

An increase in drunkenness was observed in Belleville over the week end when four men and one woman were taken into custody on charges of intoxication, contrary to the Liquor Control Act. Some were detained over the week end and appeared in local police court today while others were permitted their liberty Sunday morning after being fined $10 and costs.

Two persons were sentenced to the cells of the county jail for the theft of automobile, alleged to belong to Ernest Frain that city six weeks ago, was heard in the Belleville court in connection with the original year term, however.

Heat Ennui Delays Steps

It's the heat—the natural enemy of summer—but the steps of visitors to the offices of the local city hall are lagging. The office of a definitely noticeable degree lately since the hot spell of the past few days and the asphalt pavements and turns thoughts of generally busy business men to cool retreats and pastimes.

Even into the aldermanic ranks the make-up of the city's constitution, the generally brisk city fathers, this spirit of slowness has suddenly crept and the Board of Governors of the Hospital, but he was forced to resign this office owing to poor health.

Mr. Riggs took an active interest in sports, his principal pastimes being fishing, deer hunting and bowling. He was formerly with the Belleville Bowling Club for five years. In rifle shooting he was one of the best and won prizes at competitions. He was a true sportsman and his friends were many who associated with him in the search of game in the forests, streams and waters or in play upon the bowling greens.

Fraternal Affiliations

Fraternally Mr. Riggs was a life member of Tuscan Lodge No. 282, A.F. & A.M. and with one exception was the last surviving member of their records. It was largely due to his efforts that the Loyal Rebekah Lodge was organized about the year 1915 and while unable during the last few years to take an active part he retained an interest in the welfare of the lodge. He was a member of Quinte Friendship Chapter R.A.M.

Shortly the Y.M.C.A. was organized in this city, Mr. Riggs took an active part in the work and was a charter member, a director and filled the position of President for one year.

Prominent Churchman

In religion Mr. Riggs was a faithful member of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church in which he was a Life Deacon and for over thirty-one years the church leader. He acted also as superintendent of the Sunday School for some years.

Surviving him are two sons Mr. Leo B. Riggs of this city, Dr. Leland Riggs of Lawton, Oklahoma; two daughters, Mrs. Vera Lewis and Miss Wanda Riggs, both of Belleville. Mrs. Riggs passed away in June three years ago.

The funeral took place this Monday afternoon from the family residence and, was in charge of the Rev. Charles George Smith, pastor of the Victoria Baptist Church, Montreal, a former pastor of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church here, assisted by the Rev. A. O. Sinclair, the present pastor.

City Mourns Wm. B. Riggs

Late Ex-Mayor Had Taken Prominent Part in Belleville's Life

William Bates Riggs, who passed away at the family residence early on Saturday afternoon, July 3rd., occupied a high place in the estimation of Belleville citizens, generally. He was a man of integrity and by his friendly manner and pleasing personality he ingratiated himself, during his long residence here, with many friends and acquaintances. His illness was of long duration and although it prevented him from meeting and mingling with his friends as formerly, he continued to be in their thoughts and sincere concern for his welfare was constantly entertained by them. He was a good citizen; generous in support of all worthy objects and willing at all times, when able, to give of his time and means in community service for the advancement and improvement of the city of his adoption.

In 84th Year

The late Mr. Riggs was in his 84th year, he having been born at Millsboro, Ont., on January 29th, 1853. In the year 1881 he came to make his home at Belleville and shortly after his arrival here he became bandmaster of the Odd-fellows' Band and under his leadership that band with the 15th Battalion Band, the new organization known as the 15th Consolidated Military and Oddfellows' Band. He was a clever musician and delighted in taking and acted as bandmaster for twenty years. Eventually he entered the retail flour and feed and business, selling also other musical instruments. This business he carried on for over 37 years he carried on this business.

When automobiles came into prominence, Mr. Riggs saw the possibilities in the automobile and disposing of his piano and organ business he entered into the automobile business field and had the first agency for Ford cars in this city. His first garage was on Bridge St., now occupied by the late John Nicholson. He was successful in this line of business and undertaking and later he built the fine garage and showrooms immediately opposite. These are upon the lot where, once stood the fine brick residence which was the home for the late Dr. B. S. Willson and later by his late Dr. Horace Wilkinson. Since his retirement owing to illness this business has been ably carried on by his son, Mr. Leo B. Riggs.

Municipal Interests Wide

Mr. Riggs took a keen interest in municipal affairs and served as a member of the city council for three years. In the year 1929 he was elected to the office of Mayor and he had much to do with the making of the new Bridge Street bridge. During his term of office the permanent paving of the city streets was commenced. He was chairman of the Mother's Allowance Commission of Belleville and continued in office for some years. He served for many years on the Board of Education and for twenty-five years he was a member of the Cemetery Board. The Council appointed him as a member of the Board of Governors of the City Hospital, but he was forced to resign this office owing to poor health.

Mr. Riggs took an active interest in sports, his principal pastimes being fishing, deer hunting and bowling. He was formerly with the Belleville Bowling Club for five years. Definite Signals Heard From Earhart Plane Down in Pacific

Encouraged and directed by definite signals from Amelia Earhart and her navigator, Capt. Fred Noonan, U. S. navy seaplanes, coast guard cutters and ships scoured the waters for many miles around tiny Howland Island in the Pacific where the plane came down on account of shortage of fuel, a short time before. Miss Earhart had left Lae, New Guinea, on the longest flight ever attempted by a woman, when she vanished from the air. Miss Earhart is pictured CENTRE after one of her epic flights and at LEFT is Capt. Fred Noonan, navigator, who accompanied her. At RIGHT Miss Earhart is pictured with her husband, George Palmer Putnam, publisher, who rarely accompanies his aviatrix wife on her long distance flights. Her machine, nick-named the "flying laboratory," is shown TOP as it roared down the take off field at Oakland, Calif., to begin the attempted 27,000-mile world-girdling flight.

Railwaymen Here Organize Ship-by-Rail

W. A. Meena is Named hairman of Local Affiliate

MASS MEETING HELD

"The time has come when the employees of the Railway must assume, at least in part, the responsibility for their own jobs. It becomes increasingly more clear as time goes on that the success of the railroads, in spite of public utterances to the contrary, depends on increased business."

With these words, Mr. H. Morrissey of Brockville, struck the note of the mass meeting of the railway employees of Belleville which tared into capacity of the Regineer's Hall.

Under the Chairmanship of Mr. W.A. Meena, the railway employees of Belleville met and formed an affiliate of the Central Association of Ship-by-Rail Railway Employees of Ontario.

Immediately after the opening of the meeting, Mr. H. Morrissey, Vice President of the Central Affiliated Railwaymen's Organization of Ontario and Secretary Treasurer of the Brockville Association was introduced to the meeting. After outlining the aims of the organization, Mr. Morrissey gave to the meeting an outline of the accomplishments of the Association through the seven years of its existence. He pointed out that by co-operation with the various governments the Association had endeavoured to bring about a fair competitive position with their chief competitor, that is the highway transports.

Purpose of Organization

"Since the primary purpose of our organization is the bringing about of co-operation between the railroading and shipping public and the railway, it becomes necessary for the members of these organizations to do all in their power to sell what the railway has to sell, namely service. In order to sell any product you must have quality. It becomes imperative then that the quality of the service rendered by the railway be consistent at all times with the needs of the public."

"Week end excursions in the passenger department, the pick-up and delivery service in the freight department, fast passenger and freight service will be only small measure to the activities of the Central Affiliated Railwaymen Organizations of Ontario.

"By many contacts with the management during my association with the Organizations have given to me the sure confidence that they stand loyally behind us and are ever ready and willing to co-operate to the fullest extent in extending the transportation service where it is deemed desirable. The employees of this railway may well point with justifiable pride to the excellent service which has been made available to the travelling and shipping public. Each and every employee may well be proud in regarding himself as a salesman for this service."

"The rising tide of public opinion in the various municipalities of Ontario against the proposed 25% reduction in public Commercial vehicle license tax is a great assurance to the fact that the provincial government has pleaded a lack of funds in every instance when they refused the municipalities a reimbursement for the construction and maintenance of those paved streets in each municipality which are used as the connecting links in the highway system of Ontario, the cost of which has been borne entirely by the municipalities. Obviously, if the government use the money to further subsidize this agency of transportation then no longer can they say that they have not the money to reimburse municipalities for the construction and maintenance of these connecting links."

Payment of Taxes

"There is today among all thinking people a profound conviction that the motor truck and the motor bus should pay their share—that is to say, pay taxes commensurate with their business advantages."

"It is true that motor trucks and buses pay on a somewhat loosely figured mileage, gasoline, taxes etc., but no far-minded citizens will claim that their obligements in this direction are in any degree proportioned to the burdens on the railways, which are taxed by everybody, everywhere, on everything down to the last car wheel."

This lack of equity as between railway and motor transportation has been due in the first place to the indifference of the / public, which did not hesitate to give its prediliection for "riding on rubber" above the dictates of common sense, which ordain that no man can serve two masters and expect both to pay dividends if he gives one an undue preference.

It is neither right nor reasonable that the railways should be left all the dirty work, the long haul and the bulk freight, while the cream of the traffic, the package business, is handed over to the motor trucks. Evidence exists that the railways be maintained in a position where it is economically feasible for them to render that service which is consistent with the needs and desires of the public. As a prior investment in which billions of dollars have been sunk, the railways are entitled to sympathetic consideration.

While nobody wants to drive the truck off the highway, which it does so much to shatter, nobody wants it to stay there if it refuses to pay its full share of the upkeep. There is this glaring difference between the railway and the motor truck. The railway has a right of way to maintain and pay taxes on. The motor truck has the King's highway which it does not maintain and on which the public pays part of the taxes. It isn't an honest race.

Says He Slew 3 Little Girls

32-Year-Old W. P. A. Worker Confesses at Los Angeles

Los Angeles, July 5 (AP)—Broken by 11 hours constant grilling, a 32-year old W.P.A. worker paced a jail today after confessing, Detective Lieutenant LeRoy Sanderson said, the attack-slaying of three girls.

By his own words, Sanderson said, Albert Dyer brandished himself as the man who strangled Madeline Everett, 7, her sister, Melba, 8, and 9-year-old Jeanniebie Stephens, and bundled their bodies as they lay in a sandy ravine.

"We shall, of course, ask for the death verdict" said District Attorney Buron Fitts when Dyer's reported confession was obtained last night. He said he was filing three murder charges against Dyer.

Was Guard of Children

Dyer, employed by the W.P.A. to guard children at a street crossing near Centinela Park in suburban Inglewood, broke, Sanderson said, when police threatened to take him to Inglewood, where enraged citizens mulled about the police station during questioning of other suspects last week.

"Well—I did it!" he gasped, Sanderson related. "I had no other motive than sex—it wasn't revenge."

To Hemi Rabbits

On the morning of their death Dyer said he played with the girls in the park. It was then, Sanderson asserted, the guard persuaded them to "hunt rabbits" in the nearby hills.

"They said their mothers didn't want them to, but I kept telling them how much fun it was and finally they agreed that they would meet me," the 136-pound, five-foot-five suspect was quoted as confessing.

At the appointed hour, his story continued, "I watched the three girls coming down the road. They were dressed in bright colored clothes and looked fresh and nice."

Their route lay through a bean field and down a steep-sided dry wash. "We sat down to rest and I asked Madeline. that was the younger one, to come with me up the draw a bit and see if we could scare out a bunny. She came right along and the other two girls agreed to stay behind.

"When out of sight of the others, I reached out and grabbed Madeline by the neck and choked her to death. When I thought she was dead, I knitted a rope around her neck to make sure."

Madeline's limp body was left jammed into a narrow crevice.

"Trapped a Rabbit."

"Then I singled out Jeannetie. I told her we'd trapped a rabbit and said we wanted her to help us. Melba wanted to come along, too, but I told her to stay there and I'd catch another bunny for her."

"With my hands I choked Jeannette to death and found her neck with rope. I wanted to make sure she'd stay dead."

Unaware her sister and her chum had been slain only a few feet from her, Melba Stephens awaited the man's return.

"She went with me without question," the confession recited. When I began choking her, she tried to scream. She fought. She struggled on the ground. She clawed at the dirt and kicked but pretty soon she gave quick. I knotted a rope around her neck, too."

Kingston, Ont., July 5 (CP)—Nine-year-old Gordon Cassels of Kingston has started what promises to be a great career as a fisherman. He hooked his first catch at Kingston Mills, fishing with his parents, and hauled out a fine large-mouth bass, 19 inches long and 13 inches in girth, weighing five pounds, two ounces.

Warsaw, July 5 (CP-Havas)—Wearing borrowed finery, James Kwiek, 32, was crowned King of the Gypsies of the world in the Polish Army Stadium here yesterday. The new king, whose predecessor, Matthias Kwiek, shot himself accidentally during a family argument, was the first gypsy monarch to be crowned in Poland since the 16th century.

After the coronation, King Kwiek told reporters that he would go to Italy to ask Mussolini for permission to found a gypsy state in Ethiopia.

GOOD NORTHERN NEIGHBOR

A fine tribute to Canada by President Roosevelt and reiterated in the New York Times referred to Canada's confederation of 1867. The Times in comment says of the birth of the Dominion:

"Mr. Roosevelt's congratulations to Canada on the seventieth anniversary of confederation are in his happiest manner. They express the sincere goodwill of the American people to another democratic nation working on substantially the same problems, subject to much the same stresses, divisions of region and interest as themselves. Historically the confederation was born of necessity, as was our own Federal Union. The American Federal Union had but lately been sustained. The United States was in no kindly mood toward Great Britain. Upper and Lower Canada, soon to be Quebec and Ontario, while legally united, were alienated each from the other. There was no communication by rail between these two Provinces and New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

"In 1864 Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia were deliberating on a project of federal union. Canada asked to join in the conference at Quebec from which came the scheme of federation accepted by the British Parliament in the British North America Act. From four Provinces, Quebec, Ontario, New Brunswick, Nova Sotia the union has grown into the vast federated State that we know only Newfoundland of staying outside. Canada has grown much in the same way as the United States. The potentialities of a mighty State exist there. Fortunately it is one that Americans can praise or blame without impertinence. Its people are on the same job as the Americans. Consequently we can understand them and they can understand us.

"Amity between the two nations is now a commonplace. While the Canadians were under British tutelage they used to think that they usually got the worst of the arbitration of differences between the United States and Canada. Since their affairs, domestic and foreign, have come into their own hands they get along together perfectly. The convention of 1818 and the international commission set up in 1911 are monuments of perpetual peace and the friendly settlement of controversies. From the Dominion there is much that Americans may learn and copy to their advantage. She is a good friend, neighbor, fellow and customer. Good luck to her."

SUNDAY TRUCKING

"The Provinces of Ontario and Quebec both now prohibit the operation on the highways on Sundays of trucks carrying merchandise. Quebec recently followed the lead of this province in the matter, the Government having announced that such truck operation will not be permitted," says the Toronto Telegram. The editorial continues:

"It is a wise precaution against accident and no more than fair to the owners of passenger vehicles, who provide most of the revenue with which the highways are built and maintained. Sunday motoring in the country, the only free day that many owners have, is congested enough now; it would be made much worse if large trucks, many of which will be trailers are almost as large as trains, were allowed to operate too.

"The recognition of the prior right of the private vehicle is important. Sunday operation of buses can be justified. These, like trains, are necessary for transportation of persons who must travel on Sunday and are not able to travel otherwise. Trucks carrying goods are in another category. They have been built to such huge dimensions, many of them, that they are dangerous to all other vehicles. Further limitation of their size even for week-day operation would be in the public interest."

TRAFFIC LOTTERY

Nearly 800,000 drivers, some good and some indifferent . . . Three times that many pedestrians, including the lame, the halt and the blind . . . More than 600,000 motor vehicles, some new and some old . . . Seventy-five thousand miles of streets and highways, with a score of physical hazards in every mile. Add all these together and you have Ontario's traffic lottery, a complex game of life and death in which all of of us, willing or not, must have a hand, says a statement of the Highways Department.

Many will lose in 1937, some because we are willing to take a chance no matter how great the odds against us, but most of us because we do not fully observe all the rules of the game nor play it safely.

The rules are many and necessary, but it's hard to remember all of them. Constant observance, however, of the simplest and most important one will remove all the hazards for all who follow it. The rule is: 'Every day in every way, TRY COURTESY."

ILLINOIS HAS TIRED OF MISFIT MARRIAGES. Henceforth no one can be married in that state unless they can present a medical certificate that they are healthy and fit for matrimony. Such a law was once introduced in Ontario, and if memory is correct, was passed, but never enforced. This law was introduced during the regime of Sir James Pliny Whitney, "The Man from Morrisburg". And it is a dang good law, too. Chicago registered 1407 couples hastening to get tied up before the bill became law—lest they should fall below the health standard set by the State—rather a recommendation for the new law.

WALTER WINCHELL, ACE NEW YORK COLUMNIST, IS ENJOYING A MONTH'S HOLIDAY, and to show how "those who has gits" his column is being carried on by his friends, notables in various fields of spotlight endeavor. Shirley Temple did the first and a good job she made of it. She has her own typewriter and says she enjoys writing, for when she is writing she does not have to attend classes, as her education is carried on while she works. Winchell is certainly what is known below Forty-Second street, as "a hog for punishment." He has his newspaper work which compels him to be seen about the night clubs at all hours of the night—his radio work and his moving picture periods. He must have the stuff to stand the racket he does, and it is a question whether the notoriety and money he is reaping will compensate for the pains and aches which may come later from overworking the brain and body. Just to explain this superabundant energy it might be mentioned that Winchell is not a real newspaperman but a "hoofer" who started from the stage to the night clubs and gossip pillars when it was learned what a high market price keyhole glimpses brought in the open market, well splashed with red ink.

BRICKBATS ARE MORE COMMON THAN BOUQUETS in the newspaper business—that a person who disagrees with something in the newspaper generally broadcasts disapproval in no uncertain tones, but the great mass of readers who appreciate the newspaper are generally inarticulate as far as the newspaper staff knows. However, occasionally, someone tenders a charming bouquet of appreciation and that makes up for the indifference of others. A lady reader communicated her appreciation of the Great Family Newspaper recently, saying: I want you to know that I think the Belleville paper has been wonderful, especially during the great events which have been transpiring including the abdication and coronation, calm, unflurried in comment, and giving a wide variety of news in a pleasing condensed way, and just up to the minute in everything a newspaper should be." Thanks a lot.

Mark Hellinger, in the New York Mirror tells these:

"The panhandler walked up to the prospect on Broadway and Forty-sixth Street.

"'This is a strange request mister,' he said, 'but I'm really desperate. Would you give me fifty-five cents so that I can join my family?'

"The prospect looked astounded.

"'And where is your family?' he asked.

"'Mister,' replied the panhandler, 'they're in the balcony of the Paramount Theatre!'"

MODERN YOUTH

Ernie Holst tells of a seven-year-old youngster who was handed a dollar by his wealthy uncle. He asked the boy what he was going to do with the money.

"I'm going to save it for a rainy day," said the lad.

"Well, that's fine!" cried his uncle. "You'll save it for a rainy day, eh? I didn't know you were that economical."

"Economical my foot," snapped the kid. "I've got a tip on a horse that can't lose in the mud!"

PANNING THE EDITOR

An editor met Sir James Barrie, the famous author of 'Peter Pan' and other notable contributions to English literature, at a dinner, and was fortunate enough to be placed next to him at the table.

"Sir James", he said in the course of their conversation, "I suppose some of your plays do better than others. They are not all successes, I imagine."

Barrie leaned toward him confidentially, "No," he said, his eyes twinkling, "some Peter out and some Pan out."

Sir Gerald Wollaston (ABOVE) Garter King-of-Arms who apologized for remarks he made before a club meeting in Nelson referring to the Duke of Windsor's funeral arrangements for the late King George V. The Duke received the apologetic reply after a London newspaper quoted him as referring to Sir Gerald's remarks as a "rotten story." Sir Gerald had stated less time had been allotted to funeral arrangements than ever before. "King Edward insisted that the funeral must take place at the end of the week," he said. Following his apology, Sir Gerald recalled the Duke's saying Queen Mary wanted the funeral the day it was held.

DIPLOMATS STRIVING TO PREVENT SOVIET — JAPANESE MILITARY CLASH

While Soviet and Japanese Diplomats sought to find peaceful means of settling the dispute which threatens to embroil the two nations in war over possession of several unimportant islands in the Amur River, boundary between Manchoukuo and Russian Siberia, sudden, drastic action by military commanders in the danger zone was considered by observers most dangerous threat. Japanese troops fired upon the routed Russian gunboats approaching the islands which the Soviet claims under an old treaty with China. Manchoukuo has passed from Chinese to virtual Japanese ownership since the treaty was signed. Japan has demanded through her ambassador at Moscow, Mamoru Shegmitsu (top left) that Russian gunboats withdrew from the islands immediately; Russia's foreign commissar Maxim Litvinoff (lower Right) refused to comply with the demand unless Japan also withdrew her armed forces to permit negotiations for new boundary demarcation. Part of the Japanese forces on the Siberian Frontier, believed to number 150,000 are shown at LEFT as they left Tokio last year to the distant outpost while at RIGHT is pictured a detachment of Soviet's far-eastern army, at a recent review. Russia has at least 350,000 men available for duty should hostilities commence. Moscow and Tokio both feel that only sudden action by hotheads in the frontier zone will prevent peaceful settlement of the new Far East crisis.

Mr. Campbell:—

It was with feelings of regret that your friends among the young people of Mountain View heard of your approaching departure from our midst.

We feel our society is losing not only its founder, but its staunchest friend and truest member. You have been always with us and your presence we feel, always gave our assistance a liveliness and steadiness which would otherwise be wanting.

We found you always a willing friend, and helper, a giver of good sound advice and above all in common slang, a real sport, able to enjoy life from a young person's viewpoint. We wish you every success in your new charge and hope you will be blessed in the continuance of your work. We wish you would accept the small token, of our estimation and esteem for you, and if it is useful in the future you will carry with it pleasant memories of your friends among the Mountain View Y.P.U.

FRANKFORD

Frankford—On Tuesday evening, June 29th, around 30 guests, residents of Riverside School Section, assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Wallis in honor of Mr. and Mrs. George G. Montgomery, the latter having bought in the school for the past year and is now retiring from the profession. Mrs. Montgomery was presented with a beautiful cosmetic stand and Mr. Montgomery with a smoker, the presents were served with ice cream and cake by the members of a former literary society.

Following is the address:

Dear Mrs. Montgomery:

It is with a feeling of sincere regret that we learned of your severing your connection with the Riverside School which for the past six years has been productive of inestimable value to each one of us.

As a teacher, you have excelled as only you can excel, always presiding over your classes with a gracious firmness that has made your discipline a pleasure in which to cooperate. As such, you will ever be remembered by the pupils and friends of this vicinity with feelings of the highest regard and esteem. Above all though, you will be thought of as a friend for the hearty interest and generosity manifested toward all our activities.

We could continue at much greater length expressing our affection for you and our appreciation of your many excellent qualities of mind and heart but we know that the embarrassing modesty which has always been one of your personal characteristics would make this hard to endure and so with these few words, we ask you to accept this gift, hoping that you will take it with you, realizing that it is the bearer of our gratitude for the many kindnesses shown us and our appreciation of your worth as a champion and a true friend.

And George, you have been a real friend too; we certainly will think of you when we are waiting instead of catching a ride with you. So we wish you to accept this smoking stand and cigars with which each time of smoke you blow, may you think of the hours spent at Riverside.

We one and all wish you all joy and happiness in the years to come.

Signed on behalf of the pupils and friends of S.S. 17 of Sidney, Helen Wallis, Olive Hearns.

Old Lady Tells Secret of Her Vigor

The writer of the following letter once suffered from constipation, indigestion and depression. Then one day a vigorous old lady told her the secret of good health, and now that former sufferer writes to tell others how she obtained relief through Kruschen:—

"Kruschen was recommended to me by an old lady of seventy-two who can dance the Highland Fling—thanks to Kruschen, which she has used for thirty years. She told me to take Kruschen salts in tea and relieve a dull heavy headache from which I suffered nearly every morning on wakening. I was also troubled with rheumatism in both shoulders. Kruschen turned the trick. The headache disappeared and so did the rheumatism. I have continued taking Kruschen and intend to keep it up."—(Mrs.) F.B.W.

Kruschen is a combination of mineral salts which assist in stimulating your liver, kidneys and digestive tract to healthy, regular activity. They ensure internal cleanliness and then help to keep the blood-stream pure.

Couriers of Progress

The value of the service rendered by the newspaper is greater now than at any time in history. The pace of progress has quickened; things foreign and distant yesterday are near and neighbours today. Therefore, a constant source of reliable, last-minute news has become more essential than ever before to the welfare of the individual, community and nation alike.

The daily newspapers continue to satisfy this need. They are the couriers of progress, providing intimate contact between the man in the street and all phases of human endeavour.

The newspapers interpret the scientist, the laboratory worker, the engineer. They report quickly and impartially the development of new products and services which individually and collectively bring about higher standards of living.

The news and information thus made available increase a man's ability to produce and permit a greater enjoyment of living.

Consequently, every daily newspaper is blazing trails to new heights of individual and national achievement. More than two million Canadian families keep pace with progress in all phases of international, national and local affairs every day by means of their newspapers.

School Histories

Hart's School, S.S. No. 3 Madoc

In the year 1842 a little log building was erected amidst a virgin forest which then covered this part of the country. The old school-house stood on the south east corner of lot 6, east end of concession 8 in the corner field now owned by Mr. Robert Wood.

The school was built entirely by hewn-out of the logs were handled by oxen. The shingles used were hand-made. Heat was furnished by a big iron stove which sat in a pit which was dug in the school. The seating accommodation consisted of wooden benches which were moved near the stove at the noon. It it was exceptionally cold. Shelves were built along the wall for the pupils slates to rest on while they were writing. Ever present trouble among the children were mosquitoes, fever and ague. The main subjects were reading, writing and arithmetic. This knowledge was instilled into the pupils' minds by the use of rods whether he deserved it or not. Very few attended school in the winter summer, but during the winter months all the neighborhood attended nights as there was no means of parliament came to speak in it.

It might be interesting to note that the early settlers squatted first. If the place suited, they bought the Thos. Hart, A. M. Curtis, Dan McCarthy, Jr. MacNamara, Wm. Fernell, Peter Murphy, Hamilton McGee, John Blakely, Adam Allan, Jephat Bradshaw and Samuel McGregor.

The record of the teachers who taught in the Log School is not complete.

1851, E. D. O'Flynn; 1858, Miss Marjorie E. Dynan; 1859, Miss Martin Bradshaw; 1860 Miss Grace A. Kellar; 1861-2, Miss Etta Watson; 1862, Miss Marzetty Dynan; 1863, Wm. F. Riggs; 1864, Miss Mowat; 1865, Augustus Flinn; 1866, Miss Elizabeth Campbell at a salary of twelve dollars a month; 1867, Miss Alice Bailey.

Through the instrumentality of Squire T. Hart, who settled in 1833, a new school was considered and on July 4, 1857, a special school meeting was held. It was decided to build on one of the corners near the log school. The north east corner of lot 5, eighth concession was chosen for the site and twenty dollars paid to Lewis Riggs for the land.

On August 3, 1857, the Trustees, J. Hazzard, J. McCaffrey and A. Allan let the job of building the school to Samuel Delyea for the sum of three hundred and sixty-one dollars. Lumber was drawn from Bridgewater and a red school was built just north of the present building. It faced the east and had one entrance with a window at each side. The north and south sides each had three windows. The desks were then replaced by a table with one drawer. For seats there were the wooden benches used in the log school and the wooden benches were known as the "Dunce Bench and were in frequent use. A common long box stove was the means of heating. There was a henry tin placed around the stove to keep spread the heat. Each person sending one or more dollars to assist furnished the school with one-half cord of wood, two feet in length, or paid the sum of fifty cents. Parties not sending any children were exempted from furnishing wood unless the one-half cord per child was insufficient. The stove was later abolished and records show that in 1864 wood was supplied by Wm. Blakely at seventy-five cents a cord.

In 1853 the red school was moved out further south and put on a stone wall. The reason for moving the school was that it stood on the road allowance. Shortly after a high board fence was built separating the girls' and boys' playgrounds. Sunday School was held in the school until 1883 when the church from Madoc was moved out.

Among the group of pupils attending the red school at Hart's the following names deserve mentioning: Drs. Rob. Peter and Dan McCaffrey, all in Berlin, Ontario; Miss Lib McCaffery who has served as Principal of Normal School, Regina; Pretoria in South Africa; Melbourne in Australia and in New Zealand. Those who follow the teaching profession are H. Leslie Dougan and Jas. Feeney who is a priest at Wolf Island.

Teachers who taught in this school are—1866-69, Orlean Hart at twenty dollars a month; 1870, Miss Fanny Bradshaw; 1871, Miss Isabel MacBeth; 1878-80, Miss Ellie Outwaters; 1880-82, Leonard Hart; 1882-83, J. O. Miller; 1883-84, Wm. Wright, Miss Ethel Wright; 1885-86, Thos. R. Gardner; 1887, Miss Eliza A. Hales; 1888, Chas. J. Dutcher; 1889, H. Hartley; Miss V. Kincaid; 1891, Miss Annie Miller; 1892, Miss Alice Sinclair; 1893, Miss L. Morrice; 1894, K. W. Sullivan; 1895, A. M. Harper; 1896-99, Miss May Adams; 1900, Miss Margaret Corbett; 1900-1, Miss M. Grace Bristol; 1901-2, Miss Mabel Pepper; 1902-5, Miss Bessie I. Jordon; 1906-7, Miss Mokelbust; 1907-8, Miss Dora M. Thompson; 1908-9, Miss Annie Sandercock; 1909-10, A. C. Saunderson; 1910-12, C. Sheridan; 1912 (6 months) M. K. Conlin; 1912-13, J. S. Hale; 1913, E. McCarthy; 1913-14, Miss L. McCaffery; 1914-15, Miss Ethel Wright; 1915-16, Miss Irene J. Whytock.

At the year 1913 a motion was passed to build a new school, but it was not carried. However in 1916 the motion was passed, Dan Davis and seconded by Frank Palmer. This time it carried. The contractor, Mr. R. Woods. Felix Murphy and J. McCaffrey had the grounds enlarged by purchasing more land to the south from Mr. Pringle. The yard was then levelled.

The contract of building the new school was given to Mr. Sewell Sherson of Madoc at an estimated cost of four thousand dollars. This money was raised by debenture and borrowed from Mr. S. Rollins of Madoc. The last payment will be made this year. The present school is a red brick building and modern in every respect. It is a school of which any section might well be proud.

There are separate entrances at the east for the girls and boys. The class-room, twenty-three feet by thirty-two feet has six large windows facing the west. The teacher's room, ten feet by nine feet has three large windows at the east. A furnace was installed in the basement but it did not heat satisfactorily so a pipeless furnace was put in during 1936. When the new school was finished the red one was torn down and sold to Fred Taylor for fifty dollars.

A social evening was held in the month of December to celebrate the opening of the new school. The Inspector, Mr. Minns and Mr. Watson, principal of Madoc High School were present.

Miss Irene Whytock was the first teacher in the new school. She improved the appearance of the interior by having pictures hung on the walls. During the years which Miss E. Sherson taught (1922-26) flower and vegetable gardens were started west of the school. These vegetables were canned for use in hot lunches. A four-burner oil stove and an organ were purchased from money obtained when instructive debates were held on social subjects. From fifty to sixty attended. During the year 1924 a stable was built on the south east corner of the grounds. The work was done by Mr. Fred Woods at the cost of thirty-five dollars. In 1926 earth was drawn and banked around the school and the girls' yard was levelled. A small fire in the basement caused considerable excitement, in 1935 but was put out by the assistance of the neighbors.

The teachers who have taught in the present building are—1926-27, Miss Irene J. Whytock; 1927-19, Miss Eva A. Crawford; 1918-20, Miss Gladys A. Kells; 1921 (6 months), Miss Margaret E. Beatty; 1921-22, Miss Martha B. Blakely; 1922-25, Miss Kate Stewart; 1926-28, Miss Ethel Cuskey; 1928-29, Miss Ethel Caskey; 1927-30, Miss F. Marion Hall; 1930-32, Miss Alaska Flemming; 1930-31, Miss Alice Hale; 1931-32, Miss Hilda Gould; 1932-34, Miss Kathleen Laffan, Miss Alma Fraser; 1934-36, Miss Kate Ross; 1936, Miss Irene Gibbs.

Inspectors—Mr. Ager who was not an Inspector but Superintendent of Schools; Mr. McIntosh was the first Inspector, 1894; Mr. Minns, Mr. McCloskey.

This history was prepared by Miss Irene Gibbs, teacher, the present teacher at the school.

Celebrate 50th Anniversary

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Biggar Dowd, Carrying Place, was the scene of a very happy event on Thursday, July 1st, it being the occasion of their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

The dining room made a charming picture with its profusion of summer flowers. The table was centred with a large wedding cake which hung a large white bell and streamers.

Included among those present were their two daughters, Mrs. Jack Clark, Carrying Place and Mrs. Fitzy Weese, Belleville also grandchildren, Mrs. Wm. Jones, Saskatchewan, also Mrs. Ed Dowd of Canajoharie, wife of their son Edward, who passed away nine years ago, were unable to be present.

Among the many friends who called during the day were Mr. and Mrs. Ed Palmer, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Dowd received many beautiful and useful gifts, also many messages of congratulations.

Mrs. Carrying Place, April 1862, Mr. Dowd celebrated his 75th birthday this year. His parents came from Ireland to the State of Michigan, and remained during the lumber boom. They then came to Canada during the building of the Picton Railway from Trenton. Mrs. Dowd, prior to her marriage at the age of 18, was Miss Alice Hannah Mann of Trenton. Their marriage took place in St. George's Anglican Church, Trenton, by the Rev. Canon Armstrong.

Mr. and Mrs. Dowd are two of the few surviving pioneers of this historic district. Mr. Dowd was a boy when the construction of the Murray Canal was first started. He also recalls the days of "corduroy" roads, when whole families travelled in ox carts, and log waterways with interest the progress from then up until the present streamlined stage. Mrs. Dowd, prior with the Quakers and the Wannamakers were the true pioneers of the area; and the name of Biggar which he bears, marks Mr. Dowd as one of a notable generation.

Book Circus for Boys and Girls Begins at Library

The circus may be over for the majority of Belleville's citizens but the sections of the boys' and girls' department of Corby Public Library are in their glorious days of their own. The vacation reading campaign this year is called a "Book Circus" and while the selection of reading is not confined to animal stories, the annual circus visit has stimulated the children's interest in wild life and many of the books on the various lists are devoted to animal stories.

The "Book Circus" as planned by the children's librarian, Miss Kathryn Gallagher, begins with the taking of a circus ticket to the boy and girl who wishes to join the summer reading group. As he or she finishes a book from the lists selected for the holiday, the title is written on the ticket. A large poster of a circus tent is on the library wall and figures of boys and girls entering the main door are shown. Each reader taking a ticket has the number of the ticket placed on one of these figures. When one has read the required number of books they are shown coming out of the circus tent.

Great enthusiasm has been shown in the project. A large number of children have already received tickets and have begun their first books from the lists which have been prepared in graded style to suit the tastes and ages of the small subscribers. It is this way the children are encouraged to continue the reading of interesting and useful books during the leisure hours of their vacation.

"With the Week in Her Eyes," by Kathleen Strange is the book which won the much-coveted prize in the Canadian Book Contest this year, competing with work from all Canada. Despite without experience, the Stranges' developed a good seed business and have since become leading figures in Canadian agriculture. "With the West in Her Eyes" is the story of a courageous that continues wherever farmers till the soil, and of the rewards that accompany it.

Believing that the individual possesses power, a confidence by which he habitually falls to use, Dale Carnegie started a unique course of training. It began as a course in public speaking but developed into the formation of speakers, sales manship, human relations and psychology. The students were business men who were interested in pleasing people in the social and business world. As a result of his twenty-four years of dealing with human problems, Dale Carnegie has collected his conclusions in the book "How to Win Friends and Influence People." Examples are given of the successes or failures of famous people in their own vocations. The methods described have won instant success and the book has proven to be one of the most popular of the season.

"My Great, Wide, Beautiful World" by Juanita Harrison is the story of an American negro girl's journey during eight years through twenty-two different countries. Working her way round the world, the author has a remarkable travelier who is interested in everything. She presents unusual pictures of people and places that have interested and unconquered by the rules of grammar or spelling. Her book is a joyous experience, shrewd, informal and possessing wholehearted sympathy and friendliness.

Clarke Gable and Loretta Young in "Call of the Wild" now playing at the Capitol with revival bit No. 2 "Desire."

At the Movies

AT THE CAPITOL

"2 Grand Revivals"

A picture that rates the rays of every movie fan is town "Call of the Wild," the immortal Jack London classic of the Yukon Gold Rush, now playing the Capitol until Tuesday nite as a grand revival hit brought back.

Rich in rugged drama and clean fun, the picture exerts a powerful appeal for every member of every family—the youngsters and their dads won't be in the least put out if they've all thrilled to this most famous of Jack London's tales, and the love story, beautifully played by Clarke Gable and Loretta Young, will insure the feminine contingent of a grand time.

Jack Oakie contributes the comedy and has never been better. And there's a new dog star—a huge, soft-eyed St. Bernard named Buck—who makes his screen debut in "Call of the Wild," and bears like the logical contender for the canine cinema crown.

The film, which was shot amid the majestic beauty of sub-zero Mt. Baker, Washington, was directed by Gene Fowler and Leonard Praskins and the team has done a brilliant piece of work. Gable is ideally cast as a ornate-hearted prospector who sets out with his buddy, Shorty Hoolihan, (Jack Oakie,) to find a "one more claim" On the trail, they rescue the beautiful Claire Blake (Loretta Young) from wolves and learn that her husband has been lost searching for the same claim. Which find been discovered by the now dead father.

The "take-what-you-want" code of the Northwest by which Thornton lives is foreign to this over-civilized sheltered woman and she pays for her constant conflict. However, their mutual contempt gradually turns to a deep and genuine love.

The fight locates the rich claim, but Smith, a villainous prospector who has found the lost Blake and forced him to lead him to the claim site, surprises them and takes their gold and their canoe, but drowns in the rapids, weighted down with his stolen bounty.

The unexpected return of Claire's husband offers a challenge to Thornton's code, but he finally agrees to let her go. Throughout the story, the "Call of the Wild," which tormented the dog, Buck, forces cries of the time when he was a wolf and makes him waver between his love for his master and his yearning for the wolf-male who calls to him, a parallel with the conflict in Thornton's soul

AT THE ELLE

Fast Mimi and Miriam Hopkins Teamed in Thrilling Air Drama.

Throbbing with an intense drama that makes it stand out far above preceding aviation films, R.K.O. Radio's "The Woman I Love" will prove itself one of the really memorable pictures of the month, when it is presented at the Belle tomorrow (Tuesday) and Wednesday, matinee daily.

For perhaps the first time on the screen, the personal side of wartime flyers' lives has been emphasized instead of their spectacular feats in the air. While by no means devoid of exciting aerial scenes, the chief interest of the film centres on the human equation of a beautiful woman, married to one flyer, who finds herself falling in love with another..... a young observer who, by the ironies of fate, proves to be her husband's best friend and temperamental opposite at the front.

As first unaware of the relationship, the young aviator is horrified to learn that his friend's wife is the friend to whom he is bound by the strong, age-old code brotherhood that the French termed "esplugage." The situations build to a crescendo of emotion, played against the grim background of the air fighting during the Second Battle of the Marne.

Fast-paced Mimi and Miriam Hopkins are co-starred as the pilot and wife, and Louis Hayward plays the young observer friend. Some of these gifted artists turn in magnificent performances in their roles.

Supporting this trio of luminaries, producer Albert Lewis and director Charles Lamont brought together a notable group of players. Colin Clive as the scheming commander, young Wally Albright as Hayward's adoring "kid" brother, Elisabeth Risdon as his mother and Mady Christians as a cabaret entertainer are consistently good. Paul Guilfoyle, Owen Davis, Jr., Donald Barry and a host of others do equally vividly realistic as the carefree members of the squadron.

Edvak's directions.... his first in this country, after a highly successful career abroad.... gives an authenticity to the film that helps to make it the important offering it is. His use of sound effects in dramatic scenes reveal brilliant technic. The cinematography by Ernest Borden and Anthony Veiller also comes in for its share of praise. In design this virtually all of wartime life and romance to the screen.

The Belle Latest World News Feature, and "Ready to Serve" a highly amusing Multiple-reel comedy with a cast of popular funmakers are announced on the same program.

"Slave Ship," Leaving

Captive lovers on a honeymoon ship abloom with horror, Warner Baxter and Elizabeth Allan enact the strangest love story of the sea's most intense adventure in "Slave Ship," featuring the new Alfred Newman and Mickey Rooney, to be presented at the Belle tonight for the last times, along with an excellent array of varied features including the Belle World News Events, Ines Ruton and Her Melody Maids in a smart revue, and the newest Walt Disney color cartoon, "More Kittens," a catchy, cunning and very funny cartoon classic.

Washington, July 5 (AP)—Dan Beard, United States Boy Scout Commissioner, visited the Canadian Camp at the International Scout Jamboree yesterday and told the boys, "I have in my home the 'head of a native Canadian.'"

"In fact," he said, "I shot eight near Ottawa, a long time ago." Beard then explained that the "native Canadians" to which he referred were moose.

Canadian Scouts today will pay homage to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

TWEED

Tweed—Miss Isabelle Campbell for the past six and a half years, a member of the staff of Tweed Consolidated School has accepted a position on the staff of one of the new public schools in Timmins. A number of friends prior to her departure, met at the home of Mrs. Harold Emerson and presented her with a purse of money.

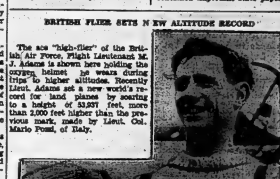
The following address was read by Miss Florence Blacey, a member of the staff of the Consolidated School:

Dear Miss Campbell:

You have quite taken our breath away by your sudden decision to depart from our midst.

We were sorry to see you go but than we can say. The gap left will be wide and one hard to fill. Since your first appearance among us you have proved an asset to our small world of affairs. Your genial disposition and willingness to co-operate have always made it pleasant for all who have been associated with you in any way.

Our time was short and our gift is small compared with the appreciation we would like to show but we would like you to accept this small remembrance from your Tweed friends.



We are glad for your sake that this opportunity of a change for the better has presented itself.

May the blankets of happiness leave sorrow and regret behind with us, and go forth with you to stay.

From your co-workers and other friends of Tweed.

Yanks, Cubs Lead Major Loops On Mythical 4th July Date; Feller Pitches for Cleveland

Feller's Arm Stands Test as Tribe Lose 3-2 to Detroit Tigers

TO TAKE TURN

Dean And Warneke Hurl Cards to Victories, but Yanks and Cubs' Lead

By SID FEDER

Associated Press Sports Writer

It was a glorious fourth for a lot of baseball folks, particularly those sporting uniforms of New York Yankees and Chicago Cubs, but you'd have to look a long way today to find a happier lad than Master Robert Feller.

Master Robert was like a kid with his first firecracker, all because that mysterious valary ache of his apparently has stopped acting up, and is now ready to take a regular pitching turn for the Cleveland Indians.

For Robert—and the rest of the Indians—that bit of cheering news meant more than anything else yesterday's program produced. However, for baseball in general, the Yanks and Cubs were the big stuff, "Yankees and Cubs!"

If tradition holds good—and that it is as big as Ducky Medwick's batting average Yanks and Cubs both will be fighting it out in next fall's world series before they wave during the pennant parades for the July 4 deadline. Now all they have to do is stay in the driver's seat until Oct. 2.

To Feller this July 4 goes down in the book as a red letter day. Most undoubtedly it is, for this year, he has been the season's biggest bust to date. They did everything but write a song about that fast ball of his before the campaign started, but his arm went sour his first time out, and he's been on the shelf ever since.

They trotted him out as a starter yesterday for the first time since the third day of the season. Although he lost a 3-2 decision to the Tigers, he looked good the rest. He fanned four batsmen, and generally had things on hand. In the fourth, he made a wild peg to third that set the stage for the only hit off him. Pete Fox's single, which produced two of the three Tiger tallies.

Despite the victory, the Tigers dropped to fourth in the first division American League, since Boston Red Sox massacred Philadelphia Athletics twice, 7-6 and 4-3, to jump into third.

Yanks in Lead

The Yankees retained a 3 1-2 game lead in the American League as Lefty Gomez pitched a five-hit shutout to whip the Senators 7-0.

The Cubs split a couple of slugging bouts with the Pirates, taking the first 8-5 on three homers, and dropping the nightcap 7-6. The even break left the Chicago gloaters one game in front of New York Giants in the National League chase.

After being held to two hits by Van Mungo for six innings, the Giants teed off for four runs in the eighth and topped Brooklyn Dodgers for female fans, just off the pace.

Given steady pitching by Ted Lyons and Monte Stratton, the White Sox whipped the Browns twice, 4-1 and 8-5.

Dizzy Dean pitched a sweet little ear-and-three-hitter to help make the Cards clubbed Cincinnati 1-0 and 5-2. The Reds made it easy themselves into fifth place in the National League with a twin win over the Phillies, 14-2 and 6-2.

BALTIMORE TAKES JERSEY CITY FOR BRACE OF WINS

Tribe Snap Month Losing Streak, Leafs Split With Bisons

By The Associated Press

Those are brave days in Baltimore. The Orioles have found team they can lick. Jersey Giants.

For almost a month of the current International League season it seemed as though the flock would have to descend to a class D league to turn the trick. Suddenly the Birds took a brace and started going. They didn't go far, but to Jersey enth place from the cellar but it's helped their self respect.

Giants lost two to the Flock, yesterday as Bill Lohrman, the Birds most consistent hurler and Ken Jedenberg won 3-2, 14-1, for Orioles. The victories gave Baltimore a clean sweep of a four game series and although they won't catch the Bears this week the club feels better.

Bill Clasell chipped in with timely homer in the eighth inning of the opener to break a 2-2 tie, then hit another in the second game. Enoch Bancroft got two round-trippers in the nightcap.

Shutting Syracuse clouts split a double header with Newark Beaus and snapped the league leaders seven game winning streak. A home run with three on by Willard Brandt accounted for the second game for the Bears, 6-2, after the Chiefs had won behind the league's new strikeout champion Whitley Moore in the opener, 6-4. Moore fanned nine to his total to 53 in four games. George McQuinn, Newark first baseman, hit a home run in each game.

Royals Rally

A three-run rally in the seventh inning gave Rabbit Maranville's Montreal Royals a 3-2 win over Rochester as Americus Polli bested two Wing roundsmen in a brilliant hurling duel. A. Cuccinello kept the Wings in the game scoring both their runs on home runs.

Outhit, the Buffalo Bisons nevertheless managed to squeeze out a 5-4 win over the Toronto Maple Leafs and take the odd game of a five-game series. Truett Sewell, although relieved in the ninth, was credited with his tenth victory of the season for the Bisons. Ollie Carnegie, Buffalo outfielder, hit his ninth home run of the season with a man on base.

ALL-STAR GAME TO BE SELLOUT?

Annual National-American Contest at Washington This Year

New York, July 5 (AP)—Baseball's mid-summer extravaganza, the fifth game between all-star teams of the National and American Leagues, will be played Wednesday at Washington when President Roosevelt will throw out the first ball.

The game is heralded by Secretary Ed Eynnon, of the Washington Club, as a sellout. That means that 29,232 fans will pay $58,977 to see the year's contest between the best baseball players have to offer in individual stars. The gate, less the operating expenses, will be turned over to a fund for indigent players.

Last year at Boston the National League hailed the American Leagues, 4-3, breaking a string of triumphs that had extended since the game was first played at Chicago.

ENTERED IN REGATTA

Montreal, July 5—(CP)—Ottawa, Brockville, and the Don Club of Toronto, are entered in the annual Eastern Rowing Association Regatta at Lachine, July 10.

HOST YACHTSMEN SWEEP REGATTA ROCHESTER SAILS

Kingston Sailors Second in Independence Day Regatta Rochester

Rochester, N. Y., July 5—(AP)—With Ie captain, George Ford, sweeping to three successive first places the host Rochester Yacht Club piloted and completed a sweep of its own Independence holiday invitation regatta for 14-foot one-design international dinghies, held on Lake Ontario off the Port of Rochester.

Concluding three team races in the 10-mile sailing, Rochester won with a total of 60 points against the 46 amassed by the second place Kingston, Ont., Yacht Club. Kingston Club of Kingston, Ont., other entries scored as follows: Royal St. Lawrence, 39; Toronto, 37; Cataraqui, 40; Chautauqua Lake Yacht Club 22; Asbury Sailing Club, of Asbury, Denmark 18; Canandagua Yacht Club, 16.

The regatta was concluded Sunday with two races in order to permit Canadian competitors to return home for Monday business.

Skipper Ford's competition for the host club's conquering team of George Ford and Dwight Hill, came from Long Sammuty, veteran international sailor from the Kingston Yacht Club, who had two firsts and a fourth for the three races. Hill, No. 2 skipper for Rochester, added his team's winning total with two thirds and a fifth.

The host club took a one point lead in the point standings Saturday by racking up the contingent Montreal 20-19.

The opening race course was triangular, mile a leg, twice around, giving the fleet of 19 contenders alternately two thirds of a mile, a close-haul reach and a spinnaker run home, opening at a four to five mile clip, the northwest breeze died virtually to a zephyr during the second round of the course.

Saturday's finish was in this order: Ford, R.C.Y.C.; Sammuty, Kingston; Shekwood, Montreal; Hanna, Montreal; Hill, Rochester; Howard, Chautauqua Lake; Noara, Kingston; Johnson, Chautauqua; Hastings, Canandalgua Lake; Molback, Denmark; Phalen, Canandalgua; Fresher, Denmark.

Point standings at the end of the first race are: Rochester 40; Montreal 19; Kingston 17; Chautauqua 13; Canandalgua 6; Denmark 4.

The construction of a $100,000.00 recreation building for the employees of the International Nickel Company's Refinery at Port Colborne commenced today. George Craig, acting superintendent announced to the sporting public of that community. A Brantford Construction Company was awarded the contract, which is to be completed October 1st. The plans for the vast recreation building include badminton and basketball courts, a large, extensive bowling alleys, a billiard room and lounge, swimming pools and showers will also be included. It is expected to provide an ideal location in which the Port Colborne Sailors will conduct their hockey training early next autumn.

Why it is Canadian swimmers repeatedly get tangled in the ropes along the Russian River during the Diamond Sculls rowing races, seems a mystery to me. Last year, the first time in recent years a Canadian had the coveted Scull finals because he hit one of the log booms when rounding the Canadian boom and was defeated in the finals. Sunday, in the Diamond Sculls, the Austrian sculler, Coulson was sent sailing into the air, but recovered relative to his future plans regarding another attempt at winning the Sculls next year. He made a splendid showing in the preliminaries, however.

When the Belleville Flying-Rovers take to the courts, at the Trenton Arena, tomorrow night, they will trot out two new guiteed-rock artists in Hall Brampton Brampton player and a player named Tache, who is located at the R.C.A.F. camp, Tache is from Ottawa and is heralded as a shifty stickhandler, whose ability to handle is one of his main forte. Inbrampton, Billy Hamilton who has been playing great lacrosse for the Rovers on the defence, is confined to his home with an infected throat illness. Tuesday's game should be a classic, as a real test of the season for both teams. The Rovers are underrated as yet, while the Rovers seat while seriously handicapped through the absence of Allemaire and their scoring ace, Joe Gould, who will be in uniform tomorrow night versus the, Peterboros.

For the remainder of the local football season every game will be fought with vengeance as from henceforth the clubs concerned are battling for a playoff berth. Of course the softballers have four clubs battling for the play-off berths, so naturally it begins to look as though the big tussle is for first place and the more interesting one to see which club keeps out of the basement. Last place, where no play-honors rest. Tonight Frank Sedore's Point Anne squad comes to town to do battle versus Chuck Barnett's Belleville Argenti mudballers.

Man mio Tommy Mellor, fleetfooted chaser of the balls for the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" softball team the other day. "How do you compare our R.C.A.F. team with your Corbin's team," asked Tommy, as we returned to comment at length as the Corbins are minus the services of their two mound-mates, Johnnie Bawden. With Bawden right, the Corbins might take the Flyers, but it cannot be discounted that neither club got much effort into their recent exhibition tilt. A game played on identical grounds, say the Belleville Exhibition Park, with the men on the line as a side bet might be interesting from more angles than one, however.

Speaking of the big league baseball monikers or how the majors got their nicknames, did you know that the Cleveland Indians were at first known as the Spiders, then as Naps, Bronchos and Plain Dealers. Cleveland club adopted the nickname of Indians in 1915 and has since been identified by that cognomen except for the occasional variation of Tribe.

There may have been no joy in Mudville when the mighty Casey struck out, but there's plenty of hilarious feeling in Cleveland today—but Feller's flipper dimmed the lust of a mischief-making game yesterday, even though he did lose 3-2 to the Detroit Bengals. A week ago it was thought Feller was all washed up and ready for the cleaners, but sir rapidly and mysteriously as it affected him, Feller's arm ailments apparently vanished, leaving the Sioux still unsatisfied with seven freaky. If tradition is to be believed the clubs leading the respective major leagues on July 4th will eventually tangle in the world's baseball classic but even though the Yanks and Cubs are leading their respective flocks at the odds on leaders are not any too great this year of 1937.

The Peterboro Auburns hung up their sixth consecutive victory Friday night last when they took the Norwood Terriers 16-8.

With the C. O. B. L. schedule nearing its birthday, the half-way mark we find the Kingston Frontenacs leading the parade with seven wins and only two losses. Oshawa has the same number, but were beaten by every club in the league at least once for a total of seven victories and four losses each. The Tars are trailing in third position and the Nipissing squad in fourth. Incidentally it's Kingston at Napanee Wednesday.

American Leaguers Who Will Meet Nationals In All-Star Game

Holiday Bride

By ANN DEMAREST

Jeanne nodded and hurried up the snowy street, forgetting Mart her apologies. Bryan, He said it! Perhaps he wouldn't get better. Even though they never met each other's eyes, Jeanne knew that if anything happened to Bryan there would be no reason for her to go on living. Bryan was the only person who gave meaning to life.

INSTALLMENT 16

Working that day was one of the most difficult things Jeanne had ever had to do. She could think of nothing but Bryan, all sad, perhaps alone. Gordon Bartlett was in an amazingly sunny and sweet mood and he spoke cheerily to Jeanne when she passed inattentive.

"It's all fine, Miss MacDonald," he said finally. "You are usually so attentive. I've corrected this one three times."

Jeanne flushed. "I'm sorry," she said. "I'll try to do better."

He smiled at her kindly then. "Why don't you go along and have some lunch. Perhaps that will help."

Jeanne nodded and left the room. She wasn't hungry but it was a relief to get away from Gordon and Bartlett. While she was having her dessert Cilly strolled into the room for her lunch hour. She looked up and Jeanne knew they had had words over Aunt Cecelia. But it never seemed to occur to Cilly that Jeanne would feel any resentment. She talked as though they had always been fast friends.

"I'm so bored," she complained, pushing an omelet away from her. "I think I'll go on a cruise for Christmas. It's nothing but the same old round of parties every day. Nothing is ever new. I can't see how you stand it, working day after day."

"I really like the work," Jeanne said. "Your brother is getting a wonderful book."

Cilly shrugged her shoulders. "Lance says it's work I need. He thinks I'm spoiled because I have too much money."

"Isn't there anything you would really like to do?" Jeanne asked her.

"Oh, I don't know," Cilly frowned. "I always thought I'd like to be a dress designer. Clothes are really the only things I am interested in."

"That would be fun, I should think. There are lots of good schools of design in New York."

Cilly looked up and for a moment she seemed distracted. "That's an idea. I could design my own frocks."

But she soon lost her enthusiasm. "Why bother," she said, "when I can buy anything I want?"

Jeanne left Cilly and went back wearily to the library. Today the contrast between Cilly and Gordon Bartlett struck her more forcibly than ever. There was Cilly bored, and there was Cilly bored, without anything really to interest her, and yet she had all of the things Jeanne thought a girl could desire.

The afternoon dragged on. It was almost five o'clock when Bartlett left to go out on an errand and Jeanne, relieved by her day's work, decided to end the misery immediately. She would go to Bryan. At least she could find out how he was and whether he had been taken to a hospital. There would be some comfort in knowing. It was worth while to see him, she told herself, "but perhaps I can talk to the nurse or doctor. I'll feel better then."

As she left the library she ran into Lance Larkin who was wandering sleepily down the hall.

"The apartment seems to be deserted," he said with a smile. "Thank goodness, I've found you."

"I think Cilly went out right after lunch, Jeanne said, "and Mr. Bartlett is on an errand downtown."

"I came to pay a farewell call," Lance said.

He looked tired, Jeanne thought, and the usual impudent good humor was missing from his smile.

"Farewell?" she echoed.

"Yes. I thought I might as well go down to Florida with my boat before the holidays. My company doesn't seem to be in great demand in New York."

"Oh, that's nonsense," Jeanne protested, thinking suddenly how strange it would be without Lance in the background. She rarely saw him and yet it was pleasant to know that he was around.

He looked at her almost pleadingly. "Will you miss me?"

Jeanne nodded. "I will, really. I hate to think of your going away."

"Will you do something for me, little Jeanne? Just one last favor before I leave?"

He was smiling at her now, looking more like the Lance she used to know when she worked for Carlton Conway.

"What could I do for you?" she asked him in surprise.

"Just this. I want you to have dinner with me tonight."

Jeanne raised distressed eyes. "You shouldn't have asked me to do that," she said in a low voice.

He looked at her strangely. "You are wrong," he said finally. "I should have asked you long ago but it was wrong of me to do it here in Cecilia's house. I realize that. But I mean it, Jeanne. I've wanted you to dine with me for a long while. May I call you after you get home this afternoon? Or will you let me drive you there?"

Jeanne dropped her eyes. "I'm not going home," she said. "A friend, a man I know, is ill." Without warning tears flooded her eyes.

"Jeanne, what is it?" Lance bent over her, concerned. "Don't cry, please. Perhaps there is something I can do."

Jeanne shook her head. Opening her purse, she took out a handkerchief to dry her eyes. "I'm very silly of me. I'm just worried, that's all."

"Let me drive you to see him. Who is it, Jeanne?" And then he added in a tone that seemed almost bitter, "I suppose it's the man you've been so fond of all this year."

"Yes it is," she admitted, "but I'm foolish to tell this way. We never see each other any more. Bryan and I, but when I heard that he was ill. . ." She hesitated.

"You felt as though the whole world went right to pieces right before your eyes," Lance said swiftly. "I know the feeling. Here, give me your handkerchief. "I'll dry your eyes. You can't go to see him with such a tear-stained face. . . Come along now, we'll dash right off to see him."

"You're awfully kind," Jeanne told Lance as he helped her into his roadster.

"Pish, a Boy Scout," he said with a rueful smile as he swung out of the parking space. "Where on we go now?"

Jeanne gave him Bryan's address. "He is in a hospital. I don't know yet."

"I suppose now is the wrong time to ask you but I wonder if you will let me take you out, even for one evening?"

Jeanne raised her honest blue eyes to meet his gaze. "I don't feel that I should, Lance. After all, I am working for Gordon Bartlett."

"I knew you long before you went to the Bartlets," Lance said. "And as far as Cilly is concerned, well, we've about decided to call it a day."

"Oh, Lance, really?" Jeanne said in a distressed voice.

"It's going to be much better that way," he said firmly. "After all, I want more out of life than just chasing around trying to keep up with a crazy girl like Cilly. She doesn't know from one moment to the next what she wants."

"Are you really going away now?" Lance looked down at her upturned face. "I thought it was a good idea," he said slowly, "but something tells me I'll put it off for a week or two, perhaps longer."

Jeanne could feel the color creep into her cheeks. The look in Lance Larkin's eyes disturbed her. She turned away.

"You can't go away before Cilly's party. She's counting on you, you know. I saw the place cards."

Lance whistled softly. "That's right. She was planning to have it this week, wasn't she?"

Jeanne nodded.

"I'll stay, and since I'll be in town I'll go to the party, but I want you to know that Cilly isn't the reason why I'm not going south right away." His voice was soft.

"You mustn't say that, Lance."

"Why not? For months I've been trying to see you, to get to know you better, and you keep putting me off. Hasn't it ever occurred to you, Jeanne, that I am fond of you and that I could be even fonder if you'd ever give me half a chance."

"It wouldn't be right, Lance," Jeanne insisted in a distressed voice. "We live in separate worlds."

He sighed. "That's an foolish, Jeanne, but we'll argue about that some other time. Is this the house?"

"Yes."

The yellow car came to a stop before the large house where Bryan had an apartment.

"I wish there was something I could do for you, Jeanne. I hate to see you so upset."

"It was grand of you to drive me here," Jeanne said. "There isn't a thing else you can do."

He looked down at her. "You're an independent child, aren't you? And do you know, I rather like it."

Without waiting for a reply, he jumped out of the car and came around to open the door for her.

"I'm awfully sorry he's ill, Jeanne. If I can't be with you for myself, I want to see you happy."

Jeanne thanked him again and crossed the snowy sidewalk to the entrance as Lance drove away. Her mind was in a whirl. It was difficult to believe that Lance was really interested in her, and even now it did not make much impression. Bryan was ill. Nothing else seemed of any importance.

Before she entered the building she turned quickly and went into a florist shop at the corner. She would get Bryan some roses, yellow ones, the kind he always used to send her. And after the long green box was tied in bright ribbon she went back to the apartment house. Standing outside she hesitated, suddenly afraid to enter. Then with her heart beating swiftly, her tense hands clutching the box, she entered the lobby.

The clerk at the desk shook his head dubiously when she asked for Mr. Patterson.

"I'm here?" Jeanne asked. "Have they taken him to the hospital?"

"No, he's here but I believe he's very ill. I don't know whether you can see him."

INSTALMENT 17

Standing in the lobby while the clerk called Bryan's apartment, Jeanne thought, "I mustn't cry. Even if Bryan is very ill and can't see me I will have to be brave." Her hands on the long green box of flowers were trembling.

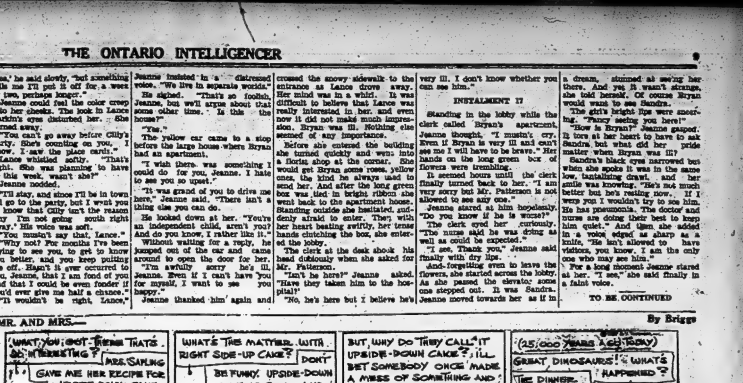
It seemed hours until the clerk finally turned back to her. "I am very sorry but Mr. Patterson is not allowed to see any one."

Jeanne stared at him hopelessly. "Do you know if he is worse?"

The clerk eyed her curiously. "The nurse said he was doing as well as could be expected."

"I see. Thank you," Jeanne said finally with dry lips.

And forgetting even to leave the flowers she started across the lobby. As she passed the elevator some one stepped out. It was Sandra. Jeanne moved towards her as if in a dream, stunned at seeing her there. And yet it wasn't strange, she told herself. Of course Bryan would want to see Sandra.



The girl's bright lips were sneering. "Fancy seeing you here!"

"How is Bryan?" Jeanne gasped. It was all her heart to have to ask Sandra, but what did her pride matter when Bryan was ill?

Sandra's black eyes narrowed but when she spoke it was in the same low, taunting drawl. And her smile was knowing. "He's not much better, has been raving now. If I were you I wouldn't try to see him. He asks pneumonia. The doctor and nurse are doing their best to keep him quiet." And then she added in a voice dripping with sharp as a knife, "He isn't allowed to have visitors, you know. I am the only one who may see him."

For a long moment Jeanne stared at her. "I see," she said finally in a faint voice.

HOPES DIM IN SEARCH FOR EARHART PLANE

Disappointment is Felt As No Traces Are Found Of the Missing Airplane

Search is Shifted 200 Miles to South of Howland

HUSBAND HOPEFUL

Rumors Today of Finding Trace of Lost Airship Unfounded

DISAPPOINTMENT . . .

San Francisco, July 6 (AP)—Coast Guard headquarters here announced today it was investigating a report on Oakland, Calif., amateur has picked up a radio message purporting to come from Amelia Earhart's plane and again picking up position 281 miles north of Howland Island. The name of the amateur was not announced by the Coast Guard pending further inquiry.

Washington, July 6 (AP) — The Coast Guard cutter Itasca reported at 1:34 p.m. E.D.T. today had no information about the Earhart plane.

Hopes Flash Out.

Honolulu, July 6 (AP)—Hopes for the rescue of Amelia Earhart abruptly rocketed today, then suddenly flashed out when the United States Coast Guard cutter Itasca reported it apparently had mistaken a meteor for flares from the missing aviatrix and flier's plane.

Despite the severe disappointment the search continued today, with a prospect that a change in weather would shift from a point 280 miles north of Howland Island to the Phoenix Islands, an equal distance southward.

Hopes Rise and Fall.

Hope of immediate rescue of Miss Earhart and Fred Noonan, navigator of her $80,000 "Flying Laboratory", soared when the Itasca at first overheard at 4:68 a.m. E.D.T. radioing the plane:

"We can see your flares; are coming toward you."

Forty-five minutes later, came a second message:

"We see your flares. Go ahead."

Then came anti-climax when officers of the cutter reported the lookout had been mistaken. Red flashes for a flare and later, their decision it was "probably a meteor."

Swallow Strikes Youth in Eye

Vincent Keller, youthful resident of Dundas Street East, laid claim today for the strangest accident of the year.

Sailing from the government dock last evening, Vincent had slowed his tackle preparatory to going home with the day's catch. He had risen from the pier and turned when a blinding object struck him squarely in the eye.

It was a low flying swallow which dropped feebly on the ground before the youth who today was assured no permanent harm had been done.

Tiny Howland Island, goal of Miss Earhart's 2,570-mile flight from Lae, New Guinea, was 281 miles southeast of those reported seeing the lights. Flares called by the missing pilots could not have been sighted by both.

Search Is Shifted.

The phantom lights were seen where a fragmentary radio message yesterday indicated the flare, forced down by gasoline shortage, were flaming.

Miss Earhart's husband, George Palmer Putnam, however, was so firmly convinced that a radio operator misinterpreted that the San Francisco Coast Guard station picked up a message to searching ships of three words asking them to shift their hunt 200 miles southward of Howland Island.

Putnam based his opinion on the inability of his wife's radio to operate when the plane is in the water. The Lockheed plant, builders of the plane, verified his opinion concerning the radio.

Safe On Island, Husband Thinks.

Putnam has had persistently to the belief she reached one of the tiny Atolls which dot the equatorial Pacific. None of them is within 500 miles north of Howland.

Later, Frank Bell, radio man for San Francisco Coast Guard communications officer, radioed the following: Honolulu, nearing the scene from Honolulu, a suggestion that the warship send her three planes today to fly over the Phoenix Islands.

Officials here also began to share the belief Miss Earhart, if alive, has found a temporary haven in some remote reef. They indicated the search would veer toward Phoenix.

Flying Boats Cross Atlantic East and West

Same Course, in Opposite Directions Followed by Planes

SURVEY VOYAGES

British And American Bids For New Line of Transportation

By HAROLD E. FREEMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer
Botwood, Nfld., July 6 (Cable) —Droning steadily across the Atlantic from Foynes, Ireland, the Imperial Airways flying boat Caledonia roared over this town early today and dropped to the water 13 hours after leaving the other port.

The powerful ship sarited two hours before she was expected but it was not long before the crowd swelled to thousands to cheer as the soaring three of the plane slipped into the blue waters of Botwood harbor.

Western Flights Longer

Passing the Pan-American Clipper III that took off from Botwood yesterday on another experimental flight across the Atlantic to Foynes, the Caledonia made approximately 3 1-3 hours longer on the flight from east to west than the Clipper was on the trip.

Flying high, the Imperial Airways plane passed over the town with the her engines roaring. She banked out over the river, swooped back inland and out again.

Finally straightening out, the giant flying boat headed down stream into the light wind and made a perfect landing. Minutes after she first roared over the town

Two observers who had homed overhead as the flying boat landed slowly turned her nose toward the dock.

American Clippers Voyage

Foynes, Irish Free State, July 6 —(AP)—The Pan-American Clipper III landed here today after a 1,295 mile survey flight over the North Atlantic from Botwood, Nfld. The flight took 13 hours and 40 minutes.

The Giant plane, carrying Capt. Harold E. Gray and a crew of seven, alighted on the River Shannon at 10:50 a.m., British Summer Time (6:50 a.m., E.D.T.).

The roar of the Clipper's engines was heard by crowds who came by the hundreds waiting to greet her at the quayside.

The satellite had been practically blotted from view of the onlooking ship by a swirling mist, lifted by a stroke of luck. rain clouds cleared over the Foynes Clipper, a silvery figure beneath the black clouds, flew over Monument Hill—

Journey Uneventful

A Cheers Greet Clipper

A waiting launch, with very light maritime signal of red and green, gave the Clipper landing directions.

A burst of cheering almost drowned out the order of the engines as the Clipper circled over Foynes Island. Then she reduced her speed and made a graceful, flat landing on the Shannon.

"Bravo! Bravo! Welcome to Ireland!"

Capt. Gray was smiling happily as he came ashore to receive the greetings of Eamon de Valera, the Valera of the Irish Free State, Sean Lemass, Minister of Commerce and Industry, and officials of the British Air Ministry and Imperial Airways.

Simultaneous Entries

But 15 hours earlier the Imperial Airways Flying Boat Caledonia had left Foynes on a westward flight to Botwood, Britain's first simultaneous entry in the daring race to conquer the Atlantic Airways for transportation.

"It was a pleasant, enjoyable trip," Capt. Gray said.

New Era in Aviation

Commercial Courses Surveyed Over Many Seas

Two mighty flying boats successfully charted a route for regular commercial flights between North America and Europe today.

The British Imperial Airways flying boat Caledonia were stopped at Botwood hop of 1,200 miles from Foynes, Ireland, to Botwood, Nfld., in 13 hours and 10 minutes.

The United States-owned Pan American Clipper III landed at Foynes after a 1,900-mile hop from Botwood, making the ocean jump in 13 hours and 40 minutes.

Neither passengers nor mail was carried.

Meantime, Imperial Airways flying boat Caledonia was being readied at Durban, South Africa yesterday with two tons of first class mail carried at the ordinary diversified rate of three cents per half-ounce. The Centurion left England on the 7,200-mile flight June 29.

$10,000 Loss From Cyclone

Manitoba Village of Minitonas Suffers Heavily

Regina, July 6 (CP)—A cyclone caused damage estimated at $10,000 in the village of Minitonas, in northwestern Manitoba. The roof of N. Netherton's general store was carried half a block and $5,000 damage was done to the building and contents. Mr. Netherton's residence and elevator was moved six inches on its foundations.

Dwellings, garages and other buildings, including the United church, were damaged extensively and more than half the trees in the town park and on the streets were uprooted. No one was reported injured but a number had narrow escapes as a pastured cow which had to be destroyed.

Miles of telephone poles farm buildings and other property were destroyed when a 60-mile-an-hour gale struck the Canora district in Saskatchewan on Monday.

Visibility was reduced to a minimum. Damage to crops alone was estimated at $25,000.

Terrific Wind Storm.

A terrific wind and dust storm in Kelliher, southwest of Canora, caused considerable damage. Mrs. Ross, year-old boy, Douglas Lyle, escaped drowning when a dyke broke in which he had taken refuge was blown into Birch Lake. His father rushed into the water and dragged him to safety.

No loss estimated to have attained a velocity of 80 miles an hour blew in the school windows and crushed in many dwellings. Practically south wall of the brick and tile structure was driven against the street.

The curling rink was lifted from its foundations and deposited across a two-storey house was strewn across the main highway.

Blasting rain and a scorching wind blasted previous heat records into the discard in Saskatchewan as already dry-as-a-bone drought area. Record for all Canada was set yesterday at Weyburn, Saskatchewan city, where the official reading showed a temperature of 114, believed to exceed by four degrees the previous record of 110, held jointly by Estevan, Sask., and Dauphin, Man.

Skies filled with clouds in southern Saskatchewan but no rain came. Instead, a vicious dust storm rolled over the south country, bringing a sudden drop in temperature, then moments cooling off 10 degrees in about that many minutes.

Picton's Fete And Reunion Are History

Memorable Last Day And Night Spent in County Town

PICTON, July 6—Picton's Centennial Celebration and Prince Edward Old Boys' Re-union is over. Last night while a crowd numbering well into the thousands milled and jostled along brilliantly lighted streets, crowded into Exhibition Park and made whoopee in the spacious Armouries to the tunes of a popular dance orchestra, three hundred musicians representing ten bands of the county district wrote finish to the official celebration when they closed and played the National Anthem in the accompaniment of a blazing cacophony of fireworks overhead in display.

The band tattoo and general carnivalism of last night, and the afternoon horse race meet which was featurist by the presence of and a brief congratulatory address by the Hon. W. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative Party leader, marked what was perhaps one of the most interesting celebrations of its nature ever held in Ontario. From the time the starter's gun sent a galaxy of speeding ponies down the mile way over Picton's beautiful race-course Tuesday to the last parade this Wednesday morning, until the last weary merrymaker reeled a parting good-bye at the station this morning, there was not a dull moment.

Fitting Climax

The five day celebration was a fitting climax to the splendid work of the Centennial committee and a large number of enthusiastic citizens. Months of hard work, organizing and planning and filling reward in the thousands which poured into Picton for the gathering of the continent to join in Ontario's first centennial, and to renew acquaintance with the old timers, scenes and faces they knew in their boy and girlhood.

And a far-seeing group of local citizens saw to it that their time would be fully occupied. A sequence of programs, the scene for which from the thrill and color of a beautiful Floridian speedboat crashing across the finish line to a world's record, to the personal thrills of Prince minister Mackenzie King and their re-unions in the little red schoolhouses of the county, and once more re-lived the days of yesteryear, occupied the time and attention of the throngs which converged to the "Garden County" during the five days.

There was no let-down to the general interest and enjoyment and worked in a gradually increasing crescendo, to culminate in a smashing climax with the fireworks display last night, and this, morning which included a beautifully arranged and colorful parade in which thousands joined hands and sang "Auld Lang Syne" outside the armouries.

Evidences of Co-operation

To the most unappreciative and undiscerning visitor who attended Picton's fete and reunion the citizens had joined to the fullest extent in the co-operative spirit of the means at their command with the various committees in charge, to which end hundreds were two of the most outstanding events in the history of the town and county. A magic hand, it seemed, waved an especially magic paint brush and appeared from nowhere, and almost instantaneously, the town was decorated in a blaking mass of colour. The business section assumed fairyland like proportions as a myriad colored electric lights twinkled from shop and building fronts. Special police officers were drafted into service to handle the traffic problems like veterans.

Possible Compromise Seen in Modification Italo - German Demands

British Government Has Made its Own Position 'Quite Safe'

COMMITTEE TO MEET

No Evidence Found Poison Gas Shipped From Germany

London, July 6 (AP)—Foreign Secretary Eden indicated in the House of Commons today a possible compromise in the Spanish non-intervention deadlock, saying Great Britain will consider "any other proposals which are just and fair".

Eden said a full session of the 27-member non-intervention committee was to be held Friday and that this should allow "a little time for reflection on the serious issues involved."

This was taken to mean Germany and Italy might "confer" with a view to modifying their present demands.

Seriousness of Delay Referred To.

Opposition Leader Clement Attlee asked Eden if he realized the seriousness of delay" in forming a new program.

The Foreign Secretary replied the government "have made their own position quite safe".

"We're not only made our own proposals," Eden declared, "we've declared our readiness to consider any other proposals that are just and fair."

Viscount Cranborne, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said the British Consul-General at Hamburg had found no evidence to justify rumors that poison gas had been shipped to Spain from the German port.

Capt. Boomer Is Recalled

Visions of Old Sailing Days Revived by Inquiry

Visions of old sailing days and hardy lake captains in this section were recalled today by a query addressed to the "Town Clerk" of this city from Mrs. Alma Smith, Toronto minister, Mass., regarding any information concerning the late Captain Boomer, who resided in this city for a number of years.

The letter contained the information that Captain Boomer was born in Rhode Island, had married Mary Hatfield some time after the 1800's and had taken up residence in Belleville from which port he sailed. Captain Boomer was fond of the couple, Mary Abigail Boomer. All are believed to be buried in this section, but descendants may still be here.

Fewer Crows

There are fewer crows in the country to eat this year's coming crop of tender chicken—in farms in this district at least.

That is the opinion of Albert T. Wender, Rawdon Township's closeto-nature farmer who during the month of June, 1936, shot 11 of the steady decrease in the big-winged, corn eating birds.

"Rawdon in the past has been notoriously noted for its crows. But this year I've seen but a few," he said.

Mr. Wender's opinion is borne out by reports of other farmers in the district at least.

Japs, Russians Fight All Day

Both Governments Issue Protests As Result

Hsinking, Manchoukuo, July 6 (AP)—The Japanese army declared today it had defeated a sizeable detachment of Russian troops in a clash long battle on the disputed eastern frontier of Manchoukuo and Siberia.

The government of Manchoukuo immediately made strong representations to Moscow over the renewed outbreak of hostilities.

Soviet troops, the Japanese army charged, launched two attacks against combined Japanese-Manchoukuoan border guards Monday morning near the little frontier town of Chihsinhan. An army communique declared that the Russians entered five and wounded one Japanese soldier before the assaults were repulsed.

Claim Heavy Guns Used.

Throughout the day, the army asserted, the Soviet troops brought up heavy artillery and in the evening started a bombardment of the Japanese-Manchoukuoan side of the border.

At the same time the army spokesman said, an attack in force was made by a detachment of the Soviet soldiers.

Moscow, July 6 (AP)—Soviet Russia protested today to Japan against alleged occupation of Bolshoi Island in the Amur River by Manchoukuoan troops.

Benedict Kozlovsky, Chief of the Far Eastern Division of the Soviet Foreign Commissariat, summoned Mikoto Kawai, Japanese Counsellor to a midnight conference for a discussion of the reputed violation of an evacuation agreement between Russia and Japan.

Agreement of Evacuation.

That agreement, reached July 2, provided for mutual evacuation by forces of both countries of disputed islands in the Amur River, between Siberia and Manchoukuo.

The Japanese counsellor pleaded he had no information of the alleged Manchoukuoan occupation of Bolshoi Island. He added, however, that if Manchoukuoan troops had, indeed, crossed the river they went to protect Manchoukuoan residents.

CHILD RESCUED PURSUING BALL

Rubber play balls while excellent toys for shallow or safe water are dangerous playthings for smaller children who often wander into deep water in pursuit of the wind driven ball, it is pointed out by Lifeguard Geo. Bernard, now busy caring for the daily hundreds of children using the Victoria Park. Last evening one hurried rescue was made when a youthful swimmer attempted to retrieve his lost ball from the deep end.

FARMERS NEED HELP IN FIELDS

Harvesting of one of the largest hay crops seen in Belleville district in some years is alleviating to some extent the unemployment situation on the farms. Farmers who have suffered from a labor shortage practically all spring and summer are now employing men by the day to help them with their crops, according to officials of the local Employment Bureau. Ten placements were made on one day, but there are still a number of jobs to be filled. With the end of pea and hay crops in the process of harvest, more farmers are being hard put to do local work satisfactorily without assistance.

STRAW OF RYE IS VERY LONG

"Today rains will not produce the length of straw it was at first anticipated," a prominent agriculturist stated today as he spoke of the fact that there has been abundant rain, since March 1st, with green over two and one half feet in the majority of cases. Winter grain however has showed an unexpected length especially rye, but now the spring-sown grain is heading in a head out. Prospects look very well for a good crop of grain even yet the straw we first anticipated," he concluded.

PREFER CITY SHELTER TO THE STARRY SKY

Despite the fact sleeping out-of-doors is quite in vogue at this particular season of the year apparently all brackets are not conversant with the practice of slumber beneath a star-lit sky, with only the heavens for a blanket, as last night six or more knights of the road were afforded lodging sleeping quarters at the police station.

No arrests were necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours, the humidity perhaps was attending to the diminishing of petty crime.

Minor accidents were also reported to be at the minimum.

While patrolling their beats last night local police found the door of a garage adjacent to a local bank insecure. Investigations proved the incident to be one of accident and no harm resulted before the door was made secure.

It is estimated that the cost of lighting the park with simple standard equipment is in the vicinity of $1,000.

Bass Fishing Reported Poor

Though the season has been open for days bass fishing has been admittedly poor in this and other sections.

Today local fishermen gave an interesting report on the reluctance of the fish to bite on soft baits or strike at the tempting being offered them so plentifully.

"The bay is full of shad. And the fish have gorged themselves until they're lazy and refuse to bite. It's the same thing in Consecon Lake is any account," declared one well known member of the fraternity. "But the bay is full of them," he assured.

Courtesy Cards To Help Visitors Keep Parking Rules

Courtesy cards for next summer will be issued to residents of the city in an ever thickening stream that the quick answer in intimation to visit Belleville, it is estimated by officials of the local Automobile Association who will bring this question up.

The cards, simple in type would carry all brief information regarding the city for the convenience of visitors and will be distributed out, preferably by officers of the law, who have charge of traffic control.

The scheme has been newly instituted this year by leading cities of the United States and is growing into and there has found much favor, those who have hitherto replaced traffic tickets given out by police for minor infractions of traffic laws caused through an honest public knowledge of the particular rule broken. It is also said to be a simple sentence thanking visitors for observing the regulations.

"The idea has merit, and though it has been proposed before by the Chamber it has not been instituted in the manner we should like to see adopted," commented Mr. J. J. Herity, manager of the local office.

Shelter Empty Of Wards Now

Thirty years ago the Children's Aid Society of this City an, County was inaugurated and since then hundreds of children have been helped and given a chance in life. The Superintendent's office recently placed eight in foster homes.

Mr. Robertson says that according out plan of the Society is proving to be most beneficial to the child and it is the child that counts. We must give it the best, that is in our power to give it the chance to be a real asset to the community, and we are proud of the success to which the Society have been able to place our wards.

Our foster parents have entered into the spirit of our ideals for the child giving it the best in the surface of the child placed with them being real co-operation with the Society in their endeavour to improve and lift the child to a higher plane and to give it a credit to itself and every one interested.

"The private home is the natural element for every child, that is why the Provincial Department advocate all wards be placed in such homes. The boarding system works out at less cost than institutional." In the free and boarding home they secure essential elements of training available in and peculiar to the private home and here again the foster parents prove their adaptability to the many problems in the development of the child.

"Personality development is much more difficult to secure than adequate provision for the physical needs for the child. Having placed the last three children the Shelter is now empty, and every child in the society's care will have a happy summer vacation. The Eastern Star members again manifested their interest in the children by going to the Shelter recently and giving them a real special treat.

JOHN TRETHOWAN MAY

John Trethowan May, beloved father of Mrs. (Rev.) J. S. McMullen, was born in Truro, Cornwall, England, November the 12th, 1847, and departed this life, May 31st, 1937, after a brief sickness from the home of his son-in-law Mrs. J. A. Knox, 34 Louisa Street, Barrie, Ontario, in the 90th year of his age.

Born of a seafaring family, Mr. May entered The Merchant Marine Service at thirteen years of age, and after some ten years at sea, during which he visited many of the great seaports of the world, he spent three years in the Kimberley Diamond Mines of South Africa, from which he returned and was united in marriage with Miss Annie Bryan of the Home of Rose Hillyar, Toure House, Torpoint, Cornwall, September, the 22nd, 1872. This union was blessed by four daughters and two sons—Mrs. J. Knox, Barrie; Mrs. (Rev.) J. S. McMullen, Mrs. J. A. Dench and E. J. May, Toronto; Sergeant-Major Charles Trethowan, Mrs. Percy White, of Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. May coming to Canada in 1874, where their entire family was born, settled first on land near Brockridge, which Mr. May cleared and improved considerably, after which he spent many years on fruit farm, afterwards carring on successful farming operations for a time at Port Hope, Ratuborn and Saskatoon. After relieving Mr. and Mrs. May spent some years in Trenton, and Saskatoon; going to Barrie in 1919, where they resided for a golden wedding, on September the 22nd., 1922, and where Mrs. May, beloved by all who knew her passed to her well-earned reward in December 1935.

Mr. May, who was Justice of the Peace, and Lay preacher for many years, was regarded by all as a man of clean pure life, strong convictions, always generous, a fine sense of integrity and of a devout evangelistic spirit. Brought up in the Plan Baptist Church, assisted by the Rev. E. E. Lord of Collier Street United Church, Barrie. The pall-bearers were six nephews and grandsons, Cecil H. McMullen, Harvard J. McMullen, Percy May, Lloyd May, Frank Knox, and Gerald White.

A wonderful spirit of resignation, comfort and consolation, pervaded these last religious rites in the home and at the beautiful Barrie Cemetery, for everyone knew the deep gratitude of this aged pilgrim, for a long gracious life of blessing and opportunity, and of a life so faithfull with to depart and be with Christ which is far better than to live and endure the ills of extreme old age. The loving sentiments of this man of God are well reflected in Newman's comforting stanza:

"So long Thy Power hath blessed me, sure it still
"Will lead me on,
"O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent, till
"The night is gone,
"And with the morn those angel faces smile
"Which I have loved, long since, and lost, awhile."

NEW YEAR OPENS FOR ROTARY CLUB

New Officers Installed—Excellent Reports Presented—Boys Work And Crippled Children Work Main Objectives

The first meeting of the eighteenth year for Belleville Rotary Club was held Monday in the Hotel Quinte with a large attendance. Past President Joe Shortt presented the gavel to President-elect Fred Douglas, who took over the chair for the current year. Reports presented from the various committees showed a healthy, optimistic, and aggressive state of affairs in the club and special attention paid to boys' work and work for the care and cure of crippled children. Harry Ackerson presented the boys' work report which showed extensive activity in promoting the interests of boys, including the boys' camp on Twelve Lake in which the club takes a deep and active interest. Boys who get into serious trouble and come within the purview of the police are also helped by Belleville Rotary Club and assisted to live down error and become good citizens—helping with educational facilities, clothing and employment.

Crippled children work, the club's major activity, was reported by the Chairman of the Crippled Children Committee, J. Symons, who, a human living document showing a wonderful work being conducted for the unfortunates. Children from four years of age have been treated and helped, some one hundred per cent cured. Adults stricken with disease and lack of funds have also been helped to self-supporting status, even artificial limbs being furnished. Latest treatment in Toronto, and constant home visiting part. One boy with foot amputated is now able to walk, leap and run with an artificial foot, play ball, swim, etc. So proficient is he in the use of the artificial foot that the makers-of-users brought him to Toronto to demonstrate as an exposition of modern artificial limbs. He acquitted himself with credit and had many 'king' words for the Belleville Rotary Club. Twenty-nine crippled children were given Christmas cheer. Five hundred and seventy-six crippled children have been treated this far, some of them still under treatment, and several more to be added to this year.

Past President Joe Shortt was presented with a Past President's Rotary International pin as behalf of the Club by Past President Bert Boyce, who voiced the appreciation of the members for the splendid work performed by the recipient as president.

Appreciation of the good work performed by committee chairmen and members during the year was voiced by Past President W. R. Deacon who complimented the club generally on one of the best years of its history. Seven new members were accepted during the year.

Rotary International reports at the meeting during the year of 256 clubs in the world with an increase in membership of 8,000 to 176,000 members.

New clubs in Ontario include one in Englehart, Ontario's farthest north Rotary Club.

Committee chairmen Harley Illsley, Marmora, Harry Forest, Boyce, Neal reported.

Next Monday the Rotary meeting will be held at the Boys' Camp, Moira Lake, cars leaving Hotel Quinte at 5.30 p.m.

Belleville Rotarians will try their skill fishing in Rice Lake against Oshawa Rotary Club, Wednesday, July 21, for suitable placarding honors, including the challenge cup won by Blake Ivan in the contest last season in Quinte-waters between the same clubs.

TWO NATIONS

The proximity of the two natal days, Dominion Day and Independence Day, brings to the mind the thought which cannot be avoided that it is unique that two peoples, of the same race largely, have grown up continued friend though both had their origin in hectic times, the United States in a period of deep unrest which extended into a successful revolution, the other, Canada, (at least a large portion of it) resulting from the peaceful invasions of United Empire Loyalists and Confederation coming forward of its own impulse but naturally speeded up by the ganders seen in the Fenian Raids. But no Fenian Raid and not even the U.S. Civil War in which the North and the South were engaged could bring Canada and the United States to look with anything but peaceful eyes upon one another.

What would have happened had there been no Declaration of Independence, it is futile to think upon, for no one can say what would otherwise have been the developments. But this belief may be taken at true that as the bundle of rods of ancient Roman ceremonies was stronger than a large solid rod and as veneered woods are much more strong than unveneered, so the United States and Canada, distinct and with their own ideals, make a stronger solidarity than if they had been but one, if such they would have remained.

THE SEASON'S HEIGHT NEAR

The season is at its height when the motorcar is in full swing. Last weekend proved the fact that there is no such thing as a saturation point in regard to the number of motorcars which thread the highways, the arrows flashing to their target under the new speed regulations.

The world has changed from the day of the first few cars, when the motor world had not come into being and when the only cars were but freaks at which buggy riders could smile and horses shy. But now in the throngs of hundreds upon hundreds of motors, horses would have strange emotions, if they were permitted on such roads.

The motor has taken the human mind with it and the world today thinks largely of wheel-traffic, though it does give attention to the fanlike propellers which drive the huge passenger ships or argosies of freight through the air across the country.

Will the same domination come with the airplane as with the motorcar? The motorcar has made itself so necessary that it has changed the whole outlook of man. Speeds of fifty miles upwards an hour were not contemplated by nature but invention has made man used to them and despite the natural handicap of the eye, the eye does take in the fast moving panorama, so different from that which was photographed upon the retina of the brain a few generations ago.

REARMAMENT AND PEACE

With all the rearmament and the talk of war, there is a feeling held in many quarters that these days' events show that no nation feels itself ready for war and all it brings. That which might have looked as a good opportunity for a flare-up which might become a conflagration, the situation on the Amur River between Russia and Japan, has eased greatly. The endless talk of European possibilities, goes on but war does not break out.

Nobody is evidently ready in his own strength and in allied strength or no one is anxious to rush into the serried ranks of battle, for there is a picture on memory's wall of something which happened back in 1914 and left a wound which is unhealed. Nations went into the Great War not with the present day knowledge of what it meant.

Today in Europe there is much talk of what may be. Then too Britain and France have unitedly spoken in a way to bind other nations have not been accustomed and in common language it looks much like the calling of a bluff.

HORNS VS. COURTESY

Impatience never got anybody anywhere except into trouble. Too many motorists expect an automobile horn to work miracles. They forget it was made for only one purpose: A horn should warn. There is nothing quite so irritating as a horn-tooting motorist, with the possible exception of a mosquito in a sleeping porch. Both merit the same consideration.

An ancient Chinese philosopher said: "The big voice betokens the small mind." Five thousand years have not altered this truth, although it is expressed on our streets and highways today with less grace and more profanity.

Impatient motorists should remember that an angry bull is feared for his horns, and that "TRY COURTESY" will make motoring a lot pleasanter and a lot safer than constant heavy-handed horn-tooling.

MODERN TOYS ARE AN INDICATION OF HOW FAR THE YOUTH OF TODAY IS REMOVED FROM THE YOUTH OF YESTERDAY. Grownups will remember when as boys they had to whittle their own boats and make them ship-shape and seaworthy, many neat jobs being turned out. Many mothers will remember when rag dolls were in fashion and when a real honest-to-goodness store doll with waxen features and near real hair was a sensation, leading on from the wonderful doll which could close its eyes when put to bed to the miracle doll which could say "Mama". Rag dolls are a thing of the past and dolls today are works of art. Dad's whittled boats of his youth have given way to boats with out-board motors which will travel at a good clip when wound up. While Dad made his own sail boats and rigged the sails, today Junior can buy beautiful sailing yachts in any size, all ready rigged out and ready for the water. Home-made bats and balls were not scarce, either, in the old days. Junior now does not even know the joys of going barefoot in summer and mingling the joys of cool contact with mother earth, squidging the mud between the toes after a thunder shower, wading in the creek, with nursing stone bruises or cuts from grass, or displaying a big bandage on the big toe with limp to match—sure, those were the happy days—horse and buggy days.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking and thinking in his private chair and ma was looking around for dust, saying, I was reading an intruiting article by P. Willis Hinkle in a magazine. He claims the average amount of money spent by the average man on cigars and cigarettes and smoking tobacco would solve the high cost of living overnite if it was diverted into different channels, she said.

P. Willis Hinkle is a muddle headed moron without enough ebullition to understand his own drivel, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum, P. Willis Hinkle is read and enjoyed every day by millions of people, and who are you to criticise millions of people?

I'm just the man to do it, now that you ask me, pop said and ma said, P. Willis Hinkle claims that what the average man spends on cigars alone would pay his family's butcher bills, which are always over for ice cream for dinnerr 3 times a week.

By golliss that's intriuing, pop said, and ma said, Well I'm glad I'd never look at any article by P. Willis Hinkle in anything but a sneering way, but his silly idea reminds me of an article I was reading with really a lot of sense to it. It was about women who play bridge, and it gave a lot of facts and figures to prove that if the average woman gave up her evening bridge for one week she would have time and money to bake 3 strawberry shortcake, darn 46 holes in 23 socks, read 2 gossip books of 96 pages each, put up the hole in the elbow of her husband's old sweater that she was going to throw away, repair all the electric cords that are out of order, make herself a becoming hat and give herself a permanent wave, he said, and ma said, Now Willyum, there's much in this article, stressing the truth for your own purposes.

Never heard of it, pop said.

And he got in back of the sporting page and stayed there.

School History of S. S. No. 11, Rawdon.

The first reference to the school land is in a deed dated Nov. 11, 1850 given by Hon. Minahil Dundas and his wife of Belleville to William Courtney, Lot No. 4 in the 9th concession of the township of Rawdon in which he reserves the lot given to the school trustees for school purposes.

A little log school was built a little to the north of the present one. Mr. John Courtney was the first teacher of which any trace could be found who taught in this school. The inhabitants at that time were all Scotch of Mason. The trustees were William Hanley, Sr., Robert Mason and James Cooke. Church was held once a month in the log school and on occasion of the township of Rawdon in which he reserves the lot given to the school trustees for school purposes.

A little log school was built a little to the north of the present one. Mr. John Courtney was the first teacher of which any trace could be found who taught in this school. The inhabitants at that time were all Scotch of Mason. The trustees were William Hanley, Sr., of Stirling, and James Cooke. Church was held once a month in the log school and the books are "The Wild Man of the West" and "Jack Ross' Rocky Mountains," and Walter Eaveson's "Forty Days at St. Winfred's", Margaret McDonald's composition was the first test.

In 1867 the present schoolhouse was built. Improvements on the school are:

In 1881 it was generally repaired and new windows put in. There are two windows on each side and one on each side of the porch at the front. In 1888 a new wood-house was erected. In 1907 all new upto-date desks and teacher's desk were purchased. In 1913 new black boards were put in. In 1923 a new hardwood floor was put in.

The school equipment consisted of a Babcock Tester to be used in agriculture. It has an up-to-date library containing good books for young and old. A Hallowe'en concert was started. A Hallowe'en concert was put on by the school pupils and the younger members of the community. The proceeds of this went towards the purchase of a gramophone for the school. Ever since money has been added to this account for the use of the pupils for treats, etc., at Christmas and summer holidays. This is kept separate from the funds of the school board.

Many former pupils of our school have made good. Chief of these is the late Hon. J. R. Cooke. He was born in September, 1866, in Rawdon Township, Hastings County. He received his education at S. S. No. 11, Rawdon. He was a member of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario since 1923 and became the chairman in 1931. His work with rural Hydro stands as one of the supreme achievements. He saw education as a means of improving life, and to that end he made an intense study of rural and urban school problems. He was at one time suggested as a possible Minister of Education because of his abiding interest, but he was named to the Hydro instead. He was an affable, kindly, thoughtful and considerate man whom everyone loved to meet.

Springbrook, June 30, 1937

Dear Miss Morrison:—

We, your pupils of the past three years have gathered here this afternoon to spend a social hour with you prior to your departure from our midst. Here we have spent many happy hours together in our old school work and our play and we feel that we cannot depart from us without first expressing our appreciation of the efforts you have made to make our studies not only educative but a pleasure. Although we have been very trying at times, with our grouches and failings you have been very patient with our short-comings and we feel that we are losing not only a good teacher but a good friend.

We shall always remember you as such and trust that in the near future you may be able to visit us again in our homes.

To show our appreciation we ask you to accept this Bible as a slight token of our gratitude and affection. May you find pleasure in the reading of it.

Signed on behalf of your pupils of the Bateman Settlement School.

"You are leaving behind you a sweet memory of the pleasant times we have spent together.

"In presenting this address I assure you on behalf of your pupils that as a loving teacher you will always be remembered with feelings of the highest regard.

"We know we have been disobedient and thoughtless by times, causing you unnecessary worries, but please remember we shall try and profit by your kind teachings. Your diligent and untiring efforts for the welfare of your pupils has been an inspiration to us all. You have given your best to make a success of the responsibility with which you were entrusted.

Observes 25th Anniversary Of Ordination

Plainfield—On Sunday, Rev. T. F. Everson observed the 25th anniversary of his ordination into the ministry of the church and spent the sermon period relating some of the outstanding experiences of those years. Among which were mentioned a period of four years on one charge when there had been a death among his people on an average of one every three weeks which record was, however, exceeded a year ago when there was a death on an average of one every week days for two weeks.

The speaker made mention of numerous things surprising things, unusual things; the wonderful confidence of people in the ministry and paid tribute to their hospitality, liberality and wonderful gratitude in service. During the evening service four children were presenting for baptism, namely, Harold Mason, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Mason of Bellville; Nancy Ellen Bertrand daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orland Bertrand, Corbyville, grandchildren of the minister; John Allan Hazard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hazard in Rossmore; Donald Lott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rose Lott.

Mr. Wesley Parks, Mr. Robert A. Hall and Mr. William Marshall spent Thursday afternoon at Shannonville.

Mr. Norman Latta, Dartford, was called to the bedside of his father, Mr. Gilbert Latta, on Wednesday on account of illness. Mr. Latta is somewhat improved.

Mr. and Mrs. William Sellek and little daughter, of Peterboro, called on friends here on Thursday.

Mrs. Iona King returned to her home in Belleville on Tuesday after a visit with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James Gilbert, Latta.

Mrs. Fred Prindle spent several days last week with friends in Foxboro.

Mr. Orland Bertrand sold new potatoes in Belleville, on Saturday, some of which measured three inches in diameter.

Attacks Upon C. N. Railways Are Resented by Personnel

S. W. Fairweather, Director of Kiwanis Club at Kingston —He Points Out C. N. R. Development

Bureau of Economics Replies in Address Before —Re Points Out C. N. R. Development

Kingston, July 5.—"The recurring attacks upon the Canadian National System, with the accompanying flood of half-truths, distorted statements and worse, have bred a feeling of resentment in the personnel of the Railway. The desire of the employees is only that the public shall have a fair and true picture of the situation." This was one of the declarations made by S. W. Fairweather, Director of the Bureau of Economics, Canadian National Railways, in an address delivered to representatives of service clubs here.

It was hard to escape the conviction, the speaker said, that there was a campaign to break down the confidence of the people of Canada in the Canadian National Railways. It was interesting to note that most of the critics produced the same plan to meet the alleged desperate condition, namely, that the Canadian National as a publicly owned and controlled railway system should cease to exist.

Largest Railway Organization

The property which it was hoped to submerge was the largest transportation on the North American continent. It afforded the shortest rail route between eastern and western Canada with lower gradients than any other line between the United States or the Dominion. In the Prairie Provinces it served the most productive part of the country. It crossed the Rocky Mountains at the lowest elevation of any trans-continental line. Its mountain gradients being far more favorable than those on the prairie. It had a double-track main line running like a backbone through Ontario to Quebec and the United States as far west as Chicago and afforded the only all-Canadian route between the Maritime Provinces and the rest of the Dominion. It served directly ninety per cent of the people of Canada and to one or other of which was the only railway available. It lined the Dominion with many of Canada's best markets in the United States. Sixty per cent of the coal produced in Canada depended upon the Canadian National for rail transport. Its forests, its mineral and precious metal mining in recent years had been largely along its lines. It was the greatest factor in serving the forest industries in Canada, originating more newsprint and pulp tonnage than any other railway on the continent. It was difficult, the speaker said, to find any justification for the views expressed by some of the critics that this was a "dead horse" property.

Balance Sheets

"Balance sheets of a national enterprise tell only part of the story", continued Mr. Fairweather, "the rest is to be found in the development of trade and traffic brought about by the construction and operation of the facilities. The people of this country have put millions of dollars invested in improvements to steer transport, such as canals and harbours, most of which is non-revenue producing. The Canadian National, however, can say that the decision to improve these railways was unanimous. By reason of these improved waterways, the development of many large areas of our country has been facilitated, adding to the national wealth. It is to be hoped that the people of Canada will realize, for railways have been a much more decisive factor in the development of Canada than waterways could ever hope to be.

No Over-Railroading

"We also hear a great deal of Canada being over-railroaded. It seems to me that this is an erroneous view. Of those half million settled the Canadian railway issue. It passes my comprehension how a country can go ahead with development stage without a low population per mile of railway. The railway must go in advance of the population, but if the railway taps country which has natural resources, whether it be agricultural, lumbering or mining, populations will come and the development of wealth will take place which will more than justify the railway.

"The latest available figures show that the railway freight traffic per capita in Canada and the United States is from four to five times as great as in such countries as Great Britain, France, Germany, Australia and the Argentine. And although we have a low population per mile of railway each person, so far as railway traffic is concerned, counts as four This is simply another way of saying that the per capita wealth production in Canada is high and that in that wealth production railways play a very important part. The history of the development of capital wealth in Canada parallels the growth in railways, but at a much greater rate. For every dollar of railway capital, Canada has increased her capital wealth twelve dollars.

It was easy, the speaker continued, for the general public to overestimate the importance of the economies to be secured by the elimination of existing railway lines. We should, however, avoid uneconomic duplication of railway facilities in the future.

"You will recall that when the National Transcontinental was built, it ran through a country the northern wilderness. The territory did not look very promising and private railway interests shunned it, a policy which was pursued until the Canadian Industrial development became important. The interests which developed the Nipissing Mines could not induce private railway interests to build into their prospect and turned to the Canadian National Railways. The National Railways had faith in the mineral resources of that country and built the line which now serves Noranda. It now appears that this territory is highly attractive and private railway interests now ought to invade the field. That sort of competition would be restricted. It is an economic crime."

"The Canadian National is frequently attacked because its operating ratio is relatively high and this is true. But a relatively high ratio of business per mile the operating ratio will be high and a low volume of business per mile increases the operating ratio should very rapidly at first, and then thereafter at a slower rate. One of the most striking tests of the efficiency of the Canadian National has been the manner in which the operating ratio has been kept down in spite of business per mile of line.

"Do you know that this property which is so subject to attack by hostile critics paid fifth among all the railway systems of the North American continent in the year 1936 in taxes applicable to interest and dividends? You can't travel with comfort, and you can't be prosperously inefficient.

"Let us examine all the countries of the world and list them in order of their unit cost of transportation. Canada and Canada stands in an extraordinarily favourable position. No other country with a transportation problem at all comparable, hauls an average ton of freight one mile for less charge than two cents—the charge Canada is roughly based. It has always struck me as a curious coincidence that the Canadian people have achieved this position and to be still held as suffering from a railway over-development problem. It may be true that we elect to pay our railway bills partly directly and partly in the form of subsidies and bonuses, but if we review the whole situation in the perspective of the national wealth production and service in dollars and cents that the amount by which we fail to expand a bill by direct charges amounts to one cent per dollar of our national wealth production, it is hard to view it as something which is crushing and unbearable.

"As long as depressed trade and distrust in international affairs continue exist, the property cannot be expected to earn in full the interest charges which are assessed against it. The management, under such conditions, has very little left to keep costs to a minimum and has been steadily increasing the efficiency of the property. Keep in mind the essential public services which the railways perform and the really great potential earning power of the property.

"To be a defeatist on the Canadian National Railways as a great publicly owned enterprise," concluded Mr. Fairweather, "one needs to be a defeatist on Canada itself."

Miss G. Hogle Leaves for Tour Of British Isles

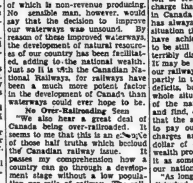
Miss Geraldine Hogle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Hogle of Glen Miller, and Miss June Bonisteel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Bonisteel, Trenton, students of Trenton High School left aboard the Duchess of Bedford, from Montreal on Friday en route to Glasgow and a summer long tour of Great Britain. They were members of a party of several hundred pupils of secondary schools between the ages of fourteen and nineteen under the supervision of a group of teachers. The arrangements were in charge of Major Ney of Trenton, and the party will not return to Canada until August 24th.

On Tuesday of last week, the young people of Glen Miller met at Miss Hogle's home and tendered very lovely and interesting farewell party to the two girls before they left for their long tour. They were presented with a leather bound diary. The good wishes of her friends were expressed in the following address:

Glen Miller, Ont.,

Dear Geraldine,—

We, the young people of Glen Miller, have gathered here this evening, to wish you bon voyage. We are very pleased that you are so fortunate in being able to take this trip. May it be both pleasant and educational.



Before leaving we thought we should both advise you and warn you about a few things. Firstly, we hope you won't come back wearing a monocle. Secondly, always remember the little talks about those romances. You have likely heard that popular song "Twas on the Isle of Capri that I met him", remember how it ends! We hope this doesn't happen to you, Geraldine. Now, if you should happen to meet the King and Queen, you must remember to make your little curtsy. Don't get excited very important. Should you touch Ireland you must have a chance to kiss the Blarney Stone. This is a very tickish task. Be sure it is a strong man who holds your feet. Our last warning concerns France. Do beware of the Frenchmen—especially those with a little black moustache. Although we have taken it upon ourselves to warn you of these facts we are quite certain you will conquer all difficulties.

As a token of our esteem we would like you to accept this small gift. In conclusion we again single out Dorothy Wilson.

Lena Cole.

Signed on behalf of the boys and girls of Glen Miller.

Dorothy Wilson,
Lena Cole.

What is the object of Government control?

The best method of determining the merit of any system of government control of the sale of brewed malt beverages is to apply this simple test.

If the system aims at coercion, at making people "good" against their will, it is not only undemocratic but, experience has shown, it will fail.

If the system aims at education, at making it easier for people to learn self-control, it is on the right track.

Any insistence that the consumption of these wholesome, mildly stimulating beverages should only take place in private behind shut doors, cannot give people the opportunity to learn to use them sanely, decently, and to their own advantage.

When, on the other hand, they are available in public places, under proper control of course, education begins, for then public opinion discourages excess.

Unfortunately it takes time to repair the ravages of prohibition. A whole generation were deprived of the opportunity of learning moderation. So there are still abuses, which government control corrects.

A careful study convinces us that a sound public opinion is growing in favour of reasonable and temperate enjoyment. The present system in fact is proving successful.

In the meanwhile prohibition extremists use the behaviour of the victims of their own legislation as an argument for repeating their fatal mistake.

Paul Muni and Miriam Hopkins Teamed First Time in "The Woman I Love," Thrilling Air Drama

Two of the screen's foremost dramatic stars, a sensational young newcomer, the bid for stardom, and a vibrantly realistic story of the French air forces in the World War are seen in "The Woman I Love," which is being presented on the Belle Theatre screen today and Wednesday matinee daily, commencing at 2.30 p.m. and each evening at 7.30 and 9.15 o'clock.

Woven together with exceptional skill, this drama, based on Joseph Kessell's great French novel, "L'Equipage," not only permits Paul Muni and Miriam Hopkins to do some of their finest characterization, but it also brings forth a brilliant performance on the part of Louis Hayward, a young Britisher who definitely establishes himself as of stellar material.

This trio does nothing by the story —and, indeed, the story is one that makes heavy demands on its players. Subordinating the thrills of aerial combat for a powerfully dramatic romance involving two lovers and a woman married to one of them, "The Woman I Love" works out of the customary "air picture" class into a stratum all its own as a searching study in human emotions, under the stress of war.

The scintillating wit of the tale are simple. Hayward, a young observer just commissioned, is taking a last fling in Paris before going off to the front, and he meets—and falls head over heels in love with—Miss Hopkins Miss Hopkins is Muni's wife, and despite her pass that love as a bigger thing than either of them, returns, embittered, to the squadron.

There Muni's treatise regarding is wrong, but cannot imagine what has happened to his wife's affections. The emotional situations from this point build into a towering structure of sheer dramatic power against the grim setting of air warfare over the Western Front and of shell-lived furlough in the champagne country.

With the mounting crises deftly handled by Director Anatole Litvak and a spectacular production given to the film by Albert Lewis, "The Woman I Love" stands out as one of the truly great pictures of the War.

CANADIAN RESCUED
When a British transport aeroplane crashed and burst into flames in a field at Hounslow, England, seven passengers and the pilot, including Mrs. George Sinclair of Hamilton, Ont., (shown here) were pulled from the wreckage by two farmers working nearby. The crash occurred near Clerendon airport. Mrs. Sinclair was uninjured.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Love in Exile" and "Hollywood Cowboy"

A sparkling and sophisticated comedy, crackling with witty dialogue, called "Love in Exile" is shown as his No. 1 at the Capitol starting Wednesday. The picture is a clever, and-spiritedly adaption of Gene Markey's best-selling novel, Mayfair's "Lorraine," and is further adorned by the brilliant directorial talents of the well known Hollywood director, Alf Werker. A cast of popular stars, including Claire Brook, Helen Vinson and Mary Carlisle contribute top-notch acting against sets and backgrounds mounted with brilliance and authenticity.

The story relates the high, wide, and handsome adventures of a handsome Nice playboy who has lost both his kingdom and the girl he loves and seeks solace in the gay pleasures of the Riviera. He finds more than he bargains for when a ravishing cabaret entertainer, played by Tamara Desni, and sprightly American deb, in the person of Mary Carlisle, become entangled in his private life and try to make him forget that he is still deeply in love with the stunning Xandra. She is, of course, Helen Vinson, who, realizing that she has caused her lover the loss of his throne, goes into voluntary exile in Holland. "Hollywood Cowboy"

Described as an ultra modern western, in which cowboys clash with city gangsters on the open rangeland and use airplanes as well as horses in their desperate conflict, "Hollywood Cowboy" stars George O'Brien.

Produced by George A. Hirliman, who was responsible for O'Brien's last two hits, the new action thriller has the stalwart star back in the saddle again in the type of outdoor film he originally popularized.

Jeffery Carson, cowboy film star, played by O'Brien, finishes a production on location in Wyoming and then embarks incognito on a hunting trip to seek rest and quiet. His peaceful intention, however, is shattered when he becomes wrongly involved in a range war. A pretty girl's smile soon has him working as an old cowboy pal on the girl's ranch.

O'Brien encounters gun fights in the saddle, dog fights in mid-air, cattle stampedes and other violence by his city gangster foes who seek to intimidate cattlemen. When the plains are finally cleared of the scourge, thanks to his daring efforts he finds romance with the niece of his employer.

Lovely Cecilia Parker is cast in the feminine lead.

German Driver Wins Over Field to Take Vanderbilt Cup

Averages 82.564 M.P.H.; Refuelling Cost English Racer Victory.

IS CLOSE SECOND

Westbury, N. Y., July 6.—The sweltering heat of Germany, soared over the heads of 70,000 spectators yesterday as Bernd Rosemeyer, the 24-year-old German driver, speed his silver-nosed auto Union Racer to an exciting triumph in the 284 mile Vanderbilt Cup classic race.

The 27-year-old Teuton streaked over the 300-mile distance in 3.36 an average of 82.564 miles per hour, to win by a scant 31.7 seconds over Richard Seaman of England, who had a great chance to win until he was forced into the pits for more fuel with only 4 laps to go.

Rex Mays of Glendale, Calif; finished third, traversing the distance in 3.40.38. Like the rest of the American pilots, he was unable to match the speed and stamina of the sign carg which streaked down the straightaway at speeds from 145 to 150 miles an hour.

In fourth place came another German in another Auto Union, and Ernst Delius while Guiseppe Farina of Italy finished fifth. The race was run without a single accident to mar or limit, although only fifteen of the starting field of thirty were able to finish. Motor trouble and minor mechanism put the others out.

BEARS WALK AWAY WITH INT. LOOP

Proverbial Mile Ahead of The Nearest Opposition

LEAFS LOSE TWO

By Hugh S. Fullerton Jr.

It doesn't take a reference to the old "Fourth-of-July" tradition that a ball team on ice at the United States mid-season holiday will be there at the finish to establish the position of Newark Bears in the International League.

At about the halfway mark, however, a checkup seems in order.

Bears have completed 76 of their 154 games—a few more than most of their rivals — and they're a country-mile ahead of the nearest opposition. They've only been losing about one game a week, but that's not a handicap. In the past seven days they've whalloped up three victories in 10 starts, every pitcher went the route until Martins Runno was yanked in the tight second game against Jersey Glanta and no flinger allowed more than eight hits.

At that the Bears had a tough time inflicting a pair of 3-2 setbacks upon the cellar-dwelling Jerseys, whose batting streak was extended to 17 games. The opener went to Runnels in the 10th. They scattered the Bears' 16 hits, but George Kelleher's single to Keller finally broke up Campbell's duel with Kerrys' relief. Following a double and single, respectively, Runnels hurled two-hit ball for five innings of the nightcap, holding that lead until a pinch hitter in the two-run sixth inning brought a pair over Newark victory.

Down in the second division, Rochester Red Wings also broke up a double victory, whipping Toronto's Maple Leafs 6-4 and 6-3. Bill Walker and Howard Krist combined on each effective mound job in the opener while their fates fell upon Mike Meola for the finis and the final game in the fifth.

The second-place rivals, Montreal and Buffalo, divided an evening doubleheader and trailed the Bears by 17 1-2 and 18 games, respectively. Montreal won the opener 7-5, behind Marvin Duke's three-hit flinging when Sammy Bell bumped "hard luck" Bill Harris for the finis of the fifth. The Bisons came back with a 7-3 decision. Other games were rained out.

Cuba Widen Breach By Winning Two; Yanks Win Over Pale Hose

By Drew Middleton

The gent who said this was going to be a pitchers' year in baseball appeared loony to be in the same class as the boys who picked Jersey Jim Braddock over Joe Louis.

The major league teams scored the awsome total of 184 runs, an average of more than 23 per game, to the delight of 213,336 fans who saw 16 games, surveying Uncle Sam's 41 runs were scored as the Cubs beat the Cards twice and lengthened their lead over the Giants to two full games.

The Cubs won both games of their double deal with Carda, the 14 inning contest, 15-13 after the initial cap 9-7, before a jubilant crowd of 39,240.

Hero of the six hours and 23 minutes of baseball was Frank Demaree Cub outfielder, who collected six for seven in the opener, and got two more hits as the Cubs won the winning run in the second contest.

Giants Lost

The Giants lost a game to the Cubs in the evening, when Carl Hubbell rejuvenated Bees rallied to win the nightcap, after having been beaten by Cliff Melton's hurling in the opener, 6-2. It was the Bee's 10th victory in 11 starts.

Only slightly less virulent than the Chicago slugging was the show put on by the Yankees in their double win over the Red Sox. The Yanks took both ends from Boston 12-0, 8-4, with Charlie Ruffing and Boyd Chandler supplying the hurling.

Joe DiMaggio's 20th homer with three aboard, which won the second game, two circuit clouts by Captain Lou Gehrig and one by Bill Dickey made the 61,146 fans forget the hurlers.

Tribe Wins Two

St. Louis Browns took a double beating from the Indians, 14-4, 13-6. The Tribe's artillery found the Brown mound staff for 29 hits, with Hall Trosky smacking three over the wall in the opener and Joe Vosmeberg and Julius Solters hitting four rays for the nightcap.

Home runs were the order in Detroit where Rudy York and Hank Greenberg combinated circuit drives to Detroit's clean sweep over Chicago 4-2 and 4-0, and annexation of second place in the American League. York drove with two on in the 10th with the win in cap.

Good pitching bobbed up in the Pirate-Red games. Jim Weaver and Mc Dermott shut the Reds out 3-0, Sisco, 3-1 and 5-1, with Weaver hurling a six hitter.

Jimmy Deshong won the opener for the Senators over the A's 5-3 and the hurler collected an error in the second contest, a 2-2 tie called in the 7th because of darkness. Fred Frankhouse gave Brooklyn a six hit job in the Phillies on a five-hit, 7-1, performance after Manager Johnson had stopped the Dodgers in the opener, 2-1.

New York, July 6—(AP)—At the speedway's Coney Island track it was Richard Seaman, the Englishman.....that is, Seaman, his Mercedes, was a factor from the start.....At times, near the end, he was less than 10 seconds behind the roaring Rosenspergers.....The dolls went for Nuvolari in a big way.....His was usually the swankiest guy on the track, Ita, Pisced in a get-up of green coat, yellow sweater and blue pants.....But the real reason for his popularity was that he never turned down an autograph hound.....The Mercedes team — Seaman and Rudolf Carracciola — made it a point to get all their signals on the second straightaway, so the other teams couldn't see them.....The American-made cars looked like mules out there.....Not a driver took a drink after being relieved.....First request of Guiseppe Farina, one of the pilots, was for an apple.....Nuvolari sat in his racer and ate ice cream after lustily wiring forced him to the sidelines Caracciola, the German with the Italian name, asked for cigarettes Rosemeyer was the crowd's man, for he drove a swell race and during race, but Rex Mays was the drivers' driver.....The German and Italian contingent watched with open mouths as the California Kid stayed in Cars

PERCIVALS CLIMB BACK INTO LOOP RACE WITH WIN

Defeat Asjmaa Kids 7 to 4 in Senior Softball Tilt

Making their hits count into runs the revamped Percival Stores softball club experienced no trouble in S. A. champions, staged a come-back in the local senior softball loop last night to win their first game since June 25th as they triumphed over the Asjmaa juniors by the score of 7 to 4 in a postponed league fixture at Coleman Flats last evening and thereby fortified their hold on a play-off position in the loop.

"Chuck" Barriage, pitcher for Percivals and Bill Carson, on the mound for the Asjmaa kids fired the ball and although their offerings were hit with consistency at times, hurled fairly good ball. Smith getting the final nod in the matter of his against mates and Carson was credited with the defeat. Percivals collected four counters in the first, the two scored in the first, two in the sixth and in a last inning rally managed to squeeze one over before the gate in a futile attempt to pull the game out of a losing cause.

Philp, Thrasher, Thompson and Higgs each collected better than one hit for the Percivals, while Adams, Ronsky, Amo and Mansfield hit the best for the losers. The same two teams clash in a regular league fixture at Coleman Flats again this evening.

The line-up:

Asjmaa Jrs.—Adams 3b; Ronsky ss; Rowebotham c; Amo lf; O'Neil 1b; Moon cf; Mansfield rf; Carson p, and Reynolds rf and Carson p.

Percival Stores—Philp lf, Barriage 3b; Thrasher 2b; Clarke rf; Thompson c; Higgs 1b; Bennett cf; Bushell ss and Smith p.

Genovese Retains Boxing Crown, Weathers Early Round Beating to Gain Split Decision with Wallace

Toronto, July 6 — (CP) — By virtue of a split decision, Frankie Genovese still held the Canadian welterweight boxing title today.

The rugged Toronto Italian survived a hard beating in the early rounds to get the official verdict last night over Vancouver's Gordon Wallace, former titleholder, in a return bout. There were no knockdowns in the two-round set-to.

The decision of the judges, officially corroborated by the Secretary of the Ontario Athletic Commission, came as a surprise to most of the 4,000 spectators and ringside observers. Genovese was credited officially with five rounds and Wallace with four, while the fifth was even.

Wallace's two-fisted attack in the first two rounds had the 144 1-2 pound Toronto fighter backing away, but Genovese found the range at the half-way mark and piled up points for his cleaner hitting. He was credited with the third, sixth, seventh, eight and tenth rounds. The first, second, fourth and ninth went to Wallace.

Wallace Pictures

The Coast fighter, making a comeback after recovering from a broken hand that cost him the title in his last meeting with Genovese, gave a clever, crowd-pleasing boxing display, start of the bout was delayed as Wallace worked off a pound in the gymnasium to make the 141-pound weight limit.

Genovese stayed off the fast-stepping Vancouver lad in the third round with a rapid left hand that enabled him to pile up points. The turning point of the fight came for him in the sixth after he had weathered Wallace's attacks in the fourth and fifth rounds. But after that he slackened his left bothered Wallace was running lovely and thought at last I was going to finish what I did not.

In practice my tank burst and I tried to get a hose from a company but they would not sell. lend or rent me a tank or fix my old one, so I got a fellow in Douglas to fix it it bolt it split right where he fixed it. Excisiors were a big help they fixed the machine up free of charge and it was going good except for something that could not be helped.

Of course over here is quite hard to learn but if you can get a machine at home you have a good chance of a place.

There are about half a dozen riders here that are really good, the rest are about as good as the bunch of us in Canada but they have good machines and really good riders are good.

The Velocitte Stanley Woods was riding was doing 122 M.P.H. and Woods is about the best rider there is. My machine was doing 88 at the same place so you see there is very little chance to win when the best rider has the best machine. The way the poog fellows take some of the bends here is something to see.

Well I think that is about all for now. I haven't seen any London papers over here but will send one I see.

Yours truly,
George Pepper.

Baseball's kaleidoscope with the greatest galaxy of talent possible is scheduled for tomorrow at Washington when the annual all-star game between the American and National Leagues takes place. On the surface it's simply National hurling versus American League - hitting. Which will triumph? Bill Terry will lead the National Leaguers while Joe McCarthy will be at the helm of the American League squad. Terry, it is expected will pitch Van Mungo, Brooklyn, Carl Hubbell and the great Dizzy Dean and barring accidents the hurlers will double nicely pitch three innings each. Last year the National League pitching triumphed over the American League batting for the first time since the inauguration of the All-Star classic.

The American League has elected Tommy Bridges, Detroit, Wesley Ferrell, Washington, Vernon Gomez, New York, Robt. M. Grove, Boston, Mel Harder, Cleveland and Marty Stratton, Chicago as their moundsmen, with the first three named as the most logical starters. Some strange figures confront the baseball magnates this year, however, as the batting average of the National League squad elected for the game over-shoots that of the American League by exactly two points. Insofar as the batting average of the senior circuit teams is .331 compared to .319, but the superiority of the American League circuit's hitters is represented in their hoarded run column, which shows them with 658 as compared with 564 for the National League "all-stars" piloted. Weather permitting a capacity house of over 32,000 is expected to witness the game.

The revamped Percival Store softball squad demonstrated they are still a power to be reckoned with in softball world as they turned on the Asjmaa juniors and won last night to strengthen their hold on a playoff berth in the local senior league. These two squads meet again this evening in another league fixture at Coleman Flats.

Harry Moore, president of the Central Ontario Lacrosse League, scoffs at our reference to the local community lacrosse club. Now he refers to as the Trenton-Belleville entry, while we call them the Trenton Herald.

Harry contends he never heard of a "flying" rower, Perkins, but but when the rowers of old were bold, only birds flew, but now man has conquered the air, to some extent at least so maybe we'll yet live to see "flying rowers" in the ozone. Per Prexy Moore's information no other person than Clarence Hamilton Mackie was our informant regarding the moniker of the community or district lacrosse team, in which he is still interested. Further, the league president continually ignores the great service rendered the Rowers by the club with the civilians of R.C.A.F. talent, thereby saving the situation locally is beyond comprehension. At any rate the Flying Rowers take on the task of trying to stop the fast-moving Peterboro Auburns tonight, the Artificial Ice aggregation not having sustained a loss in six consecutive starts. The Peterboro Maple Leaf aggregation hope to upset the dope.

Mike Jacobs, will soon have more sittings on the heavyweight boxing business than all of the rassling promoters have on the grunt and groan racket combined. Yesterday Jacobs' publicist signed Tommy Farr, British Empire champion, to meet Joe Louis in a title bout in the United States in September. If Farr goes through with his proposed bout with Max Schmeling and loses, where does that leave Jacobs and his championship? Then if Farr walks out on Schmeling, as he did Sharkey, it would almost seem as if the Germans are trying to prevent the well known rum around. Over in Switzerland they have recognized the Black Uhlan as the heavyweight 'champeen,' basing their claims on the fact that Schmeling defied to keep his agreement to meet the German in June.

Although there have been numerous flurries, pro encounters and general 'cooking' in the Central Lacrosse League, the Rowers and Athletics had better be on their guard lest they, themselves, get hooked, if they'll find themselves taking a few lacrosse sweatings from the penalty box with repeated offenders, Referee Langhlin, physical instructor at the Belleville Collegiate Institute recently and St. Catharines lacrosse player, is a capable and official whistle tooter, a fe word to the wise is sufficient boys.

Baseball lovers have their big moment on Wednesday, as do the Belleville baseball rallers, when they reasme their weekly races off Victoria Park, the Quinte end of the Kiwanis Jumbory hope to pull one of their old time stunts with a win over the 1937 S.S.I.C. champs, Prudboro. It will be Dr. Harry Blakely's appearance on a Belleville diamond since he starred for the old Belleville Nationals six or seven years ago. Harry is managing the Prudboro nine in the O.B.B.J. Kingston is at Napanee, 2.00 p.m. our time, the local game is a twilight fixture, the Intermediate Canada is to make a bid for the amateur baseball championship of the world at the 1940 Olympics in Japan.

When the decision was given announcing Frank Genovese had retained the Canadian welterweight boxing title after his fight with Gordon Wallace, Vancouver challenger, many of the 4,000 fans at Maple Leaf Gardens were more than surprised last night. Wallace gave the Toronto Genovese a terrific beating in the early rounds, although the 'champ' did stage a marvelous comeback to impress the judges. Repeatedly we have witnessed the judging of fights when the verdict is given to the fighter showing the class in the latter rounds, the opening stanza apparently having been forgotten by the judges, despite their figures tabulated.

National Leaguers Who Will Meet Americans In All-Star Game

Holiday Bride

by ANN DEMAREST

Without a backward glance at Sandra, she stumbled away from her and, drawing the collar of her coat close around her chin to stop its trembling, she went out onto the snowy street.

So it was Sandra he loved and Sandra who had sacrificed her self-with him when he was ill. There was no room in Bryan's life any longer for Jeanne MacDonald.

"Jeanne". Some one was calling her.

It was Lance. The yellow roadster was parked at the curb just a few feet from the entrance to the apartment house. He jumped out of the car and came towards her.

"Oh, Lance. You shouldn't have come," she scolded. Suddenly she was in his arms, her head pressed against his shoulder. He held her gently.

"I should have waited in the first car," he said accusingly. "And now that I've seen that heartbroken little face of yours I'm very glad that I did come back. Jeanne, is any better, Jeanne?"

She drew herself away from him. "I couldn't even go up to see again.

He looked down at the florist's box she was still holding clutched under one arm.

"You forgot to leave the flowers," he said. "Look here, I'll take them in and leave them at the desk. Wait for me."

She stood motionless in the middle of the sidewalk, with people pushing past her impatiently, but she was not even aware of them. When Lance came back he drew her close to him and led her to the car.

"Get in," he said. "I'm going to wrap you up in a blanket and take you for a drive. The fresh air might put some color in those pale cheeks. I won't even talk to you unless you want me to, and when you are hungry just tell me and we'll stop in somewhere for dinner."

"You're awfully good to me," Jeanne said in a low voice.

He patted her hand. "You don't often give me the chance to be."

It seemed to Jeanne that they drove for hours through the snowy city. They were both silent. Lance was bent over the wheel his eyes never wavering from the icy street, and Jeanne, numb with anxiety, was content to sit at his side without saying anything, almost without thinking. It was snowing hard and the flakes drifted in at the open sides of the roadster but she was not even conscious that her arm resting on the door was damp and cold.

Finally she spoke to him. "This is no fun for you, Lance. I'm the worst company in the world tonight."

He turned to glance down at her briefly. "It doesn't matter," he said. "I think both of us are in a needle bad way. Won't you let me take you to dinner now?"

For the first time Jeanne was conscious of her appearance. "I can't go any place dressed this way," she said looking at herself matefully in the mirror.

Her hair was windblown and her brown felt hat was damp with snow.

"Both of us look pretty forlorn," he agreed. "It was the trouble with a roadster in the winter but it's the only type of car I like and I'll never in New York very much during the winter."

"Can't we just stop for a sandwich somewhere?" she suggested.

"I'm not hungry anyway."

Lance nodded, slowing the car. "There's a little restaurant at the corner of this street. That might do.

"Any place at all," Jeanne said wearily, without even looking up.

Lance parked the car, unwrapped the robe and helped Jeanne out. It wasn't until they walked through the revolving door that Jeanne realized that the restaurant was Eddie's, the place Mart always took her.

"It must be late," she thought. "Mart wouldn't be here now."

Lance led her to a booth at the side of the room.

"Let's have a cocktail," he said as he helped her out of her coat. "It will do us both good. Your coat sleeve is all wet. I certainly haven't taken very good care of you."

She smiled at him faintly. "You have been great. I'd love a cocktail."

Would a cocktail help, she wondered. It seemed to her now that she was so tired nothing would ever make her feel rested again.

"I never realized how weak I am," she said quietly. "I'm not brave at all. The first hard thing that happened has left me completely limp."

"You are brave enough," Lance said quietly, and then added with a twisted smile, "At least it gives me some hope to take care of in all my useless life I've never been particularly important to any one."

That was probably true, Jeanne thought. Cilly never needed Lance. And he could not have some one dependent on him, some one he could protect.

Sipping the cocktail, she looked at him closely. Somehow, tired discouraged as he seemed to be tonight, he lacked the chaim that she had always admired. His eyes, usually blue and sparkling, were dull and lifeless, and even his crisp brown hair seemed to have lost its lustre.

"He is miserable without Cilly", she thought, "just as I am without Bryan. We are both in love with people who do not love us in return. It's almost funny. Here we sit, wretched and unhappy, just because we have lost everything we ever coveted on earth." And then she laughed aloud, a high, hysterical little laugh.

"Don't do that", Lance leaned forward. "I hate to see you so terribly unhappy."

"It doesn't matter any more, Lance," she said. "Really it does not. I'm learning now that one can't expect happiness except in snatches."

He shook his head. "And you were the only really happy person I ever knew."

"It was only a dream," Jeanne said stonily. "I didn't wake up soon enough . . . . I thought it was real."

"I think we'd better have another cocktail."

"Jeanne won't have another."

It was a man's voice, interrupting them rudely. Jeanne looked up, startled. Mart was bending over the table, a menacing light in his eye.

"You lied to me," he went on in a thick voice. "So this is what your love means. This morning you said it was the last time and now I find you out with another." He was smiling at her contemptuously. "I guess money is everything with you."

Jeanne stared up at Mart, too shocked to answer. Jumping to his feet Lance demanded, "Who is this man, Jeanne?"

"You don't have to tell me who he is," Mart sneered. "I saw his car out front. He's one of those rich guys you've been running after."

"Stop, Mart," Jeanne gasped. "You have no right to say anything like that."

"Oh, don't I? Say, who's got a better right?"

"What do you mean by that?" Lance demanded.

Mart opened his wallet and threw a clipping down on the table. Jeanne knew without looking at it what it was and her heart sank. Lance read the clipping and then looked at her, searching her eyes.

"Are you engaged to this man, Jeanne?" he asked finally.

"No. I'm not and he knows it too. He put that announcement in the paper . . . it is telling the anything about it."

"You have . . . denied it yet," Mart said in a loud voice. "Every one in Hilton still thinks we are engaged."

Jeanne looked at him with fury in her eyes. "I'm tired of all the trouble you've made, Mart. I think it would be better if we never saw each other again."

"You might be sorry for saying that," Mart drawled. "You see, I know too much."

Then he turned on his heel and left them. When she saw Mart disappear through the revolving door Jeanne turned to Lance, meeting his gaze bravely.

"You see how it is. You and I can never mean anything to each other. We come from different worlds."

"That's put yourself in the same class with him," Lance said. "Why do you bother with a man like him, Jeanne?"

"We were to school together," Jeanne said in a tired voice. "He's had such bad luck I never had the heart to stop seeing him entirely. I'm sorry he's so angry. A chap like that will never do anything but harm you."

"I know it now," Jeanne said. All during dinner she wondered what Lance must be thinking. He could never feel the same about her, she was certain, no matter what he said Mart had finished anything that might have been built out of her friendship for Lance. And when he was silent on their drive to her rooming house, she felt that she had lost another friend. Lance had been forced to realize that she was after all just Gordon Bartlett's secretary and a girl he could never remain friendly with.

"I'll be seeing you again soon," he said as he left her at the door. "It was sweet of him to say that," she thought, "but of course he didn't mean it."

She said, "Then you aren't going away?"

"Not for a little while," he said. "Good night, Lance, and thank you."

"You must never thank me for anything, Jeanne. Good night, my dear."

Jeanne left him and went wearily upstairs to her room. And there at last she found some peace, for finally she fell into some kind of thinking she finally fell asleep.

INSTALMENT 18

The days after Jeanne's encounter with Sandra dragged by with no word about Bryan. It was impossible to call Mart after the scene he made in the restaurant, and when Jeanne called the apartment house she could not get connected. The clerk even refused to connect her with the nurse.

Fighting the overwhelming misery, Jeanne did her best to keep Gordon Bartlett from realizing how unhappy she was. And she worked doubly hard so that he would have no complaints to make. The only thing he'd now to cling to was her job.

From Lance there was no word, and she did not even see him at the Bartlett's. That last evening, Jeanne thought bitterly, ended whatever friendship there might have been between them.

The day of Cilly's party found Jeanne nearly frantic with anxiety. About ten o'clock in the morning she called Bryan's house and this time the clerk volunteered the information that Mr. Patterson was no better. Jeanne left the telephone finding it hard to check her sobs.

In the afternoon Cilly came into the library. Jeanne thought she had never seen Gordon's sister look so attractive. She was wearing a blue winter suit with a magnificent sable scarf, and her eyes sparkled impudently from under her tiny brimmed blue hat. With a smile she sealed herself on the edge of her brother's desk, and crossed her slender legs in their sheer stockings and high-heeled pumps.

"I'm a lucky Gordon, and lend me Miss MacDonald this afternoon. I have to be out most of the time and some one simply has to answer the phones and look after the table setting."

Gordon Bartlett protested at first but finally gave in.

"I have a lot of work to finish, though. Can you possibly stay for awhile this evening?" he asked Jeanne.

"I'd be glad to stay, Mr. Bartlett."

"Thanks a lot," Cilly smiled, jumping down from the desk. "Come along into the living room. I'll show you what I want done."

Jeanne followed Cilly out of the library and down the long hall.

"This is the largest party I've ever given," Cilly confided in Jeanne, "and I do want it to go off well."

After Cilly left Jeanne opened the florist boxes. There were at least a dozen of them and more flowers Jeanne thought than she had ever seen before. With care she arranged them. Masses of roses on the hall table. Low bowls of mixed flowers in the living room, and in the dining room long stemmed white roses in a tall silver bowl.

Green Peas Sell at 25c

Market Prices Generally Show Steadiness in Tone

A marked steadiness in price levels with the exception of new green peas, which are the city market activities today where a fairly good display of farm and dairy produce was available to Tuesday morning shoppers.

Peas ranged to twenty-five cents per quart a decline of five cents from last week-end quotations. New potatoes were plentiful but showed no change from the fifty cents per peck prices quoted on the Saturday mart.

Raspberries were available but in small quantities and were offered at twenty-five cents per box. Strawberries were also present in large quantities but showed no change from the ten cents per box price of Saturday. Some good quality berries were offered at two boxes for twenty-five cents, and others at three boxes for the same price.

Early Richmond cherries showed a slight increase in volume but no noticeable change in price. Box lots were quoted at fifteen cents with six quart baskets offered at forty-five cents. New string beans struck a popular note today and sold readily at ten and fifteen cents per box.

Mulberries made their 1937 debut and were quoted to a slow buying market at fifteen cents per box. Red Currants at ten cents rounded out an enticing fruit display.

New radishes, onions, beets and carrots held their bunch-lot price of five cents with new cabbage selling well from five cents per head upwards.

Whitefish was offered at eighteen cents the pound.

Toronto, July 6—(CP)—Volume of cattle trade was small on the Toronto Livestock market today with prices weakening. Calves, sheep and lambs held steady while no prices were established for hogs. Cattle holdover from Monday was 1,200 head.

Choice veal calves ranged from $8 to $8.50 with common as low as $5. A few grass calves went at $3.75 to $4.50.

An aerial scene from the romantics drama "The Woman I Love" featuring Paul Muni and Miriam Hopkins playing at the Hells today and Wednesday.

TORONTO STOCK MARKET

Toronto, July 6 (CP)—Stocks pushed forward to higher ground again today, displaying energy in all groups. Action stood out in the medium price golds, with substantial gains holding till the close while some of the steels, the western oils and the base metals and silvers advanced on smaller volume. Gains up to two points were registered in the heavy industrial group. Aggregate turnover was the best in more than a week.

A dozen gold issues changed hands in heavy volume at gains of 2 to 20 cents. The strong spots included Hard Rock, Pickle Crow, Sladen, Preston, Pioneer, Towagmac, Moneta, Kirkland Lake, Jellicoe Francoeur and Pamour. Bralorne added 25 cents and the close was up fractions for McIntyre, Lake Shore and Dome.

Helped by higher London metal prices the leading base metals of Consolidated Smelters, International Nickel, Hornada and Hudson Bay advanced a point or more each and gains of 10 to 35 cents were boarded for Ventures, Sudbury Basin, Waite-Amulet, Sherritt and Noranda. Elsewhere was a strong spot in the silvers, closing around 2.75 for a gain of 12 cents. Cattle was slightly higher.

Dominion Steel and Coal "pr." Canadian Car and Foundry, United Steel, the bridge issues and English Electric posted substantial gains. Dominion added about 3 points. Paper shares Abitibi and Great Lakes, worked here.

Gains predominated in the food group. Canada Bread moved about two points as closing prices were up for the day. National Grocers and Fanny Farmer. Brazilian, C.P.R. and Ford A advance 1-4 to 3-4 each.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, July 6—(AP)—The stock market turned optimistic today and leading shares worked vigorously forward for gains of fractions to three or more points.

It was the most active session in weeks, with transactions at the rate of about 1,300,000 shares. Steels and rails led in the upward thrust with Aircrafts, Motors and Specialties also well lined.

Traders apparently thought the threat of an extended steel strike ameliorated as reports came in of more men returning to work in affected plants. U. S. Steel gained more than four, and strong advances were chalked up for Bethlehem, Inland, Republic and Youngstown Sheet and Tube.

SEARCH PHOENIX ISLANDS FOR AMELIA EARHART

New Region To Be Combed For Aviators

Belief Grows And Some Facts Indicate They May be Marooned

SEARCH ISLANDS

Battleship Plans to Release Three Deck Planes

Honolulu, July 7.— (AP)—Ships and planes, co-ordinating efforts in the hunt for Amelia Earhart, aimed today at a newsvaegn in the South Pacific waters where growing belief and some facts indicate the missing aviatrix may be marooned.

Five discouraging days of scanning the horizon from north to north-east of bleak Howland Island, which the aviatrix missed last Friday, turned the search to 1,000 miles southeast of Howland, where 100 miles away centre the Phoenix Islands.

Search Is Enlarged

The coast-guard cutter Itasca and navy mine sweeper Swan have searched more than 100,000 square land miles north of Howland without trace of the missing world-girdling plane.

The Itasca methodically scanned an area 60 miles in each direction while the Swan covered a strip 15 miles wide by 600 miles long.

The United States battleship Colorado steamed toward an early morning meeting with the coast-guard cutter Itasca, planned to release its three deck planes today for the first aerial search of the area which holds she fate of Miss Earhart and her navigator, Frederick J. Noonan.

Cutter Refueled

The two vessels were to meet within 100 miles of Howland to refuel the cutter, which had carried on the search virtually without sinse last Friday.

More than 100 the air was expected over the week-end from the giant aircraft carrier Lexington.

Since last night, the air has been clear of the unexplained "signal" and "voice" which Monday sent the Itasca on a vain dash to a position 381 miles north of Howland.

SCOUTS SALUTE FLAG

No News Heard Of Lost Plane

Husband of Amelia May Fly to Honolulu

San Francisco, July 7 (AP)—A tentative reservation on the Philippine Clipper plane leaving at 7 p.m. E.D.T. today for Honolulu was made by George Palmer Putnam, husband of the missing flier, Amelia, Earhart.

Pan American officials informed Putnam a seat in the big plane was available.

The Coast Guard here said it had been checking with the cutter Itasca throughout the day but had no news of the missing aviatrix and her navigator.

Walter McMenamy and Carl Person, Los Angles amateur operators who have eight receiving sets operating, said they had heard nothing on the Earhart wave length throughout the night and doubted if other amateurs had picked up anything because all operators have been requested to notify them of any reception.

Why the Weather?

By Mayor A. H. Thiessen
Science Museum Meteorologist

Carbon and plant health!

The carbon of the air exists in combination with oxygen, as carbon dioxide. It makes up only three hundredths of one per cent. of the whole atmosphere, however, that is ample for plant life. It is absorbed by the leaves of plants, under sunlight the oxygen is released and the carbon forms cellulose, starch and sugar. As this process can take place only in sunlight, plants grow very much more rapidly in a northern summer than in the tropics at that time, due to the longer sunlight hours of sunlight. Pele, green leaves indicate the plant is not getting its carbon and is probably in an unhealthy condition.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, July 7—A deep low area is moving eastward across Hudson Bay and pressure conditions moderately low over the Gulf of St. Lawrence, while the heaviest rains have fallen in the lower Ottawa valley and in the region of the lake region, and eastern States. Thunderstorms have occurred in western Quebec, the Maritime provinces and Newfoundland. In other parts of the Dominion the weather has been fair. It is decidedly warm in the Maritime and Quebec but temperatures are moderate in the western provinces.

Lake Superior—Moderate to fresh southwest to northwest winds; partly cloudy with scattered thundershowers. Thursday, moderate to fresh northwest and west winds; mostly fair and decidedly warm.

Lake Huron, Bailey Sirve— Northwest and west winds; fair tonight and on Thursday; moderately warm on Thursday.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan, Alberta —Mostly fair and warm today and on Thursday.

Rebel Lines are Broken in Drive Of Loyalists

Franco Makes Strong Demand For Right as Belligerent

BRITISH ATTITUDE

25,000 Men Thrown Against Rebels at Naval-carral

Hendaye, France-Spanish Frontier, July 7 (AP)—Spanish government troops pushed ahead in one of the heaviest offensives of the civil war today to shatter insurgent lines on the western side of Madrid.

Military sources at Irun confirmed government dispatches that Insurgent lines in South Escorial had been broken.

Government commanders threw 25,000 men against insurgent forces in the vicinity of Navalcarnero, a supply base and concentration point.

Insurgents insisted, however, that Brunete—key town in the defence of Navalcarnero—had not been occupied by the government.

London, July 7 (AP)—A strong demand for belligerent rights by General Francisco Franco was forced today to the undaunted that the British compromise plan to revitalize the non-intervention safeguards against spread of the Spanish civil war.

The European mediation, coupled with a threat that nations which refused might find themselves barred from Spanish markets, surprised the foreign office.

Deadlock Seen In Free State

Independents' Views May Make Real Difference to Dail Vote

By SEAN O'CATHAIN

Dublin, July 6 (CP)—The views of one or two Independents assumed unexpected importance in the Irish Free State's immediate political future today. The parliamentary election ended in a deadlock and President Eamon de Valera faced the prospect of asking for his Fianna Fail Party to assure a working majority in the Dail Eireann.

The 138 seats at stake in last Wednesday's election split right down the middle, final results showed, with de Valera's government party and its opponents each get 69 for all other groups in the Dail.

Responsible de Valera to capture a clear majority of seats and to achieve an overwhelming vote of confidence for new constitution, government leaders remained silent. A handful of Independents will be independent as to his plans but at his home at Blind Rock it was admitted he was not in.

The final voting was Fianna Fail, 69; Fine Gael, the opposition party headed by former President William T. Cosgrave, 48; Labor, 7; Independents, 7, and Independent-Labor, 1.

Wiped out the working margin of four that de Valera had at dissolution, the last Dail over a fifth time and left the Fianna Fail with 66 votes in prospect when Speaker Frank Fahy is re-elected.

RADIO "HAMS" PICK UP EARHART SOS CALLS

Repeatedly since Amelia Earhart and Capt Fred Noonan were forced down somewhere in the Pacific near Howland Island three low Los Angeles amateur radio operators have picked up broadcast messages, apparently from the drifting aviatrix plane. They are Karl Pierson (left) and Walter McMenamy and they reported to conflicting authorities receipt of the first SOS combined with call letters from Miss Earhart's aeroplane. Subsequently they received further jangled broadcasts believed from the lost fliers.

Wave of Heat Reaches East, Mercury Rises

Heat Unlikely to Mount to Levels of Last July

NEAR 'NINETIES'

Prospects For Tomorrow Are "Decidedly Warm

The season's first heat wave settled down today on Ontario and Quebec after a scorching run on the prairies during which an all-time unofficial high temperature of 114 degrees was reached at Weyburn, Sask.

As the west cooled off, Ontario and Quebec prepared for at least 48 hours of heat, but temperatures rose for the second straight day into the 90's in Toronto, causing thousands to beaches and swimming holes for relief.

Scattered Showers.

Only consolation was official assurance the heat wave would not reach the intensity of the prolonged siege of last July, the worst in many years. Scattered thunder showers were expected to herald the end of the heat period late tomorrow or Friday.

Temperatures approached or touched the 90-mark over most of Ontario and Quebec. Thunder showers before many hours were predicted for Prairie, Ontario where cooler weather was in prospect for tomorrow. The north was ready to welcome the heat wind-ed school.

But forecasts over the rest of the area for tomorrow were, "decidedly warm".

Heat Broken in West.

Winnipeg, July 7 (CP)—Western Canada's grain belt release heat was apparently broken today, temporarily at least, but there was no promise of rain needed badly to salvage some part of drought-stricken crops.

Temperatures dropped 30 degrees in Saskatchewan yesterday from Monday's blistering heat. Manitoba was the prairie hot spot yesterday, Winnipeg leading with a high temperature of 88.

Playgrounds are Thronged At Official Reopening

With Merry Shouts Children at Play Celebrate Season's Opening

REAL CHILDHOOD FETE

Amid the joyous and hilarious shouts from happy children, the two playgrounds were officially opened in East and Victoria Parks last evening when hundreds of Eddens and a large gathering of parents were present to accept the facilities for summer play provided by the Belleville Kiwanis in conjunction with the Board of Education. Milling around, countless numbers the youngsters were on hand long before the scheduled time of opening which saw His Worship Mayor R. D. Arnott officially open the East End grounds while Ex-Mayor W. H. Panter presided in the same capacity to sing up the official curtain on fun and games.

East End Playgrounds

The numerous swings, slides, merry-go-rounds and other equipment of recreation, established by the Belleville Kiwanis Club to provide suitable facilities for the kiddies, was in full swing long before the arrival of Mayor Arnott for the official opening. The children had taken possession of the grounds and it required the united cooperation of the Kiwanians present, Rev. L. R. Hall, of the East Board of Education and two traffic officers to quiet the gleeful throng before that followed the announcement of the passing out of free soft drinks and ice cream by the local Kiwanian Ivan Scott not only introduced Mayor Arnott to the waiting crowd, but subsequently announced that 500 ice cream cones and 500 soft drinks would be provided the children present through the courtesy of the Kiwanis Club.

Softball, baseball, quoits, slides, see-saws, shower baths, swings, and a recreation building were officially opened with Mr. J. M. Warner at the controls and Master Jean Gaither, acting as supervisor. Mr. Kiwanian Scott, prior to introducing Mayor Arnott, stated it was a pleasure to represent the East End Kiwanis Club and the Kiwanis Club. Following the official opening, Mayor Arnott in his usual capacity, to mark an auspicious opening of the East End playgrounds, for the second consecutive year, turned the supervision of the Belleville Kiwanis Club.

In his official opening remarks His Worship Mayor Arnott stated:

"It is a pleasure to open officially the Belleville Playgrounds for the year 1931.

"To those who have been and are responsible for them we tender our appreciation. Under the supervision of competent help playgrounds have always enjoyed by parents have had no hesitation in permitting their children to spend a goodly portion of their summer vacation there.

"I feel that the Kiwanis are to be congratulated for their splendid service in removing the old equipment, improving the grounds and generally beautifying the work.

"To the girls and boys I express my sincere wish that their summer here will be most enjoyable."

Ex-Mayor Panter was also introduced by Kiwanian Bill Lynch, Jim Cowan, Jack Gerow, George Pelton, Russell Silver, P. C. MacLaurin, Eddie Manning, Cliff Darragar and other Kiwanis members residing on the East Hill assisted in the portioning of ice cream which was greatly satisfied in the official opening.

West End Playgrounds

The grounds of Queen Mary School with which the West End playgrounds are associaed was the scene of a joyous milling throng of children at 8 o'clock when the scheduled time of the official opening. Nearly eight hundred children and a large number of parents were on hand when Ex-Mayor Panter who was formally introduced by Kiwanian Jack McVeigh declared the grounds officially opened.

"Children of this part of the city should be proud to be members of Queen Mary School", Mr. Panter declared in his address to the kids as a name which is looked up to the world over. Parents of the children who play on these grounds should be proud, for through the generosity and forethought of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville, they are rid of a lot of worry and anxiety when they know their children are in safe hands."

Ex-Mayor Panter described briefly the type of schools here sixty years ago and noted the vast difference between schools of those days and those of the present. "We should be thankful to the Kiwanis Club and the Board of Education for their generosity", he concluded. "I now declare these grounds officially open."

These words were the general signal for a youthful rush to the many splendid facilities which the grounds provided for the children. A laughing happy throng, wearers on the call for free refreshments clamored around swings, chutes, slides, whirling wheels and other forms of childish pleasure. Water ran from the showers in the bath-house, fland-pils were the scene of tiny tots' enjoyment.

A variable entertainment program of eight events under the charge of Child Specialist George Laughlin, and Assistant Supervisors, Wm. Sherman and Lorraine McGinnis, assisted by Kiwanians Jack McVeigh, Howard Yearsley, Cliff Bargar and Ab. Boynton were run off at this junctures with prizes presented to winners by the Kiwanis Club.

The call for the free drinks and ice cream cones provided by the sponsors was the signal for a concerted rush to the locals of the refreshments. Under the supervision of Messrs. Laughlin and McVeigh, supervisors and Kiwanians assisted by the Misses Ruby Fair and Gladys Lemmis of the Kresge Stores staff dispensed the drinks and ice cream to the clamoring crowd of children. Near bedlam reigned before organization got under way, but finally the children were got in hand and the refreshments served to the thirsty crowd of youngsters and grownups.

Race results—Boys 12 yards dash —9 years: Herbert Sargeant, Stan Simmons; Boys 50 yards, 13 years, Barney Wright, Gerald Perry; Boys open, Raymond Reid, Eugene Barrow; Boys' Potato Race: Raymond Reid; Girls, 9 years, 25 yards—Dorothy Brodie, Beatrice Zobedes; 12 years, 50 yards—Kiwanian Gwendolyn Hay; Open race—Helen Richardson; Veronica Tracy; girls' number race—Veronica Tracy, Helen Richardson.

Prizes were presented to the winners immediately upon the conclusion of each event.

The unexpected response on the part of the children and parents of the city at the official opening of the playgrounds last night was the source of gratification of the Kiwanis Club sponsors of the grounds who inaugurated the opening with free drinks and ice cream to the children. The response was greater than was anticipated by the officials who clamored in youthful exuberance around the various stands where the refreshments were dispensed, soon disposed of the refreshments present.

Not a few were disappointed, as the supply of these much-appreciated goodies was exhausted by the sponsors. To overcome this and to make up for the disproportionate caused by the lack of drinks and ice cream, the Kiwanis Club will hold a similar affair in the near future, Otib officials announced today.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to go

The liver should pour two pounds of bile juice into your bowels daily. If the bile is not flowing freely, your food does not digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a sick headache, dizzy spells, your skin is sallow, you feel tired, sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

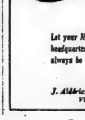
It takes those good, old-fashioned Carter's Little Liver Pills to get them. You'll see the difference after the first dose. They are purely vegetable and act surely and gently on the liver. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Refuse substitutes. Only 25c at all druggists.

Relief Needs Drop Slightly

Ald. Lewis Speaks of Difficulty of Finding Some Men to Work

Alderman Laurie Lewis, chairman of welfare in City Council, stated today, that the situation he was slightly fed up on the "relief racket."

This week I started the construction of a cellar in my home. I had two carpenter men who have been for some time endeavoring to get the relief work they wanted work. Time and again they have promised to show up, but I'm still waiting," he said.



Relief, declared the Alderman, has shown a noticeable drop since the light boon in the work market has been evident.

Sarnia Boys Wheel Eastward For Outing

Two youthful vacationists, armed with cameras, are carrying out a camping paraphernalia strapped to two sturdy bicycles, pedalling their way through the city at an early hour this morning bound for the holiday playgrounds and fishing spots of Eastern Canada.

Dressed in corn tassels, khaki shirts and shorts, the boys who started from Sarnia a few days ago spoke enthusiastically of their trip. They expect to be gone three weeks and intend pedalling their way back over a northern route.

Colored Pastor Tells the Story Of His Career

Rev. Arla H. Richards Once Practised Law, Now Preacher

PASSES THRU CITY

Refers to Fallacy of Attitude of "Father Divine"

The glowing image of his colored Creator which shone, he said, with unquenchable brilliance, when in the dead of night turned Arla H. Richards, colored, of Lynn, Massachusetts, from a prominent barrister into a professional pleader for mercy, to turn to the work of God, he admitted today to the Daily Ontario Intelligencer.

For nearly five years the Rev. Mr. Richards, who has his legal career out of his own funds and the few subscriptions that have been given from time to time, has been carrying on his evangelistic work in Canada and the United States, travelling by trailer and car into even the most remote districts.

Man Yearns For God

"I go places where many another 'reverend' would not go," admitted the half-negro missionary to the reporter in an uptown garage this morning while he availed slight repairs and a few gallons of gas to his machines.

"I find people want to know about God. I am happy to be in His service. Since I made nearly five years ago when I arose from bed with His brilliancy still shining in my heart, I have been delighted. At last I have found Him, as so many others have with which I have pleaded."

Converted Wrong-he Hold-up Man

Singular faith glowed from the soft dark eyes of the traveller to and even the trails the home he came have not been unfamiliar. As a child, Richards, the traveler says, he was born in the slums. But of the thousands of miles he has gone, not one has he been bothered.

"Just once", he amended. "Two men tried to hold me up in the States. I talked to them of God." he added simply. "And saved them. Turned them from their erring ways. I fed them and made them my missionaries, too."

The Rev. Mr. Richards, who dressed in simple clerical garb, lives his own simple life apart from that of others. In the interior of his well equipped trailer in which he has lived for his period of travel, he entertained thousands of texts and pamphlets. A well-stocked larder supplies the wants of those who are hungry. An electrical speaking system is equipped for those who have come to hear whether he stops at a well crowded crossroad in an up to date centre, or a rutted lane in the country.

No Worldly Materialism

To live God one must be whole. There is no worldly material. Richards says that in the Bible he finds his own reward.

Father Divine, Harlem's negro "God" to whom thousands have flocked in an ecstasy of what he called "misguided belief" was referred to by Richards as a fallacy.

"May there come a time when his fraud will show him the error of his ways," declared the simple visiting cleric, showing his first visible signs of warmth since the commencement of the interview.

Trusts To Guidance

From Belleville Rev. Mr. Richards will travel west. There is no fixed destination; he carries no road maps, but relies entirely upon the guiding hand of Him he serves. Everywhere he has been received with kindness. Many have joined his guide and has served him through the long journey.

"God must return to the world. He must bring you and me the signs of a dissolution of mankind. In no other manner is this more apparent than in the sight of hundreds of girl tramps one may see upon the streets. Their faces are strained as they ill be observed than through the cheapening of the dinner by a few such thousands of others suffer their want."

'St. Gregory the Great' Parish, Picton, is a Century Old

Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G. Pays Glowing Tribute to First Missionaries

FR. FENELON'S CAREER

On the occasion of the centenary of the parish of St. Gregory the Great, Picton, the preacher was Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., of Toronto city, who paid a glowing tribute to the apostolic labors of the pioneers in order in these parts. In the year 1826 Father Fenelon and Father Trouve, in response to an invitation from an Iroquois tribe, came from Ville Marie, now Montreal, by canoe to found the Quinte mission. Fr. Fenelon was twelve years and it terminated with the dispersal of the Indian tribe, many of whom removed to the Mountain at Montreal.

2 Early Missionaries

During that time eight missionaries laboured at the work. Their sphere of activity covered the north shore of Lake Ontario from Cataraqui later Fort Frontenac and now the city of Kingston, to Niagara Falls. The name of Father Fenelon is preserved in "Fenelon Falls". From the maiden headquarters on the Bay of Quinte they penetrated through the wilderness seeking souls for Christ, devoting themselves to the conversion of the Indians. Their work were from the force, families of France. They gave up worldly prospects in response to of steamers. The Bay of Quinte is named for the Queen, from the De Levis family; Dollier De Casson, ex-army officer and famous woodsman; Father Bolduc, famous French judge; Scaust, the rich banker; De Salaberry, the knight of Louis. XIV; D'Urfe, descendant of Latin kings, and others of the best blood of France.

Chaurey Since 1826

Were these missionaries to return today they would find great cities and towns and villages connected by railways where they had once landed the forest primeval and rude encampments of Indians; and on Lake Ontario which they had traversed in canoes now bearing fleets of decked Sulpician missionaries, established by the memory of those who lived and died in the Canadian wilds. The present district the origin and growth of Picton parish from pioneer days to the present. He referred to the zeal of their pastors who had administered during this period to their spiritual wants and to the sacrifice and piety of the faithful who had aided them in the building of the parish. Father Lawlor, the first pastor was followed by Father Brennan, through who built the present church. Then came Father Cahon, Crawley, Dean O'Reilly, now of Peterboro and the seriously wounded while serving with th eCanadian Forestry Corps; Corrigan and Father Meehan, the present

Citizens Gasp In Heat Wave

This Year's Record Falls Short of Last Year's Height

Residents parading city streets today in shirt sleeves and wilted collars renewed their faith in Nature's cycle by recalling without undue enthusiasm that this present heat wave commenced at about the same time last year ago. Unperspirers, however, one year ago, were slightly higher than those experienced on Monday, today's broiling sun, tempered only slightly by a west wind, may boast the average.

Last year's, as this year wave may turn out to be, was one of the warmest experienced not only in Belleville, but throughout Ontario in grandpa's memory.

Complete records of last year's warmth were not available at the city hall today, but temperatures of 90 and over were recorded, it was stated. Today's hottest point was about the same, and yesterday afternoon's mark of an unofficial 91 a good comparison.

At the city pump house during the past two days and today busy turbines pumping millions of gallons of water through mounting gauges which showed that in all nearly 3,000,000 gallons used yesterday for drinking and washing purposes, not, to mention the gallons wasted through the habit of allowing the taps to run to "cool the water, told a story which may also be expended today.

Soft drink manufacturers of the city found no cause for jubilation in heat, either, for business was distinctly good. And in ice cream making plants the same story was told.

This evening may repeat incidents of last evening when, to escape the heat, scores of residents thronged the parks, many of them remaining throughout the night, camping in easier fashion under the stars.

MOIRA

Moira—The annual banquet sponsored by the W.A. of Moira Church was held on Tuesday evening. A game of softball was played between the teams of Fuller and Moira, the home boys winning by a small score. After the ball game the ladies of the community served a delicious supper in the sheds at the church. Owing to the rain in the latter part of the evening, the program was shortened considerably. However, Miss Edna Ketcheson of Halloway delighted the audience with a vocal number. An interesting item then followed when Mr. Blake Ketcheson in a few well-chosen words spoke of the high esteem in which Rev. and Mrs. Turner were held in the community. During their stay among them favour in the hearts of all and everyone wishes them success in their new field of labour. As a remembrance of the W.A. of Moira United Church, Mrs. Chas. Ketcheson then presented them with a purse of money. Rev. and Mrs. Turner both thanked their friends for the kind words spoken about them and for the remembrance given them. After the singing of the National Anthem the interesting evening was brought to a close.

Miss Ruth Emerson Honoured by Pupils

On Friday afternoon the pupils of the Junior Room of Moira Public School with their teacher gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Emerson to tender a surprise to Miss Ruth Emerson who is leaving the teaching profession, after six years as teacher in the Junior room. Miss Emerson was asked to take the seat of honour after which Miss Grace McInroy, one of her pupils, read the following address:

To Miss Emerson—

We, your pupils have learned with regret that you are not going to be our teacher for another year, so we took this time to be with you as a class once again.

We have enjoyed our school days and in years to come we will always remember with pleasure the years in which you were our teacher.

No doubt many times we have tried your patience but you were always kind and ready to help us. No task was too small or hard for you to do for us.

As a token of our respect and love for you we ask you to accept these gifts, and may your future years be ones of happiness.

(Signed)— Pupils of the Junior Room of Moira School.

Miss June Williams, another pupil presented Miss Emerson with a cake plate and a butter-knife. Miss Emerson thanked them for their gifts and spoke of her regret at leaving the school. She said she would always look back at these years as six of the happiest she had ever spent. All joined in singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow", following which the children enjoyed games and singing. At the close of the afternoon the hostess served a delightful lunch consisting of sandwiches, cake, ice cream and candy.

WEST LAKE

West Lake—About sixty ladies wended their way to the home of Mrs. Henry Brown on Wednesday afternoon of last week, to honor the departing teacher, Miss Kathleen Sanderson, for whom a miscellaneous shower was being held. Mrs. Brown's pleasant rooms were fragrant with red and white roses and potted plants and Miss Sanderson was charming in pale pink crepe. She was assisted by Mrs. Frank Dunning (nee Gertie Kleinsteiber), a bride of last year, and Miss Verna Keller, in opening and placing the many gifts of silver, glass, linen, etc. Much merriment was caused when a dainty work basket, containing darning needle and mending wool, and a wee damsel in scanty raiment, was opened. Among the gifts was a beautiful dish in memory of Mrs. S. M. Brown with which Kathleen was a favorite. Miss Sanderson thanked the ladies for the many beautiful presents, and Mrs. Brown for the effort put forth to make the occasion a success, and the kind thoughts which prompted it, and invited all to come and see her, when she is settled in her new home, especially the children with whom she wished to keep in touch. The pupils had previously presented their departing teacher with a beautiful relish dish of glass and silver, which was placed among the gifts. A dainty lunch of ice cream, cake, etc., was served by the hostess and her assistants. General regret is voiced on every side by friends and pupils that during the severance of Miss Sanderson's connection with the school after six years of very successful teaching.

PRESS OF CANADA

Those who read Canadian newspapers may not appreciate that they have one of the world's best instruments for the study of worldwide events, but that is what dele-gates to the Congress of American nations were told at Paris recently by Edmond Turcotte, editor-in-chief of Le Canada. He repeated the saying that Canada, through its history past and its political present, forms a bridge between England and France on the one hand and the United States on the other, and added that Canadian newspapers, fed by American, English and French sources of information are a veritable crossroad of several civili-zations. This is the reason he said for the fact that the press of Canada has "one of the highest ranks among the world press for abundance, interest, quality and ob-jectivity of its news."

One has but to think over the fact that Canada is in a unique geographical and po-litical position and her news naturally be-cause of the variety of its sources and the effort and necessity to understand these various sources of information, becomes a balanced contribution to world interest. This fact that Canadians try to under-stand, stands this nation in good stead. She is not a nation which will provide strife rather she will try to bring two sides to peace.

CHURCH ON FREEDOM OF SPEECH

If war comes, the pulpit will be com-mandeered, the Rev. Dr. Ralph W. Sock-man declared in his sermon at Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, Park Avenue, New York City. Appealing for the safe-guarding of freedom of speech, action and worship as a means of guarding liberty, he said democracy seems more in danger throughout the world than ever before."

"We must stand fast against those who would stifle our speech," he said. "We must stand for the right to say what we think, but that carries with it the duty to think what we say, since a free society cannot police our speech.

"I say to you in all sadness of conviction that to think great thoughts you must be heroes as well as idealists. Only when you have worked alone, when you have fell around you a black gulf of solitude more isolating than that which surrounds the dying man, and in hope and despair have trusted to your own unshaken will, then only will you have achieved."

But freedom of speech and freedom of action are necessarily limited by regard for the rights of others, Dr. Sockman said. For, he declared, an intemperate word can wreck a career just as an intemperate driver can wreck a car.

In an earlier day, he said, persons who wanted to be completely free in their ac-tions could press on beyond the frontiers. But now the frontier no longer exists and we must learn to live in settled areas.

A Christian personality involves freedom of worship, Dr. Sockman asserted, and men must be free to worship God accord-ing to the dictates of their consciences.

"There is a new thing on the horizon, the totalitarian State," he declared. "Men all have been fighting over every attempt at control of the State by the church or the church by the State."

"We speak too much of the wisdom of our ancestors when we should speak of their courage," the Rev. William H. Garth said at the Cathedral of St. John the Di-

"Action undertaken to solve life's prob-lems gives us courage to fight against fail-ure," he said. "Many a problem has been settled not only by thinking but also by ac-tion. The way through life is often cleared by instantaneous action in the face of a difficulty which has defied sober thought."

Critics of this form of government were advised to observe conditions existing un-der dictatorships by the Rev. William P. Kenealy of Washington University, who preached at the high mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York.

"There is no denying the evils under our present system of government," Father Kenealy said. "But those who would do away with that system should first survey the European scene. Where democracy flourishes, there flourishes the church, but where democracy is overthrown, there the church suffers."

We meet with few utterly dull and stu-pid souls; the sublime and transcendant are still fewer; the generality of mankind stand between these two extremes; the interval is filled with multitudes of ordin-ary geniuses, but all very useful, and the ornaments and supports of the common-wealth.—La Bruyere.

BY THE FERRY

We are waiting in the nightfall by the river's placid rim,
Summer silence all about us, save where swallows' pinions skim
The still grey waters sharply, and the widening circles reach,
With faintest, stillest music, the white gravel on the beach.
The sun has set, long long ago.
Against the pearly sky
Elm branches lift their etching up in arches slight and high.
Behind us stands the forest, with its black and lonely pines,
Before us like a silver thread, the old
Grand River winds.
Far down its banks the village lights are creeping one by one.
Far up above, with holy torch the evening star looks down.

Amid the listening stillness, you and I have silent grown,
Waiting for the river ferry—waiting in the dusk alone,
At last we hear a velvet step, sweet silence
reigns no more,
'Tis a barefoot sunburnt little boy upon the other shore.
Far through the waning twilight we can see him quickly kneel
To lift the heavy chain, then turn the rusty old cog-wheel
And the water-logged old ferry-boat moves slowly from the brink,
Breaking all the stars' reflections with the waves that rise and sink.

While the water dripping gently from the rising, falling chains
Is the only interruption to the quiet that remains
To lull us into golden dreams, to charm
our cares away
With its Lethean waters flowing 'neath
the bridge of yesterday.
Oh the day was calm and tender—but the night is calmer still.
And we go aboard the ferry where we stand and dream, until,
We cross the sleeping river, with its restful whispering.
And peace falls, like a feather, from some passing angels' wing.

OSA JOHNSON BACK IN JUNGLE-LAND found congenial work awaiting her at her African headquarters in Nairobi, Kenya colony. A family party from the United States doing a jungle safari in imi-tation of the ones described by Osa and Martin Johnson, were overdue at Nairobi, so Osa assembled her own plane fleet and set out to search and care for the miss-ing ones. She rescued them after they had been grounded seven days, and in imminent danger of starving or worse. Just another feat to the credit of this brave little wo-man who has undertaken on her own ac-count to manage a film expedition into the jungle where wild animals and wilder na-tives will be embalmed in celluloid and sent back to America in cans to entertain the great cinema public. If you have never met Osa Johnson and her late husband, Mar-tin Johnson, you can remedy this over-sight at once by enquiring at the Public Library for travel books by Martin and Osa Johnson.

The Sucker

(Game and Fisheries Bulletin)

The complex system of inter-re-lationship which exists between the species, and the lack of definite knowledge in connection therewith, is emphasized in the general opinion which prevails in connection with the sucker. It is the common idea that this fish is responsible for a great deal of destruction to the propagation of other species of fish-ing game and fish. If we could only clean out the suckers there would be lots of fish in the lake," says the over-optimistic angler from the superficial knowledge he posses-ses of the natural habits of this particular fish. Scientific investi-gation does not bear out this sup-position. The sucker may have no place in the recreational programme of the sportsman, but at least it is not guilty of some of the charges levelled against it, and it serves a useful purpose as fodder for the popular game fish. Let us hear the evidence in his favor as presented by the biologists.

In the spring of 1922 an assistant biologist was sent to the Georgian Bay by the Department, and among other assignments was that of investi-gate and report on the inter-relationship between the sucker and the pickerel. For some time previous to the spring of 1922 reports were being received by the Department from different sources in regard to the supposed spawning-habits of the sucker. Popularly the sucker is supposed to be a spawn-eater. It is one of these statements, or beliefs, that seem to be told and repeated without any basis of fact.

The biologist camped at Lake McRae, near Honey Harbor, from May 6th to May 24th. The outlet of the lake is a stretch of rapids that make an ideal spawning-ground for pickerel and suckers. A number of suckers and pickerel were taken and the stomach con-tents examined microscopically. The fish were taken over the whole period, only a few being caught at a time.

The suckers and pickerel both spawned on the same area. Some-times they intermingled, but usually the pickerel spawned in water from 3 to 5 feet in depth, while the sucker sought out a very much shallower place. In some cases the water was so shallow that the back of the fish was exposed to the air.

In the examination of the stomach contents, the fish were taken while on the rapids and opened, together, about 50 from each of both species were opened, and no food was found. This appears to show that the sucker and the pickerel do not eat while spawning. The data on the fishes' food, and the num-bers of fish to be absolutely reliable, from the results known it would seem as though the suckers were not guilty of eating spawn.

A statement from a bulletin of the Bureau of Fisheries on "Devel-opment, growth and food habits of the white sucker Catostomus Com-mersonii Lesueur" by N. H. Stewart, is also of interest on this subject. It reads as follows: "The sucker has been reported as a spawn-eater, devouring the eggs of the leg perch. It has been reported as eating small fishes and fish eggs. In November 1922, twenty 9-9" suckers were col-lected directly over the newly-made nests of brook trout, where eggs were doubtless abundant in the gravel. As not a single fish egg was found in these fish, or even other sucker stomachs examined, it seems safe to assume that fish eggs are rarely taken by this species."

From an address by Thaddeus Surber, Biologist and Superintendent of Fish Propagation for Minnesota, we cull the following: "The wanton destruction of suckers and other rough fishes, called 'fishes' locally, sadly reduced one of the principal sources of food supply for our adult pike and bass. The old theory that suckers did enormous damage to pike spawn is as ridiculous as it is untrue, because the sucker, at the season of the year when pike spawn-ing is at its height, consumes no food, while the ability of the black bass to guard their nests from en-croachment is well enough establish-ed to render the charge as affecting it ridiculous. At the season of the year when trout eggs are develop-ing on their spawning beds, suckers are unfairly far removed, having re-tired to the deeper pools far below trout waters."

It is obvious from these state-ments that, while the sucker, be-cause of its abundance, must be held responsible, it is not the un-bridled predator it is frequently represented to be.

Beer and Parking Laws Effective

On Saturday night the 11 p.m. closing of the four local hotel beverage rooms and the two hour parking ruling on Dundas Street from the government bridge to the C.N.R. tracks and on Front street north to Elgin Street, were enforced. Commenting on the parking law Chief Constable William Bain disclosed that the motorists co-operated with the police splendidly and only five warnings had to be issued. All available space in the town was utilized by car drivers and the usual Saturday night traffic congestion on the main thoroughfare was not at hard to cope with as in the past. Closing the beer parlors one hour earlier had much to do with clearing the streets of heavy traffic around midnight and local proprietors were satisfied very much with the new arrangement.

New Rule To Be Enforced

Following an accident, Chief Constable Bain announced that the Trenton Police Department will enforce the following traffic law sternly. Two driver of a vehicle on approach of an ambulance, fire police, utility, emergency vehicle upon which a bell or siren is sounding shall immediately bring such vehicle to a standstill as near as is practical to the right hand curb or the edge of the road-way and parallel therewith and clear of any intersection. No vehicle shall follow any fire department vehicle when responding to an alarm at a distance less than five hundred feet. The above Ordinance under Section 33 of the Highway Traffic Act. Chief Bain also said that in the future car owners will park their vehicles on the side of the highway at an accident will be charged with obstructing traffic, unless they are pre-ntitioned to the accident.

Other than a thorough soaking the boy was none the worse of his experience and left for home immediately after being saved from the water.

DISTRICT LODGES ATTEND L. O. L. DIVINE SERVICE

One Hundred And Fifty Members Assemble at Auditorium

Tweed—The Orange Lodges of District No. 4 held Divine Service at the Auditorium on Sunday, July 4th, at 2.30 p.m. The members of the Order to the number of approximately 150 met at the Lodgeroom and under the direction of District Master R. T. Good paraded along Colborne and Victoria Streets to the Auditorium. United Citizens' Band under Bandmaster H. W. Bradley led the parade.

The hall was comfortably filled with members of the Protestant Churches, the Orangemen and other friends. Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne, Rector of the Tweed Anglican Church, Tweed, Rev. R. H. Shipman, Minister of Tweed United Church, and Rev. Bearer of Roslin Anglican Church assisted with the service.

The choirs of the United and Anglican Churches led in the singing of a number of familiar hymns such as, Fred Pedlar of Tamworth sang at the piano. The service opened with "Holy, Holy, Holy," and the National Anthem, followed by prayer by Rev. Swayne.

The choir then sang "The Lord Is My Shepherd." Mrs. S. H. Mumford presided at the piano.

Rev. Bearer delivered an excellent address, particularly fitting in the coming 247th anniversary of the battle of the Boyne. He chose as his text, John 14:6. "The Orange Order," said the cleric, "is a bulwark of British freedom without which the Empire would crumble. It has always stood for truth and the open Bible.

The speaker traced the history of religious growth from the time of the Reformation before the Protestant Reformation when the world was in a state of chaos. To Martin Luther, more than any other of the Reformation," the Protestant world today owes its religious freedom and enlightenment.

There are many evasive people today who do not go to the Bible for their religious knowledge. The Orange Order believes in the open Bible and looks to it for guidance and to Christ alone for salvation.

The Order exists to further the principles of liberty and freedom, the corner-stones on which it is founded and to which it freely subscribes. Soon there are, stated the speaker, reknad that there is but only a slight difference between the Church of England and the Church of Rome. This is an absolute fallacy. The Church of England is out-and-out Protestant, believing in the open Bible on which is the greatness of the British Empire.

Rev. Bearer called upon every Protestant to be true to the principles and upon every Orangeman to stand fast to the principles of the Order. We are living in a day when it behooves every one of us to be on his guard. We are Britain and Nazism rising around us. Britain is not far from the Rhine. The Church and the Bible will prevail in spread and maintain for us the freedom and liberty which became ours when William III was placed on the throne of England.

The Awakening of Farmer Jones

Modern Sketches by Boz — (Not Dickensonian)

Farmer Jones was in trouble. Not the kind that calls for action on the part of the law, but the sort of mental sickness that at times drags one down to the lowest level of despair. Yet on the surface he had nothing to worry about. Crops were good, or at least the prospects were the best evidenced in a number of years. The stock was sleek and fat. Milch cows were giving yields far in excess of former years. Prices were showing a definite upward trend. Yet Farmer Jones was in trouble.

His sense of pride was hurt. He came from a family which for generations had been noted for their innate sense of pride in the care and cleanliness of their buildings. The bright red of the Jones barns and the white of the Jones house had long been a landmark of this particular locality.

DOWN AT HEELS

But of late years this had changed. The former clean appearance of the buildings had disappeared. Ugly patches of gray were showing through the dull red of the barns. Paint was peeling off in many places. The white of the house and other buildings had changed to a dirty grey color. The Jones dream of a brand new cement milk house and stand was far from realization.

"I don't know what can be done about it," he confided to his neighbor one day. "My father and grandfather would turn over in their graves if they could but see the present condition of the house and buildings. Then I promised my wife a bathroom and that is far from becoming a reality. To tell you the truth, Brown, I can't afford it: Practically all the incoming revenue is eaten up in taxes and interest on the mortgage. I am afraid to ask my banker to loan me the money as I know he cannot pay it back in the time given me. I guess I must let things slide, and sit down and wait for something to turn up."

FARMER BROWN TO THE RESCUE

A week or so later, Farmer Brown drove into his neighbor's yard. "Listen, Jones," he said, "my wife's brother was at our place over the week-end and he told us something which I figured would interest you mightily. He tells me that the Government has gotten out what they call a Home Improvement Plan, under which folks can borrow money to modernize and beautify their homes and buildings."

"What good would that do me?" asked Jones, "that loan is likely for the city folks who have a guaranteed income coming in all the time. It's easy for them to do it."

"No," returned his friend, "the wife's brother told us as how farmers can borrow money under the plan too. And mind you you can get as high as two thousand dollars and have three years in which to pay it back."

Farmer Jones' eyes brightened. "Do you suppose there is something in that?" he asked. "Let's get in the car and run over to town and find out what is what."

BANG-UP CREDIT AT THE BANK

And Farmer Jones was not disappointed. Arriving at the bank he was graciously received by his business friend and the many advantageous points of the Home Improvement Plan were carefully explained to him.

"It will be a pleasure for us to loan money to men of your standing," the banker told him. "You can have three years in which to pay this money back. There are no unusual strings attached to this method of loaning money. It is purely a business transaction."

Today the Jones buildings again gleam with newly-applied coats of paint. A modern up-to-date milkhouse has taken the place of the dilapidated structure which served that purpose previously. The red of the barns shows in vivid contrast to the gleaming white of the house.

"MA" JONES PLEASED AS PUNCH

Inside Mrs. Jones beams her pleasure and pride as she shows her friends her newly-appointed bathroom. "I have wanted it for so long and thanks to the Home Improvement Plan my ambition of having such a thing is at last come true."

"And mind you," she confided to a neighbor, "we not only improved and beautified our home and buildings, but we stimulated business and trades. Why we had carpenters, painters, plumbers and others here for quite a while. It certainly made things pick up for them."

"Oh, yes," she continued, "we can pay this back in three years. You see it can so be arranged that we farmers can pay the loan back in seasonal instalments, instead of a monthly basis as the city folks do. It was certainly a blessing to us."

MORTON—DAYHAN

A pretty wedding was solemnized Wednesday, July 7th., at eleven o'clock in the Colborne United Church, when Miss Grace Dayhan was united in marriage to Mr. Burton Orsenz Morton. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Susan Dayhan and the late Mr. Samuel Dayhan of Colborne and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Morton of Stirling, Ont.

The church was tastefully decorated by the bride's Sunday School Class with delphinium and roses which with a charming setting for the ceremony. Rev. R. H. Hickard, pastor of the church, officiated and the wedding music was played by Miss Florence Clarke of Colborne.

The bride, who entered the church with her brother, Mr. Franklin Dayhan, was a radiant figure in a princess gown of white organdie de soie over taffeta with the fashionable large sleeves. Her long veil was of silk embroidered lace with a headpiece of lovely Queen Anne design. She wore a yellow gold bracelet, gift of the groom, and carried a bouquet of Sunburst roses, lily-of-the-valley and maiden hair fern. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Helen Hickman, as bridesmaid, who wore a gown of blue chiffon with white picture hat and carried a bouquet of Laddie carnations and baby's breath. Little Misses Frona Dayhan of Peterborough, niece of the bride, and Janet Hendry of Toronto, cousin of the groom, dressed alike in yellow organdie and carrying a colonial bouquet of mixed sweet peas and roses acted as flower girls.

Mr. Russell Teal of Colborne, was best man and the ushers were Mr. James Totton, Toronto, and Mr. William Hickman of Peterborough.

During the signing of the register Miss Dorothy Dayhan, sister of the bride and Mrs. Grant Griffith of Colborne, sang as a duet "I Love You Truly."

A reception for the immediate relatives of both families was held following the ceremony. Mrs. Dayhan, mother of the bride, received wearing a gown of white and navy printed chiffon with a corsage of yellow roses and blue cornflowers. Mrs. Morton, mother of the groom, assisted and wore navy triple sheer georgette with corsage of red roses and sweet peas.

Later the bride and groom left on a motor trip to Montreal and other eastern points, the bride travelling in a rumble, linen suit with navy accessories. On their return they will reside near Stirling.

Fight Moguls Approve of Farr - Louis Scrap; Tommy's Life History Resembles Fiction

Has Only Lost Ten Bouts Since 1929, Creditable Record Shown

SCHMELING SILENT

By JACK BRAYLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 7.—(CP)—They build incredible fiction around original characters like Tommy Farr, the British and Empire heavyweight boxing champion who has a world title shot with Joe Louis in prospect for September. But the amazing story of the young Welshman's climb into a spot in the sports sun is rugged truth.

Tommy—Thomas David Farr of Tonypandy, Wales, to give him his full title—signed Saturday to meet the American Negro and yesterday the New York State Athletic Commission, failing to hear from its No. 1 challenge, Max Schmeling, approved the 15-round bout for Sept. 23.

His experience and matured seriousness is a contradiction to his 22 years. But they stand on their own feet when still young in his part of Wales.

Fighter at 13 Years of Age

Tommy was polishing boots in a hotel at nine. He was serving tables at 10 and a year later entered the coal pits. Hardened before his time, he began a distinguished fighter at tender 13 and at 16 he was boxeering on semi-pro. Husky and awkward at 15, he got his first mitts, Militry.

He was just another promising but unpolished fighter the night he entered a London ring against Charlie Belanger of Winnipeg, veteran light-heavyweight champion of Canada. That was in August, 1934.

Belanger had taken Farr's measure at Newcastle two months before and the Welshman was given little chance to win the return go. Thats where shrewd Ted Broadribb, his present manager, stepped in.

Wins Over Belanger (ad-z)

Ted tells the story:

"I could not resist the temptation to poke my nose into other people's business. I went along to Tommy's dressing room before the fight.

"You should win tonight, I said. 'You can beat all the fellows with not a little restraint. Don't you know you can box—a heap better than anyone in this class?'

"Said Farr: 'I don't believe I have a chance at all against this Belanger. He gave me a terrific beating at Newcastle.'

"'It's just nonsense.'" I told him quietly but emphatically. 'Use your left hand and believe in it. Do nothing rash and you can't help beating him.' Farr beat Belanger that night. What he chiefly lacked was faith."

A few months later Broadribb became the Welshman's manager. In May, 1935, Tommy Farr fought for against Manuel Aubrey at White City and won a hard, six-round decision. This started him on the march to his present place in the heavyweight division. His record from then shows 13 decisions, four knockouts, two draws and not a single loss.

Tommy has had 270 fights but his compiled record goes back only to May 26, 1926. Since then he has fought 69 times, winning 51, drawing eight and losing 10. Six victories were via the knockout route.

RETAINS TITLE

Frankie Genovese

Frankie Genovese, of Toronto, who captured the Canadian welterweight championship from Vanny Vernon's Gordon Wallace in their first meeting, retained the title in a return bout in Toronto. Genovese won a split decision from the judges though ringsiders considered the Toronto Italian outclassed by his more experienced opponent.

ROVERS ABSORB 20-6 TROUNCING

Peterborough Auburns Show Too Much Scoring Punch

SECOND LOSS

Rovers Held Scoreless Until Halfway Mark

Trenton, July 7 (Special)—Hooking Belleville Rovers lacrosse crew scoreless until seven minutes and ten seconds after the second period was underway, Peterborough Auburns romped to an easy 20-6 triumph at the Quinte Street Arena here last night. The attendance was fair. After the first five minutes of play it was evident that the northern city aggregation was superior. The win was the seventh straight in as many starts and lengthened the Auburn's Central A.L.A. loop lead. The defeat in the second for the Rovers, having dropped a contest to Oshawa in that city earlier this season.

Creighton a Standout

Creighton between the Peterborough pipes turned in a brilliant performance and was a stumbling block for the Belleville forwards. Executing a well timed combination offensive the invaders broke through our sides from time to time and again and gave Goodier in the nets his busiest assignment of the year. Dominating Viterelli, smart shifty Auburn forward gathered the scoring laurels of the evening rumbling in five goals and chalking up three assists for his troupe. Gould, Drake and Day were the best looking forward men that Harry Moore loosed over the boards, while Partridge and Smart turned in fine exhibitions on the rear guard. Right after the game started Magee took a pass from Dundas to tally the invaders first count. Magee and Smart were sent to the cooler for five minutes apiece for wrestling. Dundas scored alone and Day of the Rovers was waved to the coop for slashing and King netted the ball on Viterelli's pass. Peterborough 6, Belleville 0.

Play Is Lively

As the second frame started Chute of the Auburns fell hard against the boards and injured his shoulder so badly that he was unable to return to the game. The Rovers first score came at this point when Housom shot Gould's pass into the open twine. King returned the compliment a little over a minute later from Loucks. Viterelli counted two within fifteen seconds of each other and Tompkins garnered Belleville's second goal from Lalonde as the bell for half time sounded. Peterborough 11, Belleville 2.

The play livened up considerably in the third canto and the Rovers were on a par with the Peterboro display. King ushered home Peterborough's twelfth goal after which the smartest scrap of the evening came when Viterelli side-stepped his way through the entire Belleville team. Tompkins tailed on a solo effort. The brawl involving a half a dozen players was stopped by Referee Laughlin who dealt out a penalty to Partridge of Peterboro for taking a swing at Viterelli and attacking the Peterboro flash when the man who he fell wide of his mark. Magee and King contributed to score for the Auburns and Drake sank Belleville's fourth counter, Sloane of Peterborough was sent to the cooler for slashing as the bell rang. Peterborough 16; Belleville 3.

Burden Injured

Final quarter opened with Burden Rovers' forward receiving a bad crash over the eye but continued after being patched up. Drake and Logie looked to tally for Belleville and Paumier shot Goodier's pass into the cage for the Petes. While Magee and Housom were taking part in a fray Viterelli scored for the Auburns. Partridge drove the ball between the Peterborough bars on a pass from Logie and Dundas scored for Peterborough to conclude the fixture. Final score: Peterborough 20; Belleville 6.

AAJMAA KIDS GAIN REVENGE

Dracup in Rare Form as Juniors Win 8-2 Errorless Ball

Cutting the deliveries of two hurlers, the Aajmaa kids gained sweet revenge over the Percival Store nine to chalk up an 8 to 2 victory in a scheduled Senior Bottle Ball fixture at Gordon Park this evening, thereby remaining in the league race for a coveted play-off position.

The Aajmaa juniors touched Earl Clarke for eight safeties and drove him from the mound in the eighth. Smith finishing the pastime for the Percivals. Skipper Dracup's diamond rags used all of his available bench material to endeavour pulling the game out of the long echelon, but "Red" Townsend's kids were equal to the occasion. Harold Dracup was on the hilltop for the juniors and scattered seven hits well, the Percivals only scoring in the last frame when they made three hits count into two runs. Dracup was in splendid form, limiting the Percivals to four small hits until the last frame.

Stan Amo with a triple and a single led the Aajmaa kids at bat as Amo collected three safeties and Adams a brace of hits. Skipper Dracup was content with a single hit in the third to score two. Thompson and Wilting hit in the final frame to give the losers their runs. The Aajmaa kids played errorless ball in victory.

An all "lock-making" game scheduled for this evening at Coleman Flats when the Corbins and the Belleville Bargain clash. The former has two successive wins over the Bargains, who vow vengeance tonight.

The line-ups:

Percivals—Duffy lf; Riggs 2b; Booth 3b; Thrasher 2b; Clark and Smith p; Thompson c; Bushell ss; Hammitt and Wilkins cf; Shortt and Barriage rf.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

Washington, July 7—(AP)— No matter what you may think of this guy Dean, you have to give him credit—he knows how to steal a show.—Pvt. Joe E. Lowe it again. His latest "rebellion," his flight eastward, and a dramatic little hour arrival, plus his recent row with President Ford Frick, have made Dean just about the most looked-for among the major league luminaries here for the all star game today.

Washington sheet hit the ceiling when Diz said in St. Louis yesterday he was feeling tired and aimed to take the day off. . . The story got the headlines here and throughout the early editions Dean was blasted for running out on American League fans. . . When word got around that he had changed his mind and taken off for the capital, he was the big news of the game. . . Odds are Dizzy was just putting on his act—or "sick," as he calls it—all the time.

Bidding figure filibert estimates $5,000,000 worth of baseball talent will be on display today. . . Spectators want only $25 for a pair of $110 grandstand seats. . . Wes Ferrell can afford to be temperamental. . . He showed up at headquarters yesterday with a Hollywood movie contract in his pocket.

Virtually every major league club owner is here. . . Bob Quinn of Boston Bees is one of the most popular.

Autograph hounds were so thick it took Babe Ruth 10 minutes to get to the desk from his hotel door. He registered as "George H. Ruth", thwarted a little moral support on the part of the fans this evening would help also.

Although we have entertained suspicions regarding the fairness of some of the Northern Orffe-Footerboro C.O.B.L. clubs, had something like this to say—"Oh, well, we're in the lacrosse loop and wait until the rugby football season is opened, we'll show 'em a trick or two then." The Liftlock City baddy fan many years has scoffed at Belleville using sport talent from surrounding small communities. The latest story out is that Peterboro' is to annex the Lindsay football available next; fall in order to strengthen the rugby squad. At least Belleville never travelled as far afield as the distance from Peterboro to Lindsay for sport talent and thereby ruin the potentialities of the game in a smaller centre.

Regarding the above subject, the Peterboro scribe says—"Jack Tripp, the ex-Lindsay grider says that nearly all Lindsay players are expected to try out with Peterborough this fall. He may be right because Lindsay gridders could abide by the rosin rule as they are closer to Peterborough than any other team in the loop. It is funny how many plan to retire each fall but who is football all summer and go back at it in the autumn. However, we figure Dick and Campbell are definitely out. Tripp could continue to try out with Peterborough and Kirby and McKee have similar ambitions, though Kirkey may line up with Belleville. A lot of changes in the rugby group are expected. A number of football players in Peterborough are also said to be gridders."

It would have taken a pretty hard-hearted person not to have got a kick out of the opening of the two Belleville Recreations last night, even old Scrooge himself would have to admit that. The joyous shouts of children's voices, demonstrating their happiness over the new parks is ample reward for the local Kiwanis Club. There is now additional equipment for the kiddies at both playgrounds and the duty is up to Kiwanis Club to provide the fun-makers for the kiddies in the form of entertainers. Lads like their task smilingly but co-operation is always appreciated.

"Red" Townsend's Aajmaa juniors turned the tables on the Percivals, handing the latter sterling by Harold Dracup last evening. Dracup hurled the ball, keeping the 1936 provincial champs well off the work sheet until late in the last frame. The Aajmaa kids' errorless ball behind him. The local softball moguls claim they have no trouble in finding good umpiring material. If the league officials would appoint one or four capable umpires and give them the much-needed backing of the executive, one doesn't see little left to object about.

The New York State Boxing Commission placed its stamp of approval on the Louis-Farr title bout, to be held at the Yankee Stadium during the week of September 23rd next. In approving the date Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the Commission, announced the English State Commission would not recognize the forthcoming Farr-Schmeling bout as a championship fight and we now understand Farr may give Schmeling the "works" a la Braddock, with a walk-out powder.

The N. Y. Commission say they notified Schmeling that Louis was desirous of defending his title this fall and they considered him (Schmeling) the outstanding contender, but received no reply from the German, which prompted them to place their approval on the Farr-Louis bout. Schmeling says he wired Mike Jacobs he was willing to meet Louis, providing he beat the British Empire titleholder. On paper it looks as though all concerned are giving the Black Uhlan the works, unreasonable, perhaps due to the fact it is a recognized fact

Holiday Bride

By Ann Demarest

With a sigh she surveyed her work. She hoped Cilly would be pleased. Parks could serve the dining room just as she finished with the table.

"It looks beautiful, miss," the butler said.

"Thank you Parks." "I never saw so many flowers," he went on. "Looks like a wedding. Some people have everything."

Jeanne nodded. Some people did have everything, she thought almost bitterly. The contrast had never seemed so great to her before. Cilly had no antenna beyond the success of Barty while Jeanne was almost ill from unhappiness over Bryan.

The rest of the afternoon was spent filling small bowls with salted nuts and helping the already overworked cook with the tiny canapes to be served with the cocktails.

About five o'clock when Jeanne finished with the work, she started down the hall towards the library and the telephone rang before she passed the stand. It was Norma Carteret asking for Cilly.

"I'm sorry dear," Jeanne said Cilly's actress friend who still seemed her best chum-because Jeanne had barred her from the library to prevent her interrupting Barbieta's work.

Miss Carteret demanded haughtily to know who was speaking.

Jeanne's heart sank. "This is MacDonald."

There was a pause on the other end of the wire. "Let me speak to Mr. Barbieta."

"Just a moment. I'll see if he is in the library."

Jeanne left the telephone and hurried to the library. Gordon Bartlett was on his own private telephone and when Jeanne entered the room he motioned her to wait outside.

Jeanne went back to the hall telephone. "I'm sorry, Mr. Bartlett is on another wire, Miss Carteret."

"I will wait," came the emphatic reply.

As Jeanne left the telephone Gordon Bartlett came out of the library.

"I want you to take a taxi down to Washington Square right away," he called to Jeanne. "Pick up a book at Mr. Bayles' apartment. He'll wait until a quarter of six. You'll have to hurry."

Jeanne nodded. "I'll leave right away. There is a call for you on this telephone, Mr. Bartlett."

"I can't take it, Parks," he called to the butler, "tell whoever it is this telephone that I am out."

Jeanne opened her mouth to protest but Gordon Bartlett was hurrying her into the library.

"Take a call, if she starts to say but he interrupted her impatiently.

"You know I don't take calls when I am working. Baylor apartment is in the red brick house right around the corner from Fifth Avenue. He is waiting for the six train for the west so you must get there before he leaves for the station."

In the last Jeanne wondered what Norma Carteret would think of Parks's message that Gordon Bartlett was not in.

"She'll probably blame it on me as she did that day I had to keep her out of the library," Jeanne thought.

But she had no time to worry about Cilly's friend. The taxi hurrying over the icy streets pulled up before the red brick house. Jeanne got out and asked the driver to wait. In the vestibule she glanced hurriedly over the names in the mail-boxes. John Fox, Ann Dietrich, and then she paused. The name was Dora Lord, Cilly's friend. A coincidence, she thought and then looked on for Mr. Bayles' apartment. He lived on the third floor. Jeanne rang the bell and when the electric buzzer sounded she opened the door and ran upstairs. On the second floor a door opened but she hurried past and as she started up the stairs to the third floor she heard a familiar voice. Jeanne looked down over the banister. Cilly was standing in the doorway looking up at a tall brown man.

"Cilly, I positively can't come tonight. I've told you so twice."

Jeanne stood still, afraid Cilly would discover her. Then she took another step.

"I think you're mean, Deke," Cilly said in a soft coaxing voice. "I've been counting on you." She put her hand on his arm but the young man shook it off impatiently.

"I mean it, Cilly. And I don't think you should come down here to see me either. It doesn't look well."

"If you'll come to my party I won't do it again. Please, Deke."

"All right, I'll try to make it," he agreed reluctantly.

On the third floor Jeanne heard a door open and then some one came out into the hall. It was Mr. Bayles, she thought, wondering why she hadn't come upstairs. Jeanne hesitated and then ran up the steps two at a time and then looked on for Cilly Bartlett from seeing her. Cilly had started to say something to the man and then looked at with a gasp. Without stopping Jeanne ran down the hall to Mr. Bayles who was standing outside of his apartment with a package in his hand.

"Oh, here you are, I was afraid you wouldn't wait for it," he said, handing the book to Jeanne.

"Thank you very much," Jeanne gasped and the man turned back into his apartment.

She stood motionless in the hall. If she went downstairs she would probably meet Cilly again and although she was on an errand for Gordon Bartlett Jeanne was certain that Cilly would not like having been seen by her husband's secretary. For a moment she waited and then she peered cautiously over the banister. There was no one in the second floor hall. With a feeling of great relief Jeanne went downstairs. Cilly was nowhere in sight and when she got outside the man had disappeared too. Surely the man wouldn't have left without getting his fare. Jeanne peered anxiously up and down the street but it was empty. And then it dawned on her that perhaps Cilly had taken the cab.

The soft snow of the early afternoon had turned into a driving sleet. Jeanne walked up to the avenue hailing a taxi but every one that passed was taken. The bitter wind bit at her cheeks and in her short fur jacket Jeanne was damp and cold. She waited almost ten minutes before she could get an empty cab.

By the time she arrived back at Mr. Bartlett's Cilly was there. Jeanne saw her through the open doorway of the library as she went down the hall and Cilly glanced up as she passed.

"The flowers look lovely, Miss MacDonald," she said sweetly. "I'm awfully sorry I didn't get back in time to help you but I had a tea date uptown and just couldn't get away."

"I'm glad you like the flowers," Jeanne said quietly.

As she went into the library, Jeanne thought, "Cilly must have recognized me on the stairway."

For some reason the girl did not want Jeanne to know that she knew where she had been.

No wonder Lance was unhappy. It was Deke Lord that Cilly was interested in.

Jeanne put the book on Gordon Bartlett's desk and went into the alcove to take off her hat and coat. When she returned to the room the telephone was ringing. A man's voice answered the call.

"I wonder if you will give Miss Bartlett a message for me?" he said rapidly. And before Jeanne could tell him that Cilly was at home he hurried on. "Tell her Lord regrets he can't attend her party this evening."

With a clipped thank you he cut off, leaving Jeanne staring at the telephone. Reluctantly she went to Cilly's room to tell her. It was strange, Deke Lord, called on Gordon Bartlett's telephone. Every one knew he had an unlisted telephone of his own so that he would not be disturbed by calls.

Cilly was in the shower when Jeanne called to her. If she expected the girl to show any sign of emotion she was disappointed. Cilly took the message coolly enough but avoided Jeanne's eyes.

"I hoped he wouldn't come," she said lightly. "Lance doesn't like him very well and it might have been unpleasant."

Jeanne turned away. So Lance was coming to the party. He had not left town after all.

ENTERTAINMENT 19

Gordon Bartlett closed the door to the hall but even then sounds of Cilly's party drifted into the room, gay bursts of laughter and dance music. Cilly had an orchestra from one of the most popular night clubs to play for her guests.

"I guess the party is a success," Bartlett said to Jeanne with a forced smile as he finished dictating to her.

Jeanne nodded. "I hope it is. Your sister counted on it going well. I'll stay and type these notes, Mr. Bartlett."

He leaned back in the chair. "You are sure you don't mind? It must be hard on you to have to work when all the other young people are having such an exciting time."

"No", she said with a slight smile, "it isn't hard on me. I've never been accustomed to parties like that, anyway."

"I'm a good thing probably," he said. "They never seemed much fun to me but Cilly never has a good time unless there is a lot of noise."

The door to the library burst open and Jeanne looked up quickly to see Norma Carteret walking into the room, her eyes on Gordon Bartlett at his desk. Jeanne thought she had never seen such sheer sophistication as the young actress in a black satin evening dress that showed every line of her body.

"You're an old slow poke to stay in this stuffy library all evening when every one else is having fun, Gordon!" she cried gayly, perching herself on the edge of his desk. The girl's cheeks were flushed and her eyes were too bright.

"Norma Crawford, I don't care for parties," Bartlett said stiffly as he got up from his desk chair.

"I didn't believe you." Norma said, turning her eyes on Jeanne. "I think your secretary influences you too much," she went on in a sharp voice. "She won't even let you take your personal telephone calls any more."

Gordon Bartlett stared at her. "I don't know what you mean by that, Miss Carteret," he said coldly.

Furiously Norma turned on Jeanne. "So that is why Parks told me Mr. Bartlett wasn't in after I called him. You didn't even tell him that I was waiting on the line, phone."

"I did tell him that he had a call," Jeanne answered, but he was busy."

Jeanne turned to Gord Bartlett. "You remember, don't you?" she asked when, with relief of the breakfast room.

The music started again as Jeanne slipped down the hall into the small room. There were no lights on and she sat on one of the broad window sills looking out over the city. It was a relief to be alone, there in the dark, listening to the music. The orchestra was playing a medley of tunes, and now they were playing a love song that had been popular last year when she had danced to it with Bryan. It held a special significance for her. It wasn't just another popular dance piece but the song that she cherished because it was then that she and Bryan realized their love for each other.

NEW YORK STOCKS
New York, July 7.—(AP)—Selected stocks overrode profit-selling in today's market and managed to extend Tuesday's recovery by registering small amounts in many instances. Rails, Utilities and Specialties were well up in front at the opening in which blocks of several thousand shares changed hands. The pace slowed at intervals, but transfers were at the rate of about 1,800,000 shares.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

A much better tone was noted in the market yesterday, this applying to the Canadian list as well as to the Wall-Street. The persistent liquidation of the last few months has materially improved the technical position and on any good news it had been generally anticipated that a good recovery would ensue. Although a wide forward movement is not looked for, a steady rising market may be expected over the immediate months ahead.

The above viewpoint is predicted on the fact that based upon results for the first five months of 1937, Canadian business continues to improve, but at a somewhat slower pace than in 1936. Important developments of the calendar year to date affecting Canada, include—substantial gain in railway net revenues, which increased 64.5 per cent in the first five months; Imperial Conference in London, which should have important bearing upon Canadian and Empire trade generally; Ontario Government reports surplus for all accounts 1936-37 of $9,213,000; Dominion Government offers conversion loan to holders of the $236,300,000 tax-free Victory Loan 1 1-2 per cent Bonds, due December 1st, 1937; Government reports $113,500,000 of bonds converted, thereby effecting an annual saving in interest charges of over $3,750,000; taxation revenues of the Federal Government for the first two months of the current fiscal year gained $36,000,000 over the similar months of 1936-37. In view of the large increase there is a strong probability that the estimated over-all deficit of $25,000,000 for 1937-38 will be considerably reduced; newsprint production gained 30.7 per cent; Canadian balance of trade improved 35.9 per cent.

The visible supply of wheat as of June 1, 1937 was 51,219,000 bushels compared with 154,585,370 bushels one year previous; it is the smallest visible supply since 1925. The total expenditure of foreign tourists in Canada during 1936 is officially estimated at $257,000,000 as against the final estimate for 1935 of $214,000,000. Canadian tourists abroad spent approximately $56,000,000 in 1936 contrasted with $37,000,000 in 1935. Based on these figures there was a balance from the tourist trade favorable to Canada of $162,000,000 in 1936 and $177,000,000 in 1935.

Advance In Royalite Oil the Outstanding Feature

The common shares of the Royalite Oil Co. Ltd. sold at 49 1-4 this morning, thus establishing a new high on the recovery. There are several reasons advanced in this connection, one of which is that the Royalite-Sterling Pacific No. 4 responded to the acid treatment in such a remarkable manner that its daily production is expected to be above 1000 barrels per day of oil worth $1.78 a barrel and with Royalite handling the output from the well to the consumer. Financial Service is informed that earnings from this well will be the equivalent of $1. a share on the Stock. Then again, Royalite will in all probability bring in two more producing wells before long. One of course will be Sterling No. 5 and the insiders are very hopeful that it will be as good a crude oil gusher as was Sterling No. 4.

HAD RHEUMATIC PAINS FOR 25 YEARS

His Arms Were Becoming Useless

It was about 25 years ago that rheumatism first marked some poor sufferer; and finally the day came when he could hardly lift his arms. But he found relief—here in this letter he tells the whole story:—

"About 25 years ago I first experienced rheumatic twinges; rheumatism in my arm and shoulder. A few years later lumbago also attacked me. They gradually got worse until the pain got acute in both arms and legs. I would often lift a jugful of water with my arm extended straight out. About 12 months ago I bought a bottle of Kruschen Salts and by the time it was finished I was agreeably surprised at a slight improvement. I bought another one, and when that was finished all the pain had disappeared, and has never appeared since."—T.R.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are frequently caused by deposits of uric acid in the muscles and joints. The numerous salts in Kruschen assist in stimulating the internal organs to healthy, regular activity, and help them to eliminate this excess uric acid.

Big Rush Seen For Fishing

U. S. Tourists Eager to Fish in Hastings County Lakes

Hastings county's lakes and streams this year will be fished as never before by six invading army of hit carrying hopefuls from States throughout the Union south of the border, it is confidently predicted by those in close contact with conditions.

One indication of the number of those who will tramp the country borders is found at the office of Mr. George Finch lister of non-resident fishing licences. Though the season has but started, to date over one hundred have been handed out. Of this number the greatest are family licences for family parties.

Largest purchaser in the local office has been F. D. Dorn, Bradford, Pa., millionaire sportsman, who this week was granted $30 worth of licences. He arrived in Belleville in a 16-cylinder automobile of latest make, drawing once the largest trailers made. Heading toward the Tweed district, the party tendered an invitation for thumbser of the licences to accompany them. It was reluctantly turned down.

IS PROMISING YOUNG RUNNER

Little Miss Helen Ryan, one of Belleville's promising young athletes showed a clean pair of heels to a large number of contestants in one of the races held at the Bridge playgrounds last night, but Helen's natural shyness manifested itself when the race was over, and, together with blushfulness the little lady rapidly disappeared in the crowd following her victory and had to be located before she could be presented with her prize.

HEAT CUTS CRIME NO ARRESTS MADE

No arrests were necessary in Belleville during the past 48 hours, while the weather humidity saw a general decrease in transient applications for a night's lodging at the police station. Only two knights of the road seeking shelter at the city station house last night.

FIRE DESTROYS DOCK IN RIVER

Fire of unknown origin partially destroyed the remains of an old dock situated on the shore of the Belvidere Hotel early yesterday morning. Old planks and boarding in a state of disrepair, smouldered through the night and finally broke into a blaze. Fire apparatus responded to the call, quickly reduced the blaze. At 9 o'clock, some few hours later, the flames had been put completely out, saving the return of the firemen. No damage was done to any of the surrounding buildings.

Tiny Rubber Raft May Mean Life For Lost Fliers

The tiny rubber life raft which their world-girdling land aeroplane, Amelia Earhart Putnam, ace aviatrix is inflating with a small hand pump, may mean the difference between life and death for her and her flying companion Capt. Fred Noonan, navigator. Down somewhere in the Pacific ocean in isolated Howland Island on an attempted 2,500-mile ocean hop in aviation history was under way when Miss Earhart was believed to have broadcast a radio message to the effect that her craft was rapidly becoming water-logged and in a danger of sinking. Unless the fliers are on a reef or tiny island the rubber life raft would be their only method of keeping afloat if the machine sank. Meanwhile the greatest search in United States

LEAGUE TO CONSIDER HOLY LAND PARTITION

Jewish, Arab Cultures Will Never Assimilate, Royal Commission Says

Jewish Leaders Oppose Restriction of Jew Immigration

FEELINGS TENSE

New Mandate Proposed For Area Including Holy Places

London, July 8 (CP)—The British government announced today its approval of a Royal Commission report carving ancient Palestine into three new states and warned that military intervention would follow any renewal of racial outbreaks in the Holy Land.

The Royal Commission decided that strife between Arab and Jew in Palestine was too deep-rooted for the two races to work out their national aspirations within one state. It expected sympathy with both groups and believed they would both benefit from the partition.

Three States.

It recommended formation of a Jewish state, an Arab state which would be merged with neighboring Transjordan, and a third district, to be operated by Great Britain under a new League of Nations mandate.

The mandated territory would include Jerusalem, Holy City of Christian and Jew, Bethlehem and would hold authority over Nazareth and certain other centres within the Arab and Jewish states.

The solution offered will have to be approved by the League of Nations which gave Britain its mandate to establish a state, forfeiting the Great War.

Jerusalem Quiet, Tense.

In Jerusalem where the 400-page report and the government's white paper stating it approved the solution were issued simultaneously with London, the country was reported quiet and tense.

The British High Commissioner, Sir Arthur Wauchope, appealed to all factions to accept the report and pointed to the benefit to both Arab and Jews which the white paper declared would emerge from the plan.

Jewish leaders in London were coolly hostile, particularly to the section of the report which would restrict Jewish immigration for the next five years to not more than 12,000 annually.

Leagues to Meet.

The program, which the commission described as a "surgical operation" will be considered at a special meeting of the League of Nations Permanent Mandates Commission, to be held July 30 in general. The Commission will report to the League Council for final action.

The government in the white paper warned that "pending establishment of such a scheme, his Majesty's government have no intention of surrendering their responsibility for the peace, order and good government throughout Palestine."

The report of the Commission, headed by Lord Peel and appointed in August, 1936, following widespread terrorism in Palestine, was unanimous.

Among salient points in the official summary of the report were:

"There can be no question of Dublin or assimilation between Jewish and Arab cultures. The Jewish National Home cannot be half-national.

"Wide Gulf or Ridge.

"The gulf between the races is thus already wide and will continue to widen if they remain united.

"The Arab higher committee was in the extent responsible for maintaining and protracting the disturbances last year. The Mufti of Jerusalem as President must bear his due share of responsibility.

"The problem of immigration has been aggravated by three factors:

(1) The drastic restrictions imposed on immigration in the United States.

(2) The advent of the Nationalist Socialist (Nazi) government in Germany, and

(3) The increasing economic pressure on the Jews in Poland.

His Majesty's Government should lay down a "political high level" on Jewish immigration.

This high level should be fixed for the next five years at 12,000 per annum."

Freedom and Security.

"While these proposals do not offer either the Arab or the Jew all they want," the official summary of the report said, "they do offer each party what it wants most, namely freedom and security.

"The advantages of the Arab of Palestine may be summarized as follows:

"(I) They obtain their national independence and will co-operate on an equal footing with the Arab of the neighboring countries in the cause of Arab unity and progress.

"(II) They are finally delivered from the fear of being dominated by the Jews from the possibility of ultimate subjection to Nation rule.

Jewish National Home.

"(III) In particular, the final territory the Arabs regard as Jewish within a fixed frontier and the enactment of a new mandate for the protection of the holy places, certainly guaranteed by the League of Nations, removes all anxiety that the holy places should ever come under Jewish control.

"(IV) As a set-off to the loss of territory and the limitation of liberties, the Arab State will receive a subvention from the Jewish State. It will also, in view of the backwardness of Trans-Jordan, obtain a grant of £2,000,000 (about $10,000,000) from the British Treasury, subject to an agreement

Jerusalem and Bethlehem Must Be Ever Inviolate

To Protect Holy Places And Keep Access For All World

London, July 8 (CP)—Royal Commission's report on Palestine makes it clear the Commission and the British government regard the sanctity of the holy places of the country "a sacred trust for all time.

"The partition plan is made subject to the overriding necessity of keeping the sanctity of Jerusalem and Bethlehem inviolate and of ensuring free and safe access to them for all the world," the official summary of the report said.

Sacred Trust.

"The protection of the holy places is a permanent trust, unique in its character and purpose.

"In order to avoid misunderstanding, it might frankly be stated that this trust will only terminate if and when the League of Nations and the United States desire it to do so, and while it would be the trustee's (Britain's) duty to promote the well-being and development of the local population concerned, it is not intended that in course of time they should stand by themselves as a wholly self-governing community. (Britain has a separate treaty with the United States under which she is pledged not to modify her Palestine mandate without United States consent.

Good and Just Government.

"Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Nazareth and the Sea of Galilee (Lake Tiberias) are not merely sanctuaries, no question would arise of balancing Arab against Jewish claims or vice versa.

"All the inhabitants of the territory have claims to good and just government without regard for sectional interests, which must be its basic principle."

The parliament of the United Kingdom "would be willing" to make up the deficit incurred in keeping up the mandatory government, the summary said.

Toronto, July 8 (CP)—Two road workers were killed and nine others injured, two of them critically, when a heavily-laden six-wheeled transport truck ploughed into a gang of road workers waiting to start work on the Kingston Road in Scarboro, near Toronto today.

Thirty men were in the group waiting for the truck that brought death. It carried their tools. The rest of the truck's load, auto parts for Oshawa, was spilled over the roadway.

The accident followed a collision between the truck, headed east, and a light passenger car travelling in the other direction. Owners Bonser of Vineland, driver of the truck, was unhurt, and Arthur Bowes of York Township, driver of the passenger car, escaped with facial cuts. A passenger, Ted Stevens, with slight cuts on the hands.

Study Thames Flood Control

Toronto, July 8.—(CP)—Deputation from five Western Ontario Municipalities today received assurance from Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn the Ontario Government would assume cost of a preliminary survey with the view of determining what engineering steps could be taken to cope with flood situations on the Thames valley in future.

Heading the deputation Kingsmill of London, the deputation requested that the Government assume the cost of such a survey. Mayor Kingsmill said he did not think the municipalities as a whole would be asked to bear this expense.

"I can see no objection to that," said Premier Hepburn, "we will have to make a complete preliminary survey. The trouble will be where in the future I am afraid owing to the fact that there is so much tile drainage in the province.

Officials of the department of Agriculture going about the country urging farmers to tile drain their land and that makes the situation more serious. Tile drainage is necessary in good farming but it adds to flood conditions. There are no statistics left to absorb the water. I do not see any relief in sight so something will have to be done."

CONSTIPATION IS A MISERABLE THING!

It takes the pep right out of you —makes you feel tired and irritable—ready to worry over the slightest trifle.

Yet it can be corrected in most cases so easily. Common constipation is usually caused by a lack of "bulk" in the foods you eat.

Millions of people have learned that Kellogg's All-Bran adds this bulk to the diet. Within the body, Bran absorbs twice its weight in water, forming a soft mass and gently sponging out the system.

Kellogg's All-Bran also furnishes vitamin B to tone the intestines and iron for the blood.

Two tablespoonfuls daily as a cereal with milk or cream, or in recipes, are sufficient. Three times daily if severe cases.

LATE MRS. F. ELLIOTT

(Stockdale)

(Contributed)

This following relating to the late Mrs. F. E. Elliott has been contributed by a friend:

Kate Francis Ethel Fyfler, beloved wife of Frank Elliott, passed away suddenly at her home on Tuesday, June 26, 1937, in her 63rd year.

"As God hath given so hath He taken away". Surely we have never had the certainty of the fulfilment of God's will proved to His children so impressed upon us, than in the passing away so suddenly of the deceased, and surely we shall need no greater lesson of the unreliability of our lease of life than on this earthly sphere, than in her passing to the home of her Father in Heaven. And never in the memory of any who knew her, has the passing of one left that aching void of irreparable loss in the hearts of the whole community, for no one did she was to each and every one who knew her, such an example of the real essence of human love, sacrifice, compassion and wholehearted devotion.

In her daily life she had created a living, yet self-unconscious monument to the Great Golden Rule, "Unasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these My children ye have done it unto Me".

Her loss is a most severe one to community, the departed always taking a most prominent part in the Women's Association, the W.M.S. and Sunday School and she was an efficient teacher of the Bible Class and mother to the L.O.B.A. Philathea Class, being their first Mistress. The deceased had not complained and had been about her daily work and was preparing for a bee to raise their barn the following week, when about four o'clock she was taken with a heart attack. The doctor was called but she had passed away before he had arrived.

The funeral was held from the family residence at 1.30 p.m. on Friday, July 2nd. The cortege proceeded to Stockdale United Church where service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. J. F. Lane. The service was most impressive Mr. Lane ealing as his text: St. John 12:26. Mr. Lane said this might seem a queer text but he knew no better tribute to the departed for surely her life was one of fragrance, Hymns favorite to the deceased were sung: "O Worship The King" and "Rock of Ages". Mrs. Lane, Norman Simmons and Mrs. Leslie Frost rendered a beautiful duet "There is no Disappointment in Heaven".

From the church the body was taken to the Cemetery near by for interment.

Mrs. Ross Hubble, Mrs. Albert Caskey, Mrs. D. Frost, Mrs. John Dowsett, Mrs. Percy Hall and Mrs. Lloyd Hannah, Past Mistresses acted as pall bearers for the deceased.

The bearers were—Ross Hubble, Harvey Pitcher, Lloyd Hannah, Cecil Frost, John Rogers, Nelson Potter.

Rev. J. F. Lane officiated at the grave after which Mr. Lane conducted the last rites of the Lodge.

Mrs. Elliott leaves to mourn her loss a sorrowing husband, three sons, Frank of Toronto, Harold Malcolm of Oshawa and Earl at home; a sister, Miss Francis Fyfler of Asborfield, Sask., a niece, Mrs. W. Harrison of Belleville, a nephew, John Collins of Trentinghas.

There were many beautiful floral tributes.

LATE MICHAEL CONNELL

The funeral of Michael Connell took place from the family residence, 101 South Church Street, this Thursday morning to St. Michael's Church, where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson, V.G., who conducted also the committal service at the graveside in St. James' Cemetery.

The bearers were— Messrs. C. Bawden, T. R. Dolan, T. N. Sullivan, V. Huffman, James Lynch and S. Garvin.

ROBERT E. SANTER

Many old friends in Belleville of Robert E. Santer will regret to learn of his death which occurred at Napanee on Wednesday, July 7th., after a lengthy illness. He was 59 years of age.

The late Mr. Santer resided at Belleville for some time and was employed by Wallbridge & Clarke. Napanee, and D. H. McBride, grocer, Victoria Avenue and Charles Street. For a time he conducted a grocery here on his own account. During the Great War, he enlisted in 1915 and served overseas with the mechanical transport. For the past three years he had been residing at Napanee, where he was engaged as an insurance agent. In religion he was a member of the United Church and fraternally he was a Past Master of Eureka Lodge No. 383, A.F. & A.M., Belleville.

Surviving him are his widow: two daughters, Barbara and Joan, and one son, Robert, all at home; one sister, Mrs. Hankan, Detroit, Mich, and one brother in Australia.

The funeral will take place in Napanee under Masonic auspices on Saturday, July 10th., at 1.30 o'clock Standard Time.

POLICE BLOTTER

With three automobiles involved in a rear end motor accident on East Dundas St. resulted in damage to two of the vehicles yesterday afternoon although no personal injuries were sustained.

Mr. Moore, Belleville, was driving east on Dundas St. and stopped at the McDonald Ave. intersection before attempting a lefthand turn into McDonald Ave. Following behind him was an automobile driven by Miss Isobel Hamilton, 66 Spadina Road, Toronto, which also stopped behind Mr. Moore's car. R. W. Hunt, Brantford, who was driving a third motor car following in the line of traffic, failed to observe the two former vehicles coming to a halt and crashed into the rear of Miss Hamilton's car forcing it against the lead vehicle.

The trunk, rear fenders and body of Miss Hamilton's motor car were damaged to the extent of above $100.00 while the radiator, front fenders and headlights on Mr. Hunt's car were damaged to the amount of $75.00 damage, it was estimated by Traffic Officer Mills, who investigated. No charges were laid necessary.

No arrests have been necessary in Belleville this week and even the cell block at the police station was deserted through the absence of transients, seeking a night's lodging last night. Not a single knight of the road made application for sleeping quarters last night.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER
THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, 168 Front Street, Belleville.
W. E. MORTON, PUBLISHER

FIRE HAZZARD

For the second quarter this year the record of fires showed an increase of four hundred in number with losses up $393,692, with an insurance loss increase of $280,782 and an increase in loss not covered by insurance of $162,910.

For the six months of this year the fires in Ontario were 89 fewer, though the loss was $100,063 greater, the insured loss being down $247,782 and the uninsured loss showing an increase of $347,789.

For the six months dwellings were the greatest loss 5,907 fires for a total loss of $1,165,718 a slight decrease from the previous year's first half. 551 stores burned, creating a loss of $1,008,479. 198 factories caused a loss of $549,889.

One large factor in the increased fire loss for the first half of 1937 is the fact that there has been a heavy increase in the number of large fires, there having been nine fires this year with individual losses of over $50,000 as against six for the same period last year. In the second quarter there were four such large fires as against one in the same quarter last year, the increased loss from these four fires alone being almost as much as the increase in the total fire loss in this last quarter.

After consultation with the Canadian Underwriters' Association, the Associated Factory Mutual Fire Insurance Companies and a number of Non-board Fire Insurance Companies, the Fire Marshal's Office proposes to institute a course of instruction for watchmen. The course will be designed to acquaint them with the principles of Fire Prevention and Fire Control and to instruct them in the proper exercise of their duties. This innovation will place the watchman's position on the plane that its importance merits.

Certificates will be issued to those who complete the course successfully. As the necessary qualifications will naturally vary under different circumstances, the certificates will be graded into classes along lines similar to the following:

First Class— Including instruction on automatic sprinklers and fire pumps and requiring a medical certificate of physical fitness.

Second Class—Not including automatic sprinklers and fire pumps but requiring a medical certificate.

Third Class—Including automatic sprinklers and fire pumps but not requiring a medical certificate.

Fourth Class—Not including automatic sprinklers and fire pumps and not requiring a medical certificate.

The watchman in an institution, industrial plant, warehouse or other premises usually carries on his shoulders a greater responsibility for the safety of the property than does any other employee. A single lapse of duty, whether from carelessness or insufficient knowledge or physical disability, may jeopardize the interests of both his employer and his fellow employees, through the starting of a fire or improper action by him when an emergency arises.

"ONE-EYED" CYCLOPS

The "one-eyed" Cyclops of Homeric mythology was no more vicious than the "one-eyed" car on the street or highway. The cards are stacked against you when you drive at night with inadequate headlights. Also, you take unfair advantage of all other users of the highway.

Test lights frequently. Make sure the vibration of your car has not changed the tilt or focal adjustment of the lights; that it hasn't loosened one of the bulbs.

Turn your lights on at night and walk down the road 50 or 75 feet. Turn around and look at them, then ask yourself, frankly, how you would like to meet those lights on the highway. If they glare, if one is stronger than the other, or if they are too dim to light the road adequately, something is wrong.

Night driving always requires extra caution. But the first measures which should be taken are to be sure your lights are in good condition and to drive at moderate speeds. The owl and the pussy cat can see better at night, but you can't. So slow down and—TRY COURTESY" all the way, all the time.

A SUMMER THOUGHT

I saw stark poverty within a street
One summer day,
Where ragged children met at dawn
And tried to play;
While cats raced by and all the sky
Was filled with smoke,
Until the sun could hardly see
These little folk.

Their clothes were rough and coarse to match
The baking stone,
That every stubby toe had felt, which cut
Unto the bone;
And when the day grew hot enough, to kill
They tried to find,
With little ease unto their skins, shadow
From walls unkind.

For trees grew not as trees should do
Where children play,
And water only ran, when turned, from out
A wagon's spray;
I saw this in a city street
In summer time,
Yet some there are, could cure this ill
Who read this rhyme.

Belleville, April 7, 1937 —R. J. C.

EAST AND WEST PLAYGROUNDS ARE NOW OFFICIALLY OPEN and the children are correspondingly happy, but not more so than their parents. The playgrounds are supervised by competent instructors who teach the children how to play so as to get the most out of it, also to make useful things for home adornment and other uses. One west side father, speaking of the playgrounds, said that they were a blessing. His children were given a lunch box almost daily and sent off to the playgrounds where they spent a happy healthful time, and the parents knew that they were safe. Besides that they learned to make many odd and useful things which they brought home and surprised their parents with. This father thinks that the playground idea is so good that it should be extended so that other children who live at a distance from both playgrounds could have the benefit of it.

IN THIS COLUMN RECENTLY WE PUBLISHED A POEM BY THE INDIAN POETESS PAULINE JOHNSON. This talented descendant of Captain Joseph Brant, famous War Chief of the Six Nations, now rests on a noble mountain top overlooking the majestic Pacific ocean where her spirit wild and free can commune with the nature she loved so well, her monument a huge boulder, rugged embodiment of the things that never die. Pauline Johnson's turbulent spirit knew sorrows, deep and poignant, but she also knew joys more intimately than most, for her whole being responded to kindness and friendship and revelled whole-heartedly in the joys of living—even as much as her temperamental nature responded to the stings and arrows of outrageous fortune as they affected her life. Pauline Johnson's memory is respected as an outstanding Canadian, blessed as she was with a facile pen and ability to depict Canadian life in many phases, coupled with the fact that she was a picturesque link with such an important historical era in the making of Canada as a descendant of a famous Indian ally.

MOST CONVINCING

Did you ever hear the story of the out-of-work advertising man and the farmer?

He was a fairly personable chap, whose threadbare suit and boots were dusty, and he asked the farmer if there was anything he could do in return for a meal and a night's lodging.

"I once worked in an advertising agency," he added. "I wrote convincing advertisements which sold things."

"Now you mention it," said the farmer, "I was thinking of selling my farm. Maybe you could write an adv. for me to put in the local paper?"

Thereupon the advertising man called for pencil and paper and set forth his salesmanship powers.

"Dang me," murmured the hay-seed, as he read the glowing account, "is this my farm?"

"Yes," admitted the copy lad.

"Then why the heck should I sell it?" was the retort. So the poor advertising lad didn't eat or sleep that night—for being so clever.

Domestic Problems of Black Bass

From Monthly Bulletin, Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries.

The domestic arrangements of the small-mouth bass are, perhaps, the most interesting of the game fish species. The male bass is more or less a "henpecked" husband. To him is entrusted all the arrangements for preparing the love nest and taking care of the offspring until such time as they are able to forage for themselves. In late May or early June, depending on the temperature of the water, this vocation, yet kindly sire, leads a female bass to the nest he has provided for her. For several days prior to this he has had a busy time preparing for this climax to the spawning episode. He has chosen a suitable spot in shallow water where the bottom is of coarse gravel. With inordinate care he has laboriously removed all foreign matter, then hovered over the spot and, using his tail and fins like a carpet sweeper, has brushed the nobbles clear of all sediment, until the hollow gravel bowl which has resulted shines like a piece of polished marble. It is a painstaking process but Dolomieu has aristocratic tastes as befits his regal reputation of being a princely fighter, and good living is too good for the lady he leads to his personally designed and constructed home. The female, however, does not join him on any particular day, but waits until the temperature of the water is reasonably high (61° to 65°). When conditions are right the male selects a time that is finding a mate. The ceremony is a process of Nature which requires little formality, and as he may be observed returning to the nest with a female of equal girth to his own, he airs accentuated by the eggs she is about to deposit. As the eggs are intermittently dropped by the female they cling to the well-cleaned surface of the nest. During this process the male bass remains quiescent, but as the eggs are extruded by the female he fertilizes them with deposits of milt. Finally, the whole spawning operation being completed, the lady of his choice swims away and leaves the male a domestic heritage of prodigal size to care for. It looks like a hopeless task, but Dolomieu is endowed with a fighting spirit, and fidelity to his task is a by-word in aquatics. Faithfully he stands guard over the nest and keeps off all fish and other enemies that would destroy the eggs or young fish. His attitude is one of extreme militancy, he will strike with a flash at anything that approaches the nest, in fact his very appearance is one of belligerency. In addition to guarding the nest, he also performs the task of fanning the eggs with his fins, an operation which helps to keep the water around the eggs fresh and pure. After eight days or so the eggs are hatched, and the little fish, weighted down with the yolk sac which is attached to their body, still down into the gravel bowl in the nest, and there remain for about two weeks, replacing strength by absorbing the food from the sac with which Nature provided them, all this time the faithful sire, has guarded his offspring. No matter how large or how small the enemy that approached his bed he would charge it savagely, the very viciousness of his attack proving effective.

As the young fish gain strength they begin to move about, exploring their surroundings and returning to the nest at nightfall. About this time the male leaves the nest, and the young fry are left to their own resources.

Such is the story of the parental devotion of the male black bass for his motherless family. Unfortunately this record of paternal domesticity is marred by the inherent cannibalistic tendencies of the species. When the bass forsakes his nest he appears to forget all about the young, and is just as liable to gobble up the first time he meets them, to satisfy his voracious appetite. In this interest of conservation it is necessary to add this plea, Don't take the bass while he is guarding his nest. You not only take an unsportsmanlike advantage of him, but his demise probably means the destruction of hundreds of small fish too immature to take care of themselves.

HEARS OF CONFESSION

Torn with grief in the knowledge that her husband had confessed the brutal slaying of three little girls at Inglewood, Calif., Mrs. Isabel Dyer, 32-year-old wife of Albert Dyer, tearfully denies any knowledge of the crime as she sits in the district attorney's office at Los Angeles.

Leaving here Tuesday morning they will play at Cobourg in the same afternoon, Wednesday they will play at Port Hope, on Thursday at Lindsay, and on Friday at Peterboro. The following will compose the team: Jones, Farrell, Morrison, Kennean, Leary, Lyons, Bowbridge, Hutchison and McCullough. Manager James Jenkins will accompany the team.

The baseball team of the Intelligencer known as the "Tigers", which was celebrated two years ago for being buried under an overwhelming score every time they entered upon the diamond, (it is always best to tell the truth), will, however, in spite of past records, venture a contest with the "Independents" on the same ground this afternoon.

Tis is Oddfellows' Decoration Day and is being observed as a half holiday.

The Cancer Crusade

Fighting the Great Scourge With Knowledge—a Campaign to Wipe Out Ignorance, Fear and Neglect by

J. W. S. McCULLOUGH, M. D., D. P. H.

Secretary Cancer Committee
THE HEALTH LEAGUE OF CANADA

ARTICLE NO. I—Prevalence of Cancer

Cancer is rather prevalent all over the world. Knowledge of this fact causes uneasiness in the minds of many, and the fear that cancer is not nearly so prevalent as heart disease and few persons lose any sleep over the thought that they may die from heart disease.

Statistics are given to show how rapidly cancer is increasing. The figures published by statisticians, who revel in figures would leading very rapidly. In spite of this one doubts if there is any conclusion as to the exact amount of cancer each year.

Much of the apparent increase is due to the greater skill of doctors in finding cases of cancer to the better records of mortality in the last generation and to greater knowledge of disease among the people themselves. Moreover, people of the present generation are living longer than those of former generations. Fifteen years on the average have been added to the life of man since 1900. Since cancer is a disease affecting middle and old age, the longer people live the better opportunity there is for them to develop cancer. Ninety per cent. of all cancers occur after 35 years. The prevalence of cancer, while serious enough, need not unnecessarily alarm the public.

Even at this cancer is a serious malady. It stands second in the list of the "killing" diseases. In the last 30 years cancer has displaced tuberculosis from this position. The affection owns Canada between 10,000 and 11,000 lives each year.

Countries with a higher average age in its population appear to have more cancer. Judging by the death rate, than countries where this average is low. Great Britain and the continental countries or Europe, have, for this reason, more cancer than young countries like Canada, where the ages of the people are on the whole lower. Similarly, there is, for the same reason, more cancer in the older provinces than there is in the prairie provinces. The latter's population is, on the average, younger than that of the Maritimes, Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia. As our country gets older, and the population assumes a higher average age, the incidence of cancer is likely to increase.

BROWN TROUT

Belleville, Ont., July 6, 1937

Editor The Ontario Intelligencer:
Belleville.

Sir:—

As there seems to be some misunderstanding about introducing Brown Trout in this locality, it must be understood that there is no intention of displacing our own native trout, whenever they can live and thrive, for the "Pontiac" is the finest fresh water fish that swims. The Canadian fishermen would give a King's ransom if they could have been able to establish them in their waters, but all attempts so far have failed. Brown Trout, "Salmo fario" can only be to us a substitute. Although a game fish they have not the edible qualities, but will grow and thrive in our worn out trees around Belleville and afford excellent sport to fill the gap from May to July Bass Fishing. We have miles of water in easy reach of Belleville that, if stocked with Browns, would afford healthy sport for the rising generation.

Hoping that the small experiment already made with them will be given a spurring chance by city anglers, I am,

Yours sincerely,
—CHARLES E. BISHOP, Sr.

Rawdon and District

Rawdon.—The Linn family held a very successful picnic at Bird's Beach, Oak Lake, on Saturday, with over fifty in attendance. Mr. Spencer of Ryiestone, secretary-treasurer of Queens were present from Marmora and Rawdon Townships and all enjoyed a supper together.

Miss Edna Johnson, Frankford, is holidaying with her grandmother, Mrs. T. W. Shaw.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Reid, Petersborough, Mr. and Mrs Wilbur Reid, Campbellford, Mr. and Mrs. James Wiggins, Cherry Valley, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Warren Reid.

History of Mimic School

The first school in this section was a log one built on the fifth concession of Rawdon on the farm then owned by the Farrell family and owned now by Dr. A. Farrell. There are no records of this school but it is believed to have been built at the beginning of the nineteenth century.

Around 1850 the location was changed. Another log school was built on the farm of Mr. Henry Wright, now owned by Mr. H. C. Sine. They used benches which were easily shifted about the room. Many humorous stories are told of the days spent there. Among those who attended built on the Wright farm were Hezekiah Wright, William and Henry Hagerman, who have already passed the eighty mark. In 1872 it was decided that the old school was becoming inadequate and a new one should be built. The new site was chosen because it was thought to be a more central position for those attending. It was located on the farm of Mr. Dennis Maloney now occupied by Mr. Leo Farrell. It was made of brick. On each side were two medium-sized windows. The main entrance was at the north but at the south at either corner there was a door facing east and west respectively leading into the boys' and girls' cloak rooms. The desks had straight backs and seats. They were blackboards as the front and sides of the room. Those at the front were very small, those at the sides between the windows were just the height of the painted back. This school was built at a cost of one thousand and seven dollars by Chas. Dargyr.

Each family who had children attending this new school were asked to deliver one-half a cord of wood or pay one dollar. Any children coming to school who were non-residents of the section were asked to pay seventy cents per quarter.

In 1874 a picket fence was built and the yard cleaned and levelled by Mr. Patrick Ryan.

In 1880 several maple trees were planted along the north and west sides. Most of these still stand.

In 1901 a woodshed twelve feet by sixteen feet was erected at the south of the school. This is being used to this day.

In 1903 part of the picket fence was replaced by a wire fence. Later the wire was changed to board fence about four boards high. This was taken away for wire fence gut in its place.

Year 1906 the doors at the east and west corners of the school were closed. The cloak rooms were cut into and built at the north of the school. At this time also a platform about two inches high and six feet wide was placed at the front of the room.

In 1924 the school was painted inside and out. Each year maps and books for the use of pupils were added keeping both up to date.

In 1928 music was introduced in the school under the direction of Miss Ramsay. Her place was later filled by Mrs. Hamilton Hagerman of Madoc.

In 1929 the old brick school was remodelled. Mr. J. M. Clarke, Ballyrolly, carpenter, and Mr. W. Vanderwaker, Moira, plasterer, were hired to do the work. When they were finished there were seven windows at the east divided into two sections, a large one at the bottom, the top one smaller, opening to allow the air to enter near the ceiling. One window was left at the back on the west side and two on the north on either side of the door. Five large slate blackboards were placed on the west side, and the other ones were left at the front of the room. The outside was stuccoed the plaster being a pink colour and the pebbles being mostly black and white. In 1930 heavy screen was placed over the eight windows facing the playgrounds.

In 1935 a covered water cooler was purchased for the school. A cupboard was built and eighteen white granite cups provided by the school board. In 1936 a new cupboard was built the top to serve as library, the bottom to hold the fifth class equipment globe, measures, etc.

Some of the pupils who attended this school have graduated and become teachers, nurses and ministers.

The teachers who served in this school since 1872 are: 1872, G. D. Wiggins; 1873, Miss Mary E. Heagle (Mrs. Walter Sine); 1874, G. D. W. Wiggins; 1875, Miss A. Pettit; 1876, T. J. Fair; 1877, D. B. F. Sprung Dies Aged 67 At Winnipeg

Native of Mountain View Was Sec'y-Treasurer Winnipeg Tribune

HIS RARE GIFTS

Winnipeg, July 3—B. F. Sprung, secretary-treasurer of the Tribune Newspaper Co. Ltd., died at the Winnipeg General Hospital after a heart attack. He was stricken as he was taken ill with an acute heart attack and was removed to the hospital on his doctor's orders.

Most of his working days, more than 40 years, were spent in Winnipeg in the accounting and business of Winnipeg newspapers. Quietly known as "Ben," Sprung was esteemed in a wide circle of friends to whom he was endeared by his qualities of uniform kindness, genial courtesy and charm of manner.

Less than a week before Mr. Sprung died a prominent business man of the city associated with him in the founding of Greenwood church, made a member of The Tribune staff on the street to pay him a tribute. "I had my life to live over again," he said, "I would like to model it after Ben Sprung. I have known him for 35 years and I never heard him say an unkind word."

He lived his life and did his work quietly and unassumingly. His entire career was one of devotion to duty and high ideals. These qualities, with his efficiency and ability, marked him as an invaluable asset to the business organization of which he was a part.

He was gifted in ways which became known only to his close associates. He was quick to judge faults and virtues, but was never cynical and never harsh in his judgments. Tolerance and unfailing kindness were outstanding attributes of a sterling character.

Mr. Sprung was born on a farm May 14, 1871, at Mountain View, Prince Edward County, Ontario, the son of George Henry and Elizabeth Sprung. He attended the Mountain View public school and when a young man came to Winnipeg and took a commercial course in a Winnipeg business college.

In May, 1897, he joined the staff of the Nor-Wester, a Conservative paper edited and owned by Wm. Bell. In June, 1898, the name of the paper was changed to The Telegram. In the first days Mr. Sprung went to the new organization and remained with it until it discontinued publication. He then became associated with The Winnipeg Tribune and for 17 years was its secretary-treasurer of the company conducting its publication.

Shunned limelight

He never held public position and never sought it. His spheres of activity outside his regular business were in church, fraternal and social service circles.

He was a devoted member of the Methodist Church and one of the founders of Greenwood church, now Greenwood United. In his church work he took a special interest in the young people of his community. For more than 25 years he never missed a Sunday school service. Six years ago on the occasion of his silver wedding anniversary, more than 100 friends paid a surprise visit to his home, 450 Greenwood Place, and presented Mr. and Mrs. Sprung with a set of sterling silver dinner plate. The speaker was Mr. Charles A. B. Lawson, Dr. J. C. Pinock, E. Brown Hutchings and a number of old friends and neighbors.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Love is Exile" and "Hollywood Cowboy"

Midst pleasures and palaces—pleasures of Monte Carlo and other glamorous play spots of the Mediterranean, and in the palace from which King Nezib abdicates—is laid the romantic drama of "Love in Exile," starring Olive Brook and Helen Vinson, with Mary Carlisle also showing as hit No 1 at the Capitol today and Friday night.

Adapted from Gene Markey's sensational novel, "His Majesty O'Keefe," Miss Brook is presented in the role of King Regis, who finds his throne taken out from under him when he abuses his people's confidence and has plotted against and he plunges into a giddy whirl of extravagance—gambling at Monte Carlo, a yacht cruise, high speed boating at Le Touget, with the ex-queen, Xandra, and then the detestable, Emily, his companions.

When the dictator proves more difficult to manage than the king, Weston enlists Xandra in a plot to restore Regis to power. Xandra, suspicious of both of them, Regis finally convinces her that discovery is inevitable, so double-crossing him. How he and Xandra outwit dictatorial Weston makes the climax of the story to a final scene with Regis proving Xandra the true victory of the palace and the roars of the populace indicating their satisfaction that she should be queen.

"Hollywood Cowboy"

Lovers of westerns set against scenic backgrounds, with plenty of fast action, wholesome comedy and outdoor romance, will find unusual enjoyment in George O'Brien's newest feature, "Hollywood Cowboy," an ultra-modern western shown at the Capitol.

Presumably set in the picturesque Wyoming mountains, the story has all the elements to make it good family fare.

George O'Brien gives more than his usual share of skilful horsemanship while playing the role of a Hollywood cowboy star who returns to his parental stamping-ground in open spaces. While vacationing in the cattle country with a friend, a newly girl's smile inspires him to hide his identity and go to work for her uncle as a hard-riding cowboy.

He is further motivated by the fact that a gang of city thugs have invaded the range and are carrying on a ruthless reign of terror against the cattlemen in an attempt to stampede them down for alleged protection against cowboy strikers.

The girl, played by Cecilia Parker, and her aunt, Maude Eburne are selected as the victims of cattle rustlers, and after their herd of cattle is stampeded by a gangster's airplane, O'Brien launches a counter-campaign with the aid of a Hollywood stunt flier. His plans are not always successful, however, by the girl discovering certain evidence that leads her to believe him a desperado, which is merely the role he is playing in a new picture, and she dismisses him from her ranch. Undeterred, O'Brien and his buddy launch their attack, and after a thrilling aerial battle and invasion of the gangster's hideout, the outlaws are rounded to justice and O'Brien's romance is happily culminated.

AT THE BELLE

Exceptional Two Feature Program Today and Friday

While there was plenty of precedent at their own studios for a glamorous drama from front pages of newspapers, Warner Brothers have never before decided on immediately current a topic as "Black Legion" which will be presented on the Belle Theatre screen today and Friday matinee daily.

A few months ago, American newspaper readers were horrified as published accounts of so called "Black Legion" activities in Michigan. The story broke when a young man shot himself when he found a group of masked men and cruelly flogged, then shot, because of an allegation that he had beaten his wife.

In numerous instances, they took the law in their own hands but always hiding in cowardly fashion behind masks and hoods. They invariably outnumbered their victims and alway struck in the dark.

The dramatic details of this story from real life form the basis of the film, "Black Legion." The result is a powerful indictment of organizations of the kind that undermine democracy.

The cast is headed by Humphrey Bogart, who will be remembered as the young prosecuting attorney in the picture "Marked Woman" which was presented at the Belle recently, others with very important parts in "Black Legion" are Erin O'Brien Moore, playing the part of Humphrey Bogart's wife, Dick Forhan, as his close friend and many other notables. The picture is without a doubt one of the most spectacular melodramas that has been made in long while and a story that will be remembered by those who see it, for a long time to come.

"Romance in Paris"

The unusual concepts of launching a newcomer to American films with a starring role is followed in "Romance in Paris" the spirited comedy Romance, produced by Mervyn LeRoy for Warner Bros., which will be presented today and Friday in addition to "Black Legion" at the Belle Theatre.

The player in this case is Fernand Gravet, famous Continental screen star, who makes his American bow in "Romance in Paris."

Norman Krasna and Groucho Marx fashioned a swift-paced laugh comedy story for the new star. In it, he plays the role of a wealthy spendthrift who has his every whim and desire met with an American heiress and a business girl in this case is Joan Blondell.

Two experts in comedy—Edward Everett Horton and Mary Boland—are the ever-worried relatives who have designs on the young man's fortune and the namesake. Others in supporting are Alan Mowbray, of Alberta and Alice Brady, Kenny Baker, of radio fame, is the male singer in the numbers which show the "Can Can" dance in the gay Folies Bergere in Paris.

Inexperienced Help is Used In Harvesting

Farmers Hereabouts Prefer Experienced Hands But Cannot Secure Them — Youth Accordingly Gets Chance to Work

"Farmers of the district are now engaging inexperienced men, the not so much in the appeal of Government officials to hire this type as it is the necessity of harvesting one of the best crops seen in this district for years." Employment Office officials stated.

"Up until a recent date, farmers insisted that potential help was of the experienced kind, especially when signed for a sectional period. Even that was scarce, as the lure of more lucrative employment on the highway projects of the county, and a boom in the building and trades of the city proved a deterrent to the securing of efficient farm labor," the official continued.

With the farmers now willing in part to engage the youth and experience of the unemployed ranks of the city during the harvesting of hay and other early crops, the unemployment situation has been alleviated to some extent. Twenty-four mixed placements have been made of farms of the district during the past two weeks. There are still a number of inexperienced men available and these will likely be placed within a few days.

Pressure of harvesting operations has caused a number of farmers to take advantage of the help offered although a number insist that the men be able to milk. Wages paid to day-workers range between one dollar and one dollar and a half per day. Seasonal wages offered in the Spring were from $20 to $25 per month.

In some parts of the district the situation is becoming acute. One Foxboro farmer, likely in humorous vein, stated that he would employ farmerettes if they were available.

However in the opinion of Employment Service officials the situation would be greatly relieved if all farmers needing help would hire the inexperienced men now available.

YOUR HOME

HOME IMPROVEMENT PLAN — HIP

And How to Improve It

A Series of Articles on Suggested Home Improvements Advisability, Value, Cost, Etc.

Is your home safe?

Every home owner in Canada wants comfort, convenience and beauty in the home. Practically every home owner would be astonished and incredulous if informed that there is an essential of even greater importance which he or his neighbor IS NEGLECTING OR FORGETTING. They are simply taking it for granted.

That essential is SAFETY. Above everything, your home must be safe. One of the great virtues of the Home Improvement Plan is that it can help you to make it so.

The importance and real value of home repairs and improvement has been drawn to the attention of Canadians from almost every angle. The exceptional opportunity to make such repairs and improvements opened up by the Home Improvement Plan, has been stressed. Numerous reasons, and excellent reasons, for seizing this opportunity have been offered.

SAFETY

But until now no great emphasis has been laid on what is certainly one of the most, if not the most, urgent reason for home survey, and if necessary, home repair and improvement. This reason is summarized in the single word "Safety".

DO YOU KNOW?

Never before has the average citizen enjoyed a better opportunity to obtain improvements to his home which will reduce or eliminate fire hazards. Under the terms of the Home Improvement Plan, funds are available, on the home owner which can be utilized to make the home safe against one menace which year after year exacts its tremendous toll in human lives and material wealth from this Dominion. You may think that there is little or no possibility at your home catching fire. But do you know?

ELECTRIC HAZARDS

It is well known that a portion of losses from fire may be traced to faulty construction. Obvious faults at design, inadequately protected electric wiring and kindred mistakes contribute their share to this ghastly annual bonfire, but there is another factor which should be emphasized. It is the human element. People frequently ask their electric wiring to carry a higher load or current than it should. If the cord connecting the lamp or radio with the outlet is not long enough, you extend it. They may or may not do it properly. If not, it, as well as the overloaded wiring, is a fire hazard.

GAS HAZARDS

Again, to illustrate, in some kitchens where coal and wood are burned the stove-pipe leads to a fire hazard chimney, percentage balanced uncertainly on a wooden bracket. Or if the fuel for cooking is gas, the pipe joints, and burners in the stove may not have been checked for years. Chimneys may have never been cleaned or cleaned so rarely that they are a source or danger. Your home may be beautiful and comfortable, but is it safe? And, if not, shouldn't it be made so?

INSPECTION A NECESSITY

Where does the Home Improvement Plan come into this picture? Well, in the first place, and on the proven principle that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure", why not have a competent electrical contractor go over your wiring and general installation? Tell him all about the apparatus you use — stove, heaters, lights, iron, toaster, etc. This will enable him to estimate the load you are carrying. If he suggests changes — the Home Improvement Plan stands ready to assist you in making them.

If you burn gas or coal, a similar inspection followed by necessary repairs and improvements, is in order. Your entire heating plant, including the chimney, should be checked over, and Summer is a good time to do it. Faulty chimneys have caused a lot of fires. And remember, if your contractor tells you repairs or improvements should be made, it is no solution to shut your eyes and trust to luck. The real solution, in many cases, is the Home Improvement Plan.

FIREPROOF WITH INSULATION

Insulation is a real help. Homes can be fire-proofed, or partially so at least, by the use of fire-proof insulating materials and shingles. If you look into the matter you will find that many, very many fires start in attics, or that unfinished wooden loft at the top of the house which no one visits, unless necessity drives them to it. They start, no one knows why often, but a fire in a dry attic means trouble, unless the attic is fire-proofed.

Fire sometimes starts in oily rags, or among piles of papers. A fire-proof storage closet for oil mops and such things is safety equipment. Installation of fire-resisting materials around or over the furnace eliminates another possible source of danger.

CHECK FOR FIRE HAZARDS TODAY

Check your home for fire hazards. Do it today. No truer maxim was ever written than "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." And remember, if you find work which must be done, do it. The Home Improvement Plan can help you.

CORBIN HURLERS POUNDED HARD

Bell-Sargents Trounce Corbins Second Time, Score 11-9

With an eighth inning batting rally, that saw the Belleville-Sargents pound the offerings of three Corbin hurlers pathetic, in fact, for secondly trounced the Corbins 11 to 9 at the time of 11 to 2 in a regular Senior Softball League game at Coleman Field last evening. It was the first time in three starts the Bell-Sargents had triumphed over their "rock-eating" rivals and also marked the second defeat of the season for the league leading Corbins in nine starts.

Manager Shoebert elected Con Harris to ascend the mound for the Corbins with the Bell-Sargent pounding on his offerings for four runs in the initial frame. The Corbins pecked away until midgame saw the contesting clubs tied with Johnnie Bawden adequately relieving Harris, but the Corbin's ace, in his first start in ten days engaged a strained back, developed a wild streak and was subsequently replaced by "Tarzan" Rigby who finished the contest as the Bell-Sargents batted in the runs in the eighth to come from behind and save the game well up in the proverbial hole. The win fortifies the "lockmakers" in the third rung of the league standing.

The Corbins cut-bit the Bell-Sargents 14 to 12 but Eddie Schreiber, on the mound for the winners, was given fine support in the clutches and pitched expert assistance when the chips were down to leave seven Corbin runners stranded on the runways. Schreiber hurled steady ball and well deserved the victory he won. McMartin, Fred McGuire, Cole and Lupenetta cuffed the deliveries of the three Corbin hurlers for two hits each, while Benn, Reid, St. Louis and Harris collected a brace of hits apiece for the losing nine. The fielding sensation of the game was supplied by McMartin of the Belleville-Sargents as he made a spectacular running catch in the ninth inning with the tying runs on the base paths.

The game was bitterly contested with numerous verbal arguments ensuing as the Bell-Sargents pulled ahead to win the latter stages.

The line-up:—Bell-Sargents: Lupenetta 3b; McMartin cf; Sarrage 2b; Kizer rf; McGuire ss; Cole 1b; Robertson c; Clary lf; Seger lf and Schreider p. Corbins —Benn 3b; Reid ss and H. Bawden 3b; Rigby lf; Reid 1b; St. Louis cf; Cook ,ss; H. Bawden p and rf; Tyrtle c and Hardy p and rf.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)

Washington, July 8—(AP)—Bucky Harris had the right dope . . . He said after the All-Star game:

"Well, six pitchers were in town again today" . . . That's right.

. . . All Detroit Billie did was drive six seven of the American League's pitchers . . . Herr Jack Gehrig personally accounted for four . . . The Yanks contributed the best hitting, best base running, best fielding, the best throwing and the best pitching . . . one sad day for me that the National League will turn next year's all star team into a set-back . . . No line-up they might have chosen would have been more soundly pounded as Bill Terry's one-man pick, yesterday.

J. Edgar Hoover, the No. 1 G-man, was present . . . Jimmy Dean prepared to pitch to Gehrig in the third, Hoover turned to the man next door and said: "I'll back the big fellow Dean will pitch to. . . I'd like to see some real stuff over the fence". Gehrig did just that on Dean's next pitch. . . Dean had a count of three and two on Gehrig when Lou hit the longest homer he's ever clouted in Washington . . . The only time the National Leaguers were ahead was when Dick Bartell of the Giants captured the first ball tossed out by F.D.R. . . . The Rudsell out from yesterday didn't look to be the left-hander who fanned Bulb, Gehrig, Foxx, Simmons and Cronin in order in the second all-star game.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

With a surprisingly stiff off-land breeze blowing, only two craft faced the starter's gun for yesterday afternoon's putt sailing races off Victoria Park. The fact the contesting craft negotiated the course for a new season's sailing record alone proves the splendid prevailing conditions. The result of the racing was a victory for Duke Smith's Joka over Maurice Callaghan's After You 3rd. The race saw some splendid sailing for the spectators, that lined the shores in hopes of seeing a race, but patronizingly to put it mildly, the latter stages.

The start was a mighty confused affair for two hulls each, while Benn, Reid, St. Louis and Harris collected a brace of hits apiece for the losing nine. The fielding sensation of the game was supplied by McMartin of the Belleville-Sargents as he made a spectacular running catch in the ninth inning with the tying runs on the base paths.

The game was bitterly contested with numerous verbal arguments ensuing as the Bell-Sargents pulled ahead to win the latter stages.

The line-up:—Bell-Sargents: Lupenetta 3b; McMartin cf; Sarrage 2b; Kizer rf; McGuire ss; Cole 1b; Robertson c; Clary lf; Seger lf and Schreider p. Corbins —Benn 3b; Reid ss and H. Bawden 3b; Rigby lf; Reid 1b; St. Louis cf; Cook ,ss; H. Bawden p and rf; Tyrtle c and Hardy p and rf.

E. P. Bernstein Gives Address To Kiwanians

First of Series of Talks on Local Industry is Given

"Infant Feeding," a subject not too well known, but of paramount interest and welfare to any community, was ably presented by Edward P. Bernstein, manager of the local branch of the Mead Johnson Company, past president of Belleville Rotary, when he addressed the officers and members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon Tuesday at the New Queens Hotel.

In an effort to acquaint the local Kiwanis members with the various industries of the community the club directors are inviting the heads of local industries to address the Kiwanians, in lieu of the members personally visiting the many industrial plants during working hours. Mr. Bernstein delivering the inaugural address in this series.

Speaking of the Mead-Johnson Company, Mr. Bernstein stated that the company was founded by Edward Mead Johnson, one time of the firm of Johnson and Johnson, well known first aid manufacturers, some forty years ago at New Brunswick, N.J., later to open its head office in Bloomfield, Ind., following a fire at the parent plant in New Jersey.

Four Additions Built

The Belleville plant was opened about thirteen years ago, since which time four additions have been made to the company's premises. "We employ forty hands in a modern up-to-date plant today," added the speaker.

In reference to the ethical policy of his company, one of the largest manufacturers of baby foods on the continent, Mr. Bernstein said: "We do not advertise our product to the general public, we only introduce it to the medical profession through the pharmacist. We do not employ salesmen but have detail men to call on the medical profession and if our product is not prescribed, it is not sold. Our foundation was of the belief there is no standard baby. Each is an individual with individual requirements and you can't feed a baby through printed directions on a bottle or can. There is only one person to prescribe for a growing baby and that is the doctor who is the cheapest form of health insurance in the line."

He related how the company maintained a corps of doctors of pediatrics for infant feeding, which is primary with their company.

"Our laboratories at Evansville spend from five to ten years on the research of baby food products before that product is ever introduced for clinic experiments. There have been rapid advancements during the past few decades in the matter of infant feeding— in child welfare, baby clinics, milk clinics, so that even the poorest of today are afforded adequate care for their children's health that used to be a gamble whether or not a child would live to first year, but by scientific research in infant feeding the decrease in infant mortality has been diminished to a low level in Canada today," concluded Mr. Bernstein in his enlightening and educational talk.

The speaker was introduced by Kiwanian F. O. Hardy and thanked by Kiwanian Ernie Finkle and President Hollie Logan, who presided. For perfect attendance during the past semester prizes were awarded to Kiwanian Cliff Naragon and Kiwanian Jack McVeigh, the former not having missed a club meeting since 1934.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE CLOSE

Toronto, July 8.—(CP)—After four days of advances the mining shares became sluggish today and accumulated minor losses on the Toronto market. Industrials displayed general firmness and the Western Oils were off narrowly in slow action. Preston was the outstanding trader of the Gold group with a turnover of close to 50,000 shares but it failed to hold an early gain of 6 cents.

Issues up a point or more included Steel of Canada, the English Electric issues, Burlington Steel, Canadian Car Pfd., Dominion Tar United Fuel Pfd., Bell Telephone and Winnipeg Electric Pfd.

Paper stocks displayed strength, notably Ont. Adbiti and the Great Lakes issues. Other gainers in the miscellaneous industrials group included Balhurst, Power A, Canadian Marconi, Steel Hall Ware, Hamilton Theatres, Imperial Tobacco and Toronto Elevators Pfd.

Senior Metals were firm to strong with Nickel and Noranda up 3-4 to 1 in Pend Oreille. Sherritt, Wells-Amulet, Jack Waite and Aldermac eased down a few cents each and Falconbridge held a gain of about 50 cents.

WALL ST.

New York, July 8 (AP)—More profit selling closed the Stock Market picture today although many issues were able to absorb offerings without great difficulty.

Moderate losses and gains were about evenly divided near the close hour. The trading pace was exceptionally slow after a fast opening. Transfers were at the rate of about 1,000,000 shares.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

Has World Copper Output Caught Up With Consumption?

An interesting analysis of the world copper situation which seems to answer the question of whether production or copper has caught up with consumption was unearthed in an article in the New York Herald Tribune for July 6, 1937, written by that paper's correspondent, W. F. Boericke. The later says,

"Little doubt now exists that world production of copper has caught up with the present rate of consumption, and any immediate danger of a shortage in the world appears definitely removed. While world stocks of copper are still low, estimated at less than 300,000 tons, equivalent to scarcely two months supply at the apparent rate of consumption last year, the May statistics reveal an increase of 9,000 tons in United States stocks, with an output of refined copper for the month that exceeds any comparable figure for several years.

Considered alone these figures should cause little fear that copper production is getting out of hand. An increase in copper stocks of moderate proportions would not be unwelcome to producers as well as consumers as some insurance against speculative market raids and possible run-ups in price by frightened buyers to cover inventory requirements. Moreover, although domestic stocks have reversed the trend of recent months, it appears that foreign stocks are still diminishing, and this despite an absence of all restriction on output by foreign producers.

The unknown factor in the situation is to what extent copper metal has actually entered into consumption, and to what amount it has been transferred simply from the stock piles of the refining companies to the warehouses of the consumers as "invisible" stocks. That a huge tonnage has been requisitioned abroad for rearmament purposes admits of no question. Particularly is this true of certain European countries which are practically devoid of copper mines and must depend largely on imports of metal to accumulate reserves for possible war needs.

As generally happens, the market has made a complete turnabout and where only a few days ago, public interest was practically non-existent, keen brokerage offices are being filled up and many are looking for attractive equities in which they can make a "turn." Exactly why the sudden change, no one knows as mass psychology has never been adequately explained.

These bulletins in recent weeks have called attention to the $100 stock split-up picture and although some slackening has been noted in certain directions, this is attributed to seasonal factors. On the whole, the Dominion is making steady progress and one of the outstanding unfavorable features, namely the huge wheat surplus, has completely disappeared.

Sterling Pacific No. 5 Has Reached Pay Ore

Information from Imperial Oil sources is to the effect that Sterling Pacific No. 5 well is being drilled by Royallite struck the limestone on Tuesday at a depth of 4624 feet. Tests are now being made to see if the Madison sands have been reached as well. Leading oil authorities believe that the above mentioned well will be much similar in character to Sterling No. 4 which is producing more than 1800 barrels of crude daily now.

Sunday School Picnics

CHRIST CHURCH

The union picnic of Christ Church Sunday School and St. George's Mission was held this year at Cedarlea on Lake on Wednesday. The picnic which is always a success was enjoyed very much by the two hundred and fifty children and adults who found it convenient to attend. The bathing was enjoyed by all. The air was cool and refreshing. When it was possible to assemble the children after the dip, a splendid programme of games was successfully carried through. A novelty in relay, Mr. Reverd Smith arranged a treasure hunt. There was also a mystery man. Because so many adult members of the church attended, it was necessary to arrange games for the "grownups" as well. Everything was under the church, warden, Mr. Harold Bateman, who with his partner, Mrs. Theobold, almost won the pie plate race. The judges, however, were compelled to disqualify him.

Those responsible for the success of the picnic were, Misses Everett Smith, Dan Stewart, Harry Dowsett, Stan Scott, Horace Wright, Dave Batchelor and Mrs. Bowyer and many others. The rector, Rev. C. O. Wright was unfortunately away with the Choir Boys' Camp, Mrs. Wright and family attended and enjoyed the outing.

can be reached as to the exchange of land and population, a further grant will be made for the conversion, as far as may prove possible, of uncultivable land in the Arab State into productive land from which the cultivators and the state alike will profit.

Safeguards To Jews

"The advantages of the Jews are: "(1) Partition secures the establishment of the Jewish National Home and relieves it from the possibility of its being subjected in the future to Arab rule.

"(2) Partition enables the Jews in the fullest sense to call their National Home their own for it converts it into a Jewish State. Its citizens will be able to admit as many Jews into it as they themselves believe can be absorbed. They will attain the primary objective of Zionism—a Jewish nation, planted in Palestine, giving its Nationals the same status in the world as other nations give their. They will cease at last to live a 'minority life'."

50 Million Rubber Trees Needed to Produce Year's Supply For One Company

More than 50 million rubber trees are required to produce 75,000 to 80,000 long tons of rubber annually used annually by the B. F. Goodrich Company, according to a recent report made by the company's crude rubber division to S. B. Robertson, Goodrich president.

The average rubber-producing tree in the Far East is estimated to yield between three and four pounds of dry rubber yearly and this figure was used in arriving at the amazing total of trees necessary for Goodrich factories in operation for a 12 months' period.

The average weight of rubber in a pneumatic tire, adjusted in accordance with the proportionate number of tires sizes produced for passenger cars, buses, trucks, farm implements, tractors and other vehicles, is about 16 1-3 pounds, so that the total annual output of four or five tree is necessary for each tire on present day automotive requirements.

It is estimated that approximately 170,000 natives are engaged yearly in tapping and collecting latex from the 50 million trees.

Goodrich manufactures 32,000 rubber products, in 1000 distinct styles and lines, at factories in Kitchener, Ontario, Akron, Ohio, Los Angeles, Calif., Oaks, Pa., and Cadillac, Mich.

FIREFLIES FORM LUMINOUS BALL

Motorists using the Belleville-Madoc highway shortly after dark last evening observed the strange sight of a luminous ball, apparently made up of hundreds of tiny twinkling objects. Closer inspection by a few drivers of the several cars which stopped revealed a swarm of fireflies gathered in circular fashion over the middle of a tree near the Oak Lake sideroad. The insects are declared particularly numerous this year.

Two Out of Ten Casualties In Ontario Due to Heat

By The Canadian Press

Ontario today counted one of its heaviest mid-week fatality lists of the summer, 10 persons having died violently Wednesday. The Province sweltered again today under its third day of torrid temperatures, but of yesterday's deaths only two were attributed directly to the heat.

Two elderly men died from the effects of heat in London district, five drownings were reported since the previous report and one death by electrocution followed an automobile accident. A Northern Ontario woman was trapped on a railway trestle and killed.

Plug-Casters Terrify Boys

Plug Fishermen Frighten Worms Fishermen With Flying Tackle

Amateur plug-casting fishermen using the government dock these evenings as a practice ground, to their work have been spreading consternation among the ranks of the juvenile cans of worms fishermen, afraid to venture on the dock for fear of flying plugs. The final scare was received by one youth last evening when a cast went wide and, rifling by a side-swiping caster shredded a section of shirt in which it whipped into the boy's clothing, grazing one arm.

Holiday Bride

By ANN DEMAREST

With a sigh, Jeanne pressed her cheek against the frosty glass of the casement window and remained in dreams of the days when Bryan took her dancing and when nothing in the world counted but their love.

A shadow in the doorway and a slight noise jerked her back to reality. Some one stepped inside of the breakfast room door.

"It may surprise you, Cilly but it no longer matters to me what you do."

It was Lance's voice and yet changed, not his usual gay friendly tone. His voice sounded to Jeanne like that of a bitter, world-weary man.

Then why did you come to the party?" Cilly asked shrilly.

And for a long moment Lance did not answer. Jeanne could see the dim outline of their figures close to the doorway. She was in a panic of fear lest they turn on the lights.

"You would be awfully surprised if I told you," Lance said finally.

"So you can't stand the competition, Cilly said in a mocking tone.

Lance laughed harshly. "For a long while I've been tired of playing third-hand—sax with you, Cilly. And suddenly I realized that it didn't interest me much any more."

For a long moment the girl was silent, "I see," she said finally. "There is some one else."

There was a note in Cilly's voice that did not sound at all natural as she was usually. It was like a child's voice, young and frightened. Jeanne thought perhaps after all Cilly was in love with Lance. But he apparently did not notice it.

"Yes," he said, slowly. "There is some one else."

"How nice! Her tone was frigid now. "You don't mind if I have you, do you? I can't say I find this conversation very interesting."

"Go back to the party! By all means! Lance said in a low voice.

Cilly turned and left the breakfast room. Jeanne waited for Lance to leave but he did not follow her. Jeanne could see him standing in the doorway. It wasn't fair to hide there in the dark without warning him, she thought, so she called to him softly.

With a startled exclamation Lance came across the room to her. "Jeanne, you mean here all of this time?"

"Yes, and I'm sorry. There wasn't time to leave when you started talking. I feel awful that I had to sit here and have you think I was spying on you."

He took her hands and knelt down on the window seat beside her. "I'm glad you heard what I said, Jeanne. You can see now that it is all over with Cilly and me."

Jeanne drew her hands from his warm clasp. "I think you had better turn the lights on," she said nervously. "Some one might come in."

"And it wouldn't look well for us to be here in the dark," he said slowly.

Jeanne did not answer him. Instead she slipped off the window seat and switched on a lamp. In the light, Lance looked pale and tired, and the black of his evening clothes seemed to emphasize the weary lines around his eyes and mouth.

"I'm glad I found you here," he said, looking at her intently. "It's the only nice thing that has happened all evening."

"Aren't you enjoying the party?"

He shook his head. "Sit down and let me for a moment. Jeanie, please, and tell me why I am lucky enough to be seeing you here tonight."

"Mr. Bartlett asked me to stay and work but Miss Carteret came into the library so I had to leave," she explained, sitting down again.

"Norma is being a fool about him," Lance said in a bored tone. "She plays around with Doug Thorne but she won't be satisfied until she gets Gordon because he has so much money. They are a selfish pair, Jeanie, really. If they'd gotten in with them she might have been a different girl. Now she thinks of nothing but pleasure from morning till night."

"I think there is more to her than that," Jeanne protested loyally. "She told me she was thinking of taking up dress designing."

Lance laughed. "Oh! how long would that last? She'd dabble at it for awhile and then get bored." Jeanne sighed. He sounded likely, and yet difficult as she found Cilly to get along with, she still thought that there was a side to Cilly's nature that she didn't show to the world.

A door slammed down the hall and Jeanne bent forward to see whether some one was coming into the breakfast room. It was Gordon Bartlett, in his hat and topcoat, but he did not come in their direction. Instead he turned down the hall and went out of the apartment.

"Why, he's leaving!" Jeanne exclaimed.

"Norma probably drove him to it," Lance said.

"I ought to be getting back to work. I wonder if she'll tell on the library."

"He can't expect you to work in such an uproar. Stay here—for a few minutes at least. I have something for you, anyway. I bought it the other day."

"For me?"

"Yes. I saw it in a window on the avenue and it reminded me of you—of your eyes when you are happy."

Jeanne looked up at him, troubled. "You shouldn't have given me anything."

He smiled. "But I did and now I want to close your eyes and hold out your hands. Don't look until I tell you."

"Oh Lance, I can't do that. What if he lit?"

He was laughing now. "Don't be silly. Come on." He raised her hands. "Now close your eyes like a good girl."

Nervously Jeanne did as he asked her. Lance was fumbling with something in his hands and then she felt his fingers on her wrist.

"Don't look yet," he whispered with a chuckle. "I'm a little clumsy at this."

"You're mad, Lance," she whispered.

"No this is what goes on as soon as Cilly's back is turned," some one said harshly.

Jeanne's eyes flew open with a start. Norma Carteret was leaning in the doorway, surveying them with a sneer on her bright mouth. Jeanne looked hastily down at her hands. On her right wrist Lance had clasped a bracelet, a silk platinum chain studded with sapphires. An expensive bracelet, she knew. The blue stones sparkled in the lamp light.

"Oh, Lance," she breathed in dismay.

INSTALMENT 20

The three of them, Lance, Norma, and Jeanne faced one another for a minute or two without speaking. Mad to Jeanne, in her misery, the faces of the other two were nothing but a blur. It couldn't be real. This wasn't really happening to her. Sail as her eyes gradually cleared, and she saw Norma's face more clearly, she knew that it was real, and that Norma was prepared to make an ugly scene. She was thankful that Gordon Bartlett had left the apartment. At least she was spared his disapproval.

And then finally Lance spoke, and his voice was ominously low. "I'd back that back if I were you, Norma."

Jeanne flashed him a look of gratitude. Lance could always be counted on.

Norma laughed shrilly. "Take what back? It's true, isn't it? You were with Cilly a few minutes ago. I saw you here, and the minute she leaves you this girl follows you in here."

She remained standing in the doorway, her hands on her hips, her eyes fastened remorselessly on Jeanne.

Lance stepped forward. "That's not true, Norma; Jeanne didn't follow me in here."

And then over Norma's shoulder Cilly looked into the room and inquired in a cool voice, "May I ask, what is going on in here?"

"I found a very pretty little scene going on," Norma said, swinging around to face Cilly. "Your brother's secretary had her arms entwined and Lance was fastening that bracelet on her wrist."

Cilly's eyes flashed to Jeanne's arm and then to Lance.

"Couldn't you wait until you left the apartment to carry on with one of the servants?" she asked in a deeply scornful voice.

Jeanne shrank back as though Cilly had struck her.

"How can you say such a thing!" Lance crossed the room, his face set and pale.

With eyes narrowed, Cilly brushed past Norma and faced Lance.

"How can I say such a thing! As she stood there, clenched in the red chiffon handkerchief she was carrying. "How do you think I feel when you're in here carrying on for all of my guests to see?"

"That's an exaggeration," Lance said in a low voice, "and you know it. I've known Jeanne for a long while. We were good-friends when she worked for Gordon Bartlett, and we weren't carrying on."

Jeanne pressed her hands to her burning cheeks. It was like a horrible nightmare. Her eyes clung helplessly to Cilly, slim and beautiful in her silver frock, Cilly, who had everything and who could afford to be generous, was taking the little Jeanne had left, her self-respect and her position.

Cilly's lips were curled now as she retorted, "I don't know what you call it but I hardly think this is the place to make love to my brother's secretary."

Lance drew in a deep breath. "We weren't making love."

"What about the bracelet?"

"It was a gift. Do you have any objection to my giving it to her?"

"Oh," Cilly raised her eyebrows. "So this is the girl you were telling me about earlier this evening.

I didn't know my rival was under my own roof. I thought, of course, that it was some little floor girl you'd set out a working girl."

"Stop it, Cilly. If you were a man I'd knock you down."

Jeanne could tell by Lance's voice that he was very angry now. She took a step forward. "Hush, Lance. It doesn't matter, I'll go home now.

"It does matter!" he said determinedly. "I won't let any cat say such things about you."

"You can give jewelry to any one, for all I care," Cilly said, paying no attention to Jeanne. "But it seems to me that Miss MacDonald is very clever at getting jewelry from my friends . . . and relatives," she added significantly.

Jeanne clenched her hands to keep from crying out. What was Cilly implying? She opened her mouth to speak but before she could demand an explanation Lance grasped Cilly by the arm.

"What do you mean?" he shouted. Cilly struggled away from him.

"Take your hands off me. Do you think I want you to touch me after"

Lance's face was white. "I would not go on if I were you."

For a moment Jeanne thought that Cilly looked frightened but then she flung back her head and eyed Lance defiantly. "It may interest you to know she wheedled a priceless ring out of Aunt Cecile. I have no way of knowing what else she got from her. The ring was all I could get out of her."

Jeanne blanked at the girl, horrified at her words. "I give you the ring as soon as you came back from

Cilly raised her eyebrows and shrugged her shoulders haughtily. "She was perfectly willing to do it for the new clothes she got out of it."

DeVALERA MAY SEEK LARGER MAJORITY IN NEW ELECTION

EAMONN DeVALERA

WILLIAM COSGRAVE

Though the Irish Free State elections had half-heartedly endorsed President Eamonn DeValera's proposed new constitution which will completely bar Britain from connection with Ireland's internal affairs, late results indicated that the fiery Republican leader will have a small majority in the new Dail. The Premier William Cosgrave made a strong bid to dethrone DeValera and he may require Labor support to carry on his government. Observers believed Ireland will have another election within six months if DeValera, reportedly disappointed at the lack of support for his new constitution, cannot muster an adequate majority in the new House. The party leaders are shown, along with a map outlining the Irish Free State under the new constitution. Its name will be changed officially to Eire.

A HOT WEATHER REMEDY

ATHLETES, as well as workers in high temperature industries such as foundries, mines, boiler rooms, laundries, etc., are adopting what medical authorities the world over agree to be one of the most effective means of preventing heat prostration—the use of an occasional pinch of salt in their drinking water. The secret of the use of salt in hot weather lies in the fact that it replaces the vital salts which exudes from the body in perspiration, thereby causing weakness and exhaustion.

Numerous high temperature industries have installed salt tablet-dispensing machines in their plants and advise their workers to take regular doses. Tennis clubs, baseball grounds and other sporting organizations are following the lead given by industrial medical supervisors in protecting the health and comfort of their members.

PLANNING THEIR YEAR'S STAY AT THE NORTH POLE

Left to right are E. Fyorodov, E. Krenkel, P. Shirshov and I. Papanin, chief of the North Pole station. The men will gather weather and other data that shall be taken into consideration in the planning of a permanent Soviet base at the pole as a station for a projected aerial route between Moscow and the United States.

GUARD WORKERS IN RETURN TO STEEL MILLS

They are no exception here as pictured (TOP) getting their rations from a supply truck just before going on duty to protect workers marching through C.I.O. picket lines to reopen the plant. (BELOW) the march is shown. After weeks of idleness, non-strikers re-enter the independent steel companies' plant filling through ranks of armed guardsmen, city police and company police. There was no violence to mark the re-opening.

IN MEMORIAM

McCOY—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Alexander Milne McCoy, who passed away July 8, 1934.

The flowing stream of life rolls on
But still the vacant chair
Recalls the love, the voice, the smile
Of a Father who once sat there.

His life was one long sacrifice,
His heart was true and tender,
He toiled so hard for those he loved,
Then left us to remember.

—Sadly missed by his wife and family. 26-1t

The Market Place of Industry

Domestic looms and local workshops supplied the simple needs of each community when the industries of Canada began. Customers were all friends or neighbours. The ability and integrity of every craftsman were well-known and created a demand for the commodities he made; his success was measured by the goodwill he enjoyed.

Communities grew and prospered; new settlements were established and thrived; the demand for manufactured products rapidly increased. Distant markets became accessible as transportation facilities improved. The scope of industry widened; goods were shipped farther and farther from every plant, and it became necessary to gain goodwill towards products and their makers in remote towns and villages where they were unknown.

The newspapers have provided this vital service to Canadian industry at every stage of its development. No other medium could ensure the frequent, friendly contacts with consumers, needed to establish confidence, or afford effective territorial control of merchandising activity, when local or national emergencies arose.

Today the manufacturing industries of Canada serve a national market; their products are on sale from coast to coast. Production has been centralized, distribution systems organized, but the success of every enterprise still depends on customer goodwill.

Therefore, progressive companies continue to use the local daily newspapers as an integral part of merchandising. Experience has proved that the daily Newspapers of Canada, bought and read by more than two million families every day, provide the most economical and effective means whereby any industry can create public confidence in its policies and profitable demand for its products.

Many Men Put to Work On Home Improvements

Belleville Responds to Home Improvement Urge—Four Trades Benefit on One Job—Duplex Houses Popular—Modern Bathrooms in Demand—H. I. P. Makes Many Improvements on Farms—H. I. P. Urge Brings Out Private Funds Belleville Bankers Report Increasing Demand for H.I.P. Loans.

While the wide-sweeping possibilities of the Home Improvement Plan, as set down by the National Employment Commission of Canada, has met with a splendid response on the part of the general public of this province, the avenues of benefit to be derived from the plan have scarcely been touched. Such is the consensus of opinion of a number of business and tradesmen of Belleville.

Designed primarily to inaugurate a restoration of building activity and consequently a return to prosperity, the plan has met with the universal acclaim of a large number of residents of Belleville and farmers of the surrounding rural districts.

Locally, men in close touch with the H. I. P. activities, state the plan is enjoying universal appeal, and is opening up to people of limited means an avenue to obtain funds which they could not get from any other source over the length of time granted them under the plan.

Covering a wide scope of activity, the reaction of the local public has resulted in a stimulation of building and a pronounced increase in the actual workings of many of the trades.

FOUR BELLEVILLE TRADES BENEFITED

Evidence of this is seen in the instance of one resident who changed his dwelling into a duplex apartment. Four different trades, carpenter, plumber, painter and electrician benefited directly from this single loan while supply firms also noted an increase in business.

The general urge on the part of the borrowing public, however, is to enlarge their places of residence. Many have not only done this but have entirely remodelled their homes along a "double house" system whereby they not only derive sufficient revenue to pay their indebtedness but assure themselves of a definite income in the future.

MODERN BATHROOMS INSTALLED

Another noticeable feature of the people taking advantage of the plan, is the number who have at last fulfilled a long-felt desire to install modern bathrooms and sanitary plumbing.

FARM IMPROVEMENTS MADE POSSIBLE

Many rural homes and buildings have benefited greatly from the use of money secured under the plan. Farmers realizing the possibilities and the easy payment plan have taken advantage of the new system and have remodelled and beautified their homes, installed electricity, made much needed additions to house and buildings, erected new barns and machine-sheds and in some cases where the proper facilities have been available, installed bathrooms. Many a rural home and barn sadly in need of repair have received a new lease of life through the medium of this plan. New shingles and siding have given decrepit looking barns a new appearance. Coats of paint and repairs have caused many a family homestead to reinstate itself once again as the family pride.

PRIVATE FUNDS BROUGHT OUT

.....An indirect result of the plan, and one which perhaps was not foreseen by its originators, has been the expenditure of the private funds of individuals in the remodelling and beautifying of their homes and buildings which in all probability would not have occurred had not the advantages and feasibility of the plan been exemplified to the individual. Details of the plan and the easy financial arrangements opened up a new vista which had hitherto been closed either by neglect or procrastination. The resulting beneficial effects to all concerned with perhaps an earnest desire to help bring the long-delayed prosperity prompted people in a number of cases in Belleville and throughout the district to utilize private funds for the beautification of their homes. This in turn has added to the stimulation to business, building and the trades concerned.

SEE YOUR BANKER

On the other hand, of one official puts it, the plan has brought to home owners who have neglected their property through lack of immediate funds, or limited means, the opportunity to fulfill a long felt want in the securing of funds through their banker which otherwise they would be unable to obtain.

But as has been previously stated, the surface has not yet been scratched. There are plenty of homes in Belleville yet which could be converted from a dilapidated dwelling into a home of beauty with a little effort.

Help Prosperity.
See your banker.

Planes Cruising On Coral Reef Keep Up Quest

Promising Message Heard in Man's Voice by Montana Man

PUTNAM ENCOURAGED

Fringe of Phoenix Island Combed in Quest For Fliers

Honolulu, July 8 (AP)—The United States Navy's widespread search for Amelia Earhart, missing round-the-world-flier was launched today. Officials hope she is awaiting rescue on a coral reef or sandspit somewhere southeast of tiny Howland Island.

The battleship Colorado, cruising south and east of Howland, catapulted its three fighting planes last night to open the aerial phase of the hunt undertaken by boat when Miss Earhart failed to arrive at Howland last Friday on a 2,570 mile flight from New Guinea.

No Trace In First Search

The Colorado's aircraft returned to the battleship after two hours and 30 minutes to report no trace had been sighted of the missing plane or of Miss Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan.

The planes planned to resume their search today, cruising over Winslow Reef, 175 miles from Howland Island, on the fringe of the Phoenix Island group.

Message Encourages

What Coast Guard officials in San Francisco described as one of the most promising developments in the way of amateur radio messages reported last night from Conrad, Montana.

Ray Havens, Conrad Creamery worker, phoned the Great Falls Tribune that at 1.30 a.m., Wednesday, E.D.T. he heard a man's voice giving a position and saying "All's well."

A few minutes later, he said, he picked up a second message, which he gave as follows:

"Position 173 west longitude and south latitude."

Luke Wright of the Tribune editorial staff immediately tuned in his set of 3105 kilocycles, and reported he heard a voice, presumably a man's, but could not distinguish the words.

Wording Sounds Authentic

Coast Guard officials at San Francisco said the message appeared promising for two reasons. First, the longitude and latitude intersects a spot approximately where they believe the missing fliers are down. Second, the wording of the message sounded authentic.

Rear Admiral C. G. Murfin, 14th Naval District Commandant and director of the mass hunt, predicted success or failure of the widespread operation should be determined by mid-afternoon Monday.

In San Francisco, George Palmer Putnam, Miss Earhart's husband, expressed gratification over the shift in the search. He has clung consistently to the belief his wife and Noonan were in the Phoenix area.

Heat Relief Seen for Today

Match Factory at Pembroke Closed Down Because of Heat

(By Canadian Press)

Relief from the heat was forecast for Ontario late today. Yesterday's hot spots included Ottawa with an official reading of 92 and Sault Ste. Marie's unofficial 93. London and Toronto both turned in sizzling highs of 90, while Port Arthur reported 88 as its maximum. Temperatures have hovered in the upper 80's since Tuesday when the hot wave surged in from the West.

Heat was blamed for a false alarm answered by Guelph Fire Department. Speeding to St. Joseph's Hospital, firemen found high temperatures had touched off the automatic fire alarm system. At Pembroke a match factory closed down yesterday because of the heat, reported unofficially at 96.

His particular welcome is pictured in circle; receiver of the greeting is I. T. Spirin, chief navigator for the expedition. Confetti and leaflets provided the "ammunition" which covers Gorky street as the fliers drive in triumph. They left four of their numbers at the polar base for a year-long stay, on top of the world.

CHAMBERLAIN PRAISES PEACEFUL DISCUSSION

Imperial Conference Shows Nations Way To Peaceful Settlements

British Re-establishment of Strength Quickest Way to Solution

THAT SOLUTION PEACE

Chamberlain Praises Canadian Premier's Utterance

London, July 9 (CP) — Peaceful discussion "instead of the arbitrament of force", Prime Minister Chamberlain believes, is the wise way by settling international differences.

Addressing a meeting of 7,000 Conservatives in Aldwych Hall tonight the Prime Minister deplored that Great Britain had to spend so much on her rearmament plan — "money which I would very much rather see devoted to objects which are calculated to raise the level of human happiness."

"Storied Way Home".

"But sometimes you know, the longest way round is the shortest way home, and I myself am convinced that restablishment of our strength in arms like that of that other great peace-loving nation across the Atlantic will in time convince the world that the way of settling its differences by peaceful discussion instead of by arbitrament of force."

The Imperial Conference, he said, was an example of how nations could get together and approach problems in the right spirit. He paid tribute to Malcolm MacDonald, Dominions Secretary, for tact and understanding of the Dominions' viewpoint.

Mr. King's Speech.

Chamberlain referred to the remarkable speech of Canada's Prime Minister Mackenzie King at Paris "when he said that in case of any threat toward England he would bring Canada at once to her side."

Chamberlain stated diffusion evolving from the Spanish civil war would be immediately relieved "if we could agree upon withdrawal of volunteers and upon leaving Spain to settle her own future peacefully."

He said the trouble arising out of the struggle was "only a by-product of deeper causes of unrest in Europe".

GOLF TOURNEY WON BY COTTON

Leading British Pro Annexes Title, Second Time in 3 Years

Carnoustie, Scotland, July 9. — (AP)—Tall Henry Cotton, famed British professional, won the British Open Golf Championship today for the second time in three years, posting 290 for the 72-hole tournament after a heavy rainstorm threatened for a time to force replay of the final round.

Cotton, holder of the title in 1934 and acknowledged king of British shot-makers for several years, had the title clinched for several hours before a ruling by the tournament committee of the royal and ancient club of St. Andrews made it official.

After lengthy conference the officials decided that the fourth and final round would stand as played.

This decision gave Cotton, who scored a brilliant par 81 in his last round at the height of the storm the championship by a margin of two strokes over Reginald Whitcombe, youngest of the three famous British golfing brothers.

Leading the United States contingent by virtue of a spectacular finish, was Charley Lacey of Great Neck, N.Y. Lacey put together rounds of 76-72 — par rain-score throughout today for a 72-hole total of 293.

Fort William, July 9 (CP)—Hon. Peter Heenan, Ontario Minister of Lands and Forests, said in a speech here that the next three years will see the expenditure in Ontario of $44,000,000 on capital account in construction of new pulp and paper mills and extension of existing mills.

He announced the other mills and extensions as follows: Long Lac, new mill, $2,000,000; Nipigon, sulphite mill under construction, $2,000,000; Marathon Mill, on Pic River, new mill, $2,000,000; Thunder Bay, extension, $1,000,000; Thunder Bay Paper Extension, $3,000,000; Abitibi Fort William Mill, extension $1,000,000; Fort William, new mill, $3,000,000; Kenora, new mill, $3,000,000; Port Francis extension, $1,000,000; other Abitibi plants extensions, $6,000,000; Mickleodon, new mill, $4,000,000; Blind River, new mill, $4,000,000.

It was the intention of the Ontario government, Mr. Heenan said, to bring up Ontario production to 1,500,000 tons of paper a year.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Growing season and population! The length of the growing season, says Prof. Ellsworth Rumington, has a most pronounced effect on population. Regions where rain is abundant and the growing season long enough to produce more than one crop a year, under conditions favorable for a dense population. Men flocked to the Nile Egypt, where the land is watered and fertilized by rains that fall far away, can feed a very large population. This is all the more possible where the inhabitants are small of stature, and where meat is not required. The food requirements of an Iowan are much greater than those of a Javanese.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, July 9 (CP)—Pressure is relatively low over the Mackenzie Valley and eastern Manitoba and high over the Southern Straits, and high over the east coast of Hudson Bay, over the upper lake region and southeastern Ontario. Showers have occurred locally in the western provinces, the Great Lakes region and the lower lake region while it has been parts of Canada's warmest day so far, in southern districts of Alberta and Saskatchewan, generally fair with moderate temperature elsewhere.

Lake Superior—Moderate variable winds; partly cloudy tonight and Saturday with showers.

Saskatchewan—Partly cloudy and warm today and Saturday.

Alberta—Partly cloudy with much the same temperature today and Saturday; probably local thunder showers.

NEW SOCIAL ORDER SLOWLY EMERGES STATES MR. KING

Policies of Extreme Nationalism Have Outlived Day is Claim

URGES CAUTION

Prime Minister to Speak Over Radio on Conference

Montreal, July 9 (CP) — Home from two months of journeying in Europe, Prime Minister Mackenzie King headed for Ottawa and affairs of state today after assuring the Dominion it stood committed at the Imperial Conference to nothing "on which the Canadian parliament would wish to be informed in advance."

The prime minister arrived here early today from Quebec where he landed last night from the Empress of Britain with four members of his cabinet. He left in two hours for the capital.

On Premier Hepburn's announced quarrel with the Liberal Dominion party, the prime minister would say no more than that "on any matters which may have been the subject of controversy in his absence, he would wait for first-hand information before commenting, "should that be necessary."

In Fine Health.

The government chief, appearing in fine health, was accompanied home by Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe, Finance Minister Charles Dunning and Labor Minister Ian Mackenzie and Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Mines and Resources. They also headed for Ottawa.

Discussing European affairs, Mr. King said the nations he had visited did not desire war and believed it would end European civilization. Of extreme economic nationalism, he said it had "outlived" its day.

On the premier's arrival in Ottawa, cabinet will be summoned to meet next Wednesday. After that, announcement may be made of the personnel of the Royal Commission to investigate Dominion-Provincial relations.

Under present plans, the premier said, parliament would not meet this year but a recall is contemplated for the Imperial Conference.

Questions as to defence and other Dominion policies were turned aside by Mr. King with the statement he indicated the situation was the same as when they left.

NEW BATTLE BEGINS FOR POSSESSION OF FORMER CHINA CAPITAL

Peiping, July 9—(AP)—Fighting between Japanese and Chinese troops for possession of the western gateway to Peiping, ancient capital of China began anew today as an armored unit to withdraw its wounds from the battle zone failed.

Reinforcements of the Japanese launched an attack on 200 Chinese gendarmes en route to the besieged city of Nanyuan, Peiping suburb of Peiping, to take over the duties of the garrison from the 29th, Chinese army.

Ching Chih-Yuan's troops, Chinese said, were withdrawing according to the agreement reached here for cessation of hostilities in relations between Japan and China.

Japanese Troops Warned To Keep Out of Siberia

Soviet Gov't. Promises Open Warfare if Order Not Obeyed

USE EVERY MEANS

Moscow, July 9 (AP)—The Soviet government threatened Japan with open warfare today if Japanese troops do not keep out of Siberia.

Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Commissar of Foreign Affairs, warned the Japanese Ambassador, Mamoru Shigemitsu, that Russian troops along the Siberian-Manchukuoan border had firm orders "in no case to allow Japanese-Manchurian troops to cross Soviet frontiers".

"All possible means," the Foreign Commissar told the Japanese representative, would be used to drive out any Japanese or Manchukuoan troops that set foot on Russian territory.

The Russian warning was linked to a protest that Japan had violated the agreement to withdraw her armed forces from the disputed channel islands of the Amur River.

A clash between Soviet troops and Japanese - Manchoukuan patrol guards last week created a serious crisis in Far-Eastern affairs. It was settled only by mutual Agreement between Japan and Russia to recall troops from disputed islands in the Sennufu and Bolshoi Islands.

Third Ranking War Flier Gives Vivid Description of Aerial Combats

His is a charming manner, and his personality one that immediately attracts his listeners. One would not think to look at this fine-looking man in the prime of his life that once he swept through bullet-swept skies in the cockpit of a fighting plane, nor that lions innumerable he has been practically speaking terms with the Grim Reaper; laughed at him and dared him to do his worst. And one could not imagine, when he talks in his quiet soft-voice that he was once and still is for that matter, the third ranking ace of the American Flying Corps. He acknowledges Eddie Rickenbacker and Elliott Springs, famous Yankee fighting birds, first and second ranking aces as men of tenacious courage, brains and flying ability.

Seek to Dodge Heat By Sleeping on Lawns

Roads Along Bayside And Lakeside Crowded in Quest of Motorists For Relief From Torrid Temperatures

A still, oppressive, clammy heat, aftermath of a day of sultry stickiness and high humidity, again held the city in a thrall last night, causing its perspiring thousands to adopt new measures of relief from the unrelenting pall.

Two measures were adopted by the majority of residents. Those who stayed home, for some unknown reason, chose the comfort of the down stairs chesterfield for their scant hours of repose during the night, while many other hundreds depended upon the family automobile to convey them to what was hoped to be cooler spots.

Again the bay shore road and the bay bridge road held its long lines of cars, while occupants, with windows of the machines down, lolled at semi-ease, basking in the comparative cool western winds which sweep that section of town on the warmest days.

In City Parks.

Not overlooked, however, were the city parks. For the third successive night, Victoria Park was thronged until a late hour with pedestrians and with many prepared to spend the full night under the stars. They came with blankets and pillows, prepared to make the best of circumstances over which they had little control.

It was in the city flats, the upstairs apartments that gripping heat was felt the most, evident by the number who moved to fire escapes with their bedding, still slumbering fitfully on the hard surfaces, while as the milk man made his early rounds.

TAKE 2 HEAT WAVE

On Upon Highway

Sweltering under temperatures which averaged well above the seventies, practically no immediate relief in sight, city residents took to the highways and byways last night in an effort to get at least some degree of coolness.

Driving out but stuffy apartments and houses, downtown residents left for the cooler spots of the nearby parks and beaches in a steady exodus. The bay bridge with its cooling breezes sweeping across the cool western winds was a popular rendezvous for a large number of automobiles and pedestrians, and was crowded from early evening until the wee small hours of the morning. Highway leading to the many lakes and bays of the district were crowded with vehicular traffic all evening with many people taking blankets and bedding and sleeping under the inviting shade of the trees of the country side.

VITAMIN F SEEN IN PREVENTION OF COMMON COLD

Queen's University Doctors Describe Discovery in Medical Journal

STUDENT TESTS

64 Per Cent Improvement Seen After Use of Vitamin F

Montreal, July 9 (CP)—Relief for the many thousands suffering with common colds is indicated possible in tests made by Drs. Eldon M. Boyd and W. Ford Connell, of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., which they have reported to the Medical Association Journal.

The tests indicate that investigation shows a considerable part of the population suffer from colds as a result of a deficiency of the essential unsaturated fatty acids in the diet. These fatty acids they describe as "Vitamin F", a concentrated mixture of Linoleic and Linolenic Acids prepared from refined linseed oil.

Experiment on "Fatty Acids"

A series of experiments made on more than 100 medical students to determine the value of the "fatty acids" in prevention and treatment of common colds resulted in reduction of the average incidence of colds by 64 per cent and diminution of the average duration by 78 per cent.

A group of 41 students known to be susceptible to colds were observed without treatment for seven weeks. They had 100 medical visits for a total of 65 colds lasting 454 days. Figures amounted to an average of 1.54 colds a man with the average duration 11.1 days.

64 Per Cent Improvement.

After treatment for an additional seven-week period with daily doses of "Vitamin F" the average number of colds was reduced to 0.56 or an improvement of 64 per cent.

Reduction of the duration of each cold showed even better results. The average length fell to 2.5 days, a decrease of 78 per cent.

Similar tests were made with a group of 42 students who are not being susceptible to colds. Resulting data showed improvement but not to the same extent.

Drs. Boyd and Connell concluded from these results the few remaining colds were therefore, due to other factors than the deficiency of such fatty acids.

COMET MAY BE SEEN WITH UNAIDED EYE

Cambridge, Mass., July 9 (AP)—A great comet, which hasn't visited the earth since the days of Napoleon, 1,000—years, is heading back today and may be visible to the unaided eye late this month.

Plea Made to 4 Arab Kings Against Palestine Partition

'We Are Weak, But Have Same Hearts as You', Say's Arab Committee

POLICE ARE ACTIVE

Jerusalem, July 9 (AP)—The Arab Higher Committee appealed to four Arab kings today a plea "in the name of God and religion" to intervene against the Palestine Partition.

The ruffess from whom assistance was sought are Emir Ibn Saud of Arabia, the Emir Abdullah of Transjordan, and King Ghazi of Iraq.

The committee protested the best part of Palestine would go to the Jews and the holy places would go under British mandate.

Amber Abdulhadi, prominent member of the Arab Higher Committee, declared of the proposal to divide the Holy Land into sovereign Arab and Jewish states:

"I cannot imagine an Arab band could slgn anything like that."

Besides the two states, the Royal Commission proposed creation of a new mandate under which Great Britain would control the holy cities of Jerusalem, Bethlehem and Nazareth.

"We will not willingly yield Haifa, Safad and Tiberias for £2,000,000 or any such amount," declared Abdulhadi. "It is not a matter of economics but of honor. Would you sell honor for a mouth to Germany?

"We are weak and we have no guns or gas, but we have the same hearts as you."

Police, posted at strategic points in Jerusalem, were searching passersby in an attempt to nip any disturbance of the peace. Several shots were reported to have been fired in the town of Nablus shortly after the Royal Commission's recommendations were broadcast Wednesday night.

Young Archduke Plans Towards Momentous Day When He Shall Reign

Needs Only to Fill His Dates And Affix Seal

NEW HAPSBURG AGE

In Tree-Fringed Castle He is Known as 'Kaiser Otto'

(Editor's Note: This is a glimpse of serious-minded young Archduke Otto von Hapsburg pretender to the thrones of Austria and Hungary and a factor in the politics of middle Europe. It was obtained by Louis Matabold Associated Press correspondent on a visit to Otto's castle in exile).

BY LOUIS MATZBOLD

Steenokerzeel, Belgium, July 9 (AP)—Handsome Otto von Hapsburg is ready, even to the smallest detail of royal decrees and proclamations, to take over the government of Austria when "his day" comes.

Every action, every thought of the illustrious young Archduke, pretender to the Hapsburg thrones of Austria and Hungary, is directed confidently toward that day. He has been trained for most of his 24 years to expect it.

Some associates here in his Belgian castle say Otto needs only to fill in the dateline on the Hapsburg seal and the royal decrees will be ready to be slapped on the doors of Vienna's chancellery restoring the ancient Hapsburg monarchy.

Austrian legitimists believe loyal Viennese will then make ready for another Hapsburg age in the valley of the Blue Danube.

In the meantime, Otto must wait and bide busy. He does both well, surrounded by his miniature court in exile.

Inside Steenokerzeel's tree-fringed 30 acres, the Archduke is "Kaiser Otto", ruler over a court as exacting in its etiquette and as obedient in its allegiance as was the Viennese court in the old days.

Zita Much As Emperor As Ever.

Otto's mother, Zita, is as much an empress today as she was when her husband, Austria's ruled Austria-Hungary for a few eventful years before the crash rumbled in 1918. Zita is an extremely busy woman, mother of eight children and a respected adviser to monarchist leaders, but court life revolves around one figure, "the Kaiser".

Brothers and sisters stand at attention when Otto addresses them as his mother calls him "Your Majesty".

YET NO TRACE OF EARHART'S PLANE

Search Party Already Has Covered 136,000 Square Miles

Honolulu, July 9—(AP)—Aviators empty handed after two days of search for Amelia Earhart, charted courses across new sections of the equatorial Pacific today in efforts to pierce the week-long mystery of her fate.

By sea and air search for the missing aviatrix and her navigator, Frederick J. Noonan, has encompassed approximately 136,000 square miles, without even sighting some of the shoals and sand spots supposed to exist in the vast area.

The flyers vanished a week ago today in an attempt to fly the 2,- 750-miles from Lae, New Guinea to Howland Island, a mere dot of land in the sea.

Three planes from the United States battleship Colorado, steaming from the equator southward to the Phoenix Islands, soared over the area east and south of Howland Island, yesterday but sighted no trace of the pair.

The planes could not even find Winslow Reef, which old charts showed peeked just above the sea 178 miles southeast of Howland.

FIFTY-THREE DIE FROM HEAT WAVE

Death Toll Steadily Mounts as Country Looks in Vain For Relief

Chicago, July 9 — (AP) — The death toll from the season's longest heat wave mounted steadily today as the sunbaked northern tier of States looked in vain for relief.

At least 53 persons succumbed to the merciless temperatures that extended from the United States Atlantic coast to Eastern Washington.

There were hundreds of prostrations and death by drowning claimed scores of persons among the tens of thousands who sought relief at beaches.

The stifling heat, hitherto confined to the region east of the Rockies pushed toward the Pacific Coast.

Walla Walla, Wash., registered a 96 degree weather yesterday. Lamar, Col., and Atlantic, Iowa, with readings of two of the hottests spots east of the Rockies.

Asked to Drop Suit On Declaratory Relief

Los Angeles, July 9—(AP)—Max West, 46-year-old aeronautics shipwinger, would like to see song-and-dance man Ray Walsh drop his suit for "declaratory relief," now that she has recognized him as her husband of 20 years.

Moon-faced Max's attorneys said as much today, but Wallace's counsel objected.

"Mrs. West has not answered Wallace's contention they lived together as man and wife from the time of the marriage on April 11, 1911 until March 14, 1914," argued lawyer Arthur Blunt.

It was a question for Superior Judge Thomas Whitson to decide before nightfall and Blunt said if the court ruled the suit would continue he would take a deposition from Miss West.

HORSES WATERED AT SERVICE STATION

One station service men of this city have turned benefactors during the present heat wave and service to car or beast has evidently become a standing mobile it was indicated by the sight of a farmer horse enjoying a cool drink at a lower station this morning. The animal drank helpfully from the pail while the horse drank eagerly.

CYCLIST INJURED NEAR JAMES ST.

Richard Clements Sustains Broken Leg When Cycle Hits Car

Allegedly travelling at a fast rate of speed into the side of a moving automobile, Richard Clements, 17-year-old Sidney Township youth was hurled from his bicycle and crashed to the pavement on West Bridge Street, where he sustained a fractured right leg and other serious injuries shortly before 9.00 p.m. on Friday evening. Young Clements was carried to the nearby office of Dr. W. C. Morgan, where Dr. Austin Walters attended and later entered the injured lad to the Belleville General Hospital.

Accompanied by two other unnamed cyclists young Clements was proceeding eastward on West Bridge Street hill, eye witnesses informed police. At the same time Harry Scott, 51 South George St., was proceeding west on Bridge Street and had commenced to make a left-hand turn to proceed south on James Street, when young Clements short bicycle crashed broadside into Mr. Scott's car, the rider being hurled heavily to the pavement following the impact.

Motorcycle policeman Sam Irvine and Pc. C. Thomson investigated the accident and subsequently called an ambulance in which the injured lad was rushed to the hospital. Investigating police reported that no lights had been carried by the cyclist at the time of the accident. Eye witnesses substantiated this belief, they stated today.

Upon the arrival of young Clements at the hospital the fracture was successfully reduced.

Legion d'Honneur, and Croix de Guerre, the American Distinguished Flying Cross and Victory Medal with five clasps.

Scary Mark of Many Battles

Along his skull gleams the three white scars, grim souvenirs of the flaming crash of a German Fokker pilot. Across his jugular vein another livid memento of blazing lead from the muzzle of machine guns stands out. His lower lip, if one looks closely is not what it used to be.

Today he is visiting friends, at 63 Alexander Street, Mr. and Mrs. James Smith, "wonderful people, the soul of hospitality" he quotes Captain Swaab.

His connection with aviation has not been confined alone to the fame-swept skies of France and Italy, the hum and drone of fighting planes and the thrill of the "dogfight" over the plenth and sod of Flanders Field. He is aviation-minded. Today his ability, enthusiasm and expert knowledge of things aeronautical has carried him to the flight of aviation and he holds the position of Consulting Aeronautical Engineer for a prominent New York aviation firm. In April, 1917 when the United States declared war on Germany, young Swaab was among the first to offer his services to his country. Mechanically minded and interested in internal affairs as it was during the day of the war, he immediately applied for service in the American Flying Corps. His knowledge of things internal combustion and carbolated, plus a burning desire to get to the 'Front' stood him in good stead and it was only a short time before he was sent to an aviation training camp in Dayton, Ohio. Undergoing his preliminary training there, he soon joined the "Goughnuts" contingent crossing the seas.

The Great Day Arrives

Here things moved rapidly. He was sent to Issoudun, the famous French Aviation training camp, where he soon blossomed into a full-fledged fighting bird. But he hitched to get into action. Day after day he combed the skies behind the lines in his machine. Then came the great day. He was assigned to the Twenty-Second American Pursuit Squadron whose job was to clear the skies over the Saint Mihiel sector of marauding Hun planes. His natural ability at the controls of a Spad stood him in good stead. Over the Argonne, one of the hottest sector he flew, death screaming from his blazing guns as enemy planes were sent crashing earthwards. Ten official machines he has to his credit, and besides at least six unofficially. Later he and his squadron were sent to Furbara, Italy, where they assisted the Italians in keeping the freedom of the air.

Most Thrilling Experiences

One of his most exciting experiences occurred when he was returning to the home harbour after having been separated from his fellow flyers in a fight. Nearing the coast after over the enemy lines, he was cruising along with a keen eye on the horizon for enemy planes. Without warning, eleven Fokkers, thirty guns streaming lead, poured out of the clouds on his "tail." Turning he gave them battle, and saw four of the black-crossed machines in his sights go crashing to the ground. But the odds were too great. Bullets flamed all around him. A searing pain flashed across the top of his head. Another hit at his throat. Semi-conscious, he automatically steered his machine to a landing. But the enemy thinking he was done veered off. Swaab crashed to the ground in friendly territory, and was carried "out" when he landed. Awakening in hospital he discovered the force of his landing had caused him to bite his lower lip nearly off.

"It wasn't much," he laughed, "in a short time I was back at the controls."

Known Many Great Fliers

Did you consider yourself lucky to come out alive?"

"No, the war ended at the right time. We in the flying services figured that we all would get it at some time, and I was about due. Another few months and I would have probably joined the rest of the fine fellows who went down fighting in a blaze of glory."

Captain Swaab is a friend of some of the greats of aviation. Among the friends he counts is late Colonel Barker, Colonel Bishop and many other Canadian aces. Amelia Earhart is well known to him as are many other famous American aviation personalities.

He refused to comment on the Earhart episode. "I hope they find Amelia," was the only thing he would say.

Polar Flights

Asked for his opinion regarding the recent flight of Russian airmen from Moscow over the North Pole to Canada, Captain Swaab stated that, "It makes one believe that we in Canada, and the U.S.A. may not be as safe as we thought. That flight is just a forerunner of what may come. It has opened a point of vulnerability which we thought before never existed. The closer the peoples of Canada and the United States get, the safer and happier we will be. There is not a gun on the American-Canadian border and there never will be. But there is a thin accord Alaska that may have to be watched if any European eventualities occur."

"Did you ever attempt any trans-Atlantic flights?" this reporter asked him.

Ocean Flights to Youngsters

"No," he smiled. "we in aviation have those stunts in the young fellows of eighteen and twenty years. We have found out that one does not have to be a hero. Today if one waits, it will come to one. Then all these flights will accomplish nothing. Lindbergh established something in his memorable flight across the Atlantic, and provided an incentive for the money interests to invest in what seems a brilliant future for flying. But the only transatlantic flights were merely repetitions, and established practically nothing."

Saw Plane Power Instrument

"This might be of interest to you," Captain Swaab said, his eyes clouding with a serious light, as he leaned forward in his chair. "One of my personal friends is Miss Katherine Wright, sister of the famous aviation pioneers, Orville and Wilbur Wright. She tells me that the unhappiest man in the world today is her brother Orville." And if you could but see him you would well believe what I am going to say. He is a perfectly charming gentleman with a wonderful personality, and one would scarcely connect him with fighting planes and such things.

"When he and his brother, one night say, practically invented the airplane they had not the remotest idea that it would be used as one of the most deadly weapons in warfare. In fact their idea was that it would be used as a safeguard against war rather than as a weapon. They thought that it would be used for scientific artillery and general reconnaissance purposes, and when the nations of the world turned the plane into one of the best deadly arms, it practically broke Orville's heart. He shows the effect of years of strain."

Captain Swaab Has Visited Canada before and thinks it is a wonderful country. "The people here are a grand hospitable lot and always give me a good time. After all," he smiled, "there isn't much a great difference between you and us. We are more alike than any two nations in the world and that is as it should be. As I said before the closer the American and Canadian peoples get together the safer and happier we both will be."

ICE MAN'S JOB HOTTEST OF ALL

Overwhelming Rush For Ice Is Indicated Everywhere

The city's hottest job during the present trying period is not held by the policeman on beat at the usually flooded "four corners", nor yet the fireman in the boiler room of some busy factory, but by the ice man. The daily output of whose perspiring shoulders have become unbearable in this line to keep up with an overwhelming flood of daily orders for ice by private consumers, for the past few days thousands of pounds of ice over and above the regular day's supply have been sold by local ice concerns to meet the demand, which is being added to a heat stricken populace, it was reported by the manager of one of the local concerns.

"However, the supply is plentiful and there is little fear of running out. We overstocking our barns last winter, just in case," he stated.

SPENCER REUNION

The fifth annual Spencer gathering was held this year at Sesley Park, Trenton, on July 3rd. About 10.30 a.m. the Spencer kin began to congregate, eagerly awaiting the commencement of the day's activities. By 12.30 all were present and enjoying a grand banquet of unusual abundance, consisting of chicken, potatoes, every description, fresh fruit in season and which in this case was strawberries.

It was very cleverly arranged so that the young and old were mingled with each other and in this way all enabled many to become better acquainted with their relatives.

After singing Grace every one sat down to the beautifully decorated table with an abundance of all things good to eat; doing justice to the eats but injustice to them. Many intervals during dinner sing songs were enjoyed.

At the close of the business discussion by the President Frank Spencer, a few musical selections on the Gramaphone were very much appreciated.

During the intercourse of the afternoon those wishing to participate in sports were enjoyed running, baseball, quoits, rowing, while the youngsters fully appreciated the Gramaphone effects in the swimming-pound.

After a round of good-byes among the seventy-five present, everyone departed for their respective homes, the regret we have for next year is that Rev. Spencer will not be at the gathering as he was to leave shortly for his new charge at Cobden, Ontario.

They were present at the Reunion from Campbellford, Harvieton, Canada Station, Marmora, Frankford, Bath, Brighton and Belleville.

FLIES HARASS LOCAL BOWLERS

Bugs And Flies Bred by Warm Weather Invade Greens

Bowlers using the greens at the Agricultural Grounds last evening fought an unwelcome invading army with indifferent success, being carried on their games with considerable difficulty. Assault by the continued heat, and attracted by the lights above the grounds, thousands of bugs and flies of every variety swarmed and buzzed about the heads of the members, crawled into open front collars, left sticky trails over perspiring faces, and in general made life miserable during the period of play. In many cases perfect alibis for low scores were afforded by the bugs.

FIRST ENTRIES IN CHEESE SHOW

Indications Are For Complete Success of Exhibition

First entries from the Province of Quebec for the Dominion-wide cheese exhibition which will be held in this city next December in connection with the annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association were received by the local office of J. L. Irwin, Dominion District Dairy Director, today.

Anticipating complete success for the coming venture, the first of its kind ever arranged in Canada, it was announced by the executive of the Association that plans for the event have been about completed. Provincial trophies throughout the Dominion will all send their entries to the city, which are expected to number many hundreds. Perhaps the largest prize list ever attempted will be one considerable attraction to the affair.

RUNAWAY TEAM HALTED BY TREE

One of The Animals Suffered Injuries And Had to be Destroyed

Crashing into a large elm tree when they attempted to turn into the driveway of their owner, a team of runaway horses belonging to James Dick, farmer residing near Wallbridge, were severely injured, necessitating the dispatching of one of the animals, after running a mad dash down the road while they were hitched to a buggy.

The horses became frightened, when the tongue of the rake suddenly dropped to the ground, the driver jumped clear as the terrified animals started off on a mad, headlong dash down the road in the direction of their stables a half a mile away. Reaching the turn the horses suddenly slowed their speed and attempted to make the turn into the lane.

Their momentum carried them to the far side of the driveway where they crashed headlong into a large tree. One horse suffered a smashed rump and shoulder and later was shot.

Belleville Citizens Borrowed Over Twelve Thousand Dollars For Home Improvements Up to the First of June

As Much More Spent From Private Funds—Urge For Home Improvement is Becoming Epidemic, Providing Employment for Many Workers — Home Improvement Plan is Getting Into Its Stride And Big Things Are Looked For in The Near Future

Home improvements loans in cities and towns of Canada with population of over 5,000 numbered 9,388 and amounted to $3,678,427.10 at the end of May for all Canada, it was announced by the Hon. J. L. Ilsley, acting Minister of Finance. This was an increase of 1,361 loans amounting to $527,045.26 over the figures up to May 15th. In cities with population of 40,000 and over, loans up to May 31st numbered 5,290 amounting to $2,095,682.68. In the classification between 20,000 and 40,000 there were 1,105 loans totalling $433,542.65. Cities and towns between 10,000 and 20,000 accounted for 1,426 loans worth $576,292.23. Loans in towns ranging from 5,000 to 10,000 population numbered 1,567 and amounted to $572,909.54.

In the cities and towns of Canada operating under the loan, thirty-three in number, Belleville is on the list with forty-one loans amounting to $12,043.26. New Westminster tops the list with 136 loans which amount to $40,483.93.

Peterborough has a loan total of ninety-seven which accounts for $26,533.06; Oshawa has 102 loans out worth $24,442.51; twelve loans have been granted to Cobourg and district residents amounting to $4,263.36, while Lindsay has accommodated 28 borrowers with loans amounting to $12,435.86.

Timmins, Ont., in the Porcupine gold mining area, has shown a remarkable reaction to the Home Improvement Plan, with its residents borrowing $54,332.77, in 76 loans to beautify homes and building in this enterprising northern town.

On the Phone you are Courteous—

Try Courtesy on the Highway

ON THE PHONE you are courteous. You say "hello!" pleasantly, answer enquiries in a kindly manner, ask the caller to "hold the line a moment, please" and are even "sorry" when the wrong number has been called.

But to those unseen telephone users, to whom you are so polite, are you still polite when they become motorists on the highways? Do you share the road fairly with them by keeping to your right, passing by a safe clearance and giving them "elbow-room" when they are negotiating difficult places? Do you safeguard them, and yourself, by hand-signalling your intention to slow down, turn or stop? Do you enable your fellow-motorist to drive peacefully on his way by driving in your own traffic lane at the speed of the traffic you happen to be in—by refraining from needless horn-blowing and dangerous overtaking and cut? Do you dip or dim your brilliant lights at night when you meet the other fellows and otherwise act towards them in the same friendly manner as when they are on the phone?

I sincerely request you to do so and to "Try Courtesy" every inch of the way and thereby help to reduce the number of motor accidents.

WALLBRIDGE

Wallbridge—The people of Wallbridge community gathered in the Town Hall one evening, recently, and tendered Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hendricks (nee Miss Grace Chisholm), a miscellaneous shower in honour of their recent marriage. Mr. Clem Ketcheson acted as chairman for the occasion. After the gathering was called to order all joined in a short period of community singing. Then the bride and groom were called to the front and the following address was read by Mrs. Hudson Ketcheson and the presentation was made on behalf of the Sidney Junior Institute by a beautiful cookie container and set of tomato cocktail glasses. The address:—

Dear Grace,—

The girls of the Junior Institute wanted to express to you, in some tangible way, good wishes for your every happiness and

May this little cookie jar fill full upon your shelf
And when Jack thinks he's hungry
He can go and help himself.

Junior Institute girls.

Then Mrs. Barton Hinchliffe read the following address after which the stage curtain was drawn disclosing a table laden with gifts.

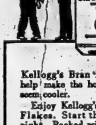
Dear Grace and Jack,—

We your old friends and neighbors, have gathered here tonight to wish you a Bon Voyage on the sea of matrimony.

We could not let this occasion pass without rejoicing with you and wishing you both happiness and prosperity.

Grace, we have known you since childhood; you have been a life Member of our Mission Band and Missionary Society, President of the Mission Band and a member of the choir; you have always been willing to help us in all our church activities but what is our loss will be another's gain and we know with your helpfulness and kindly disposition that these same good qualities will make for you friends in your new home.

Jack, we have known you for some time as you have been a very regular visitor to our neighborhood. We have always found you to be of a very pleasant personality. You always have a jolly word and pleasant smile of greeting which we feel will mean much to the partner you have chosen for life as the years go by.



With these few words we now ask you, Grace and Jack to please accept these gifts as tokens of the esteem in which you are held by the Wallbridge Community.

Wishing you a Bon Voyage and hoping to have you with us often, Signed on behalf of the Wallbridge Community— Louise Sine, Muriel Shorey, Pleda Hinchliffe

After the gifts had been unwrapped the bride and groom each made a suitable reply and all joined in giving them three cheers and singing "For They are Jolly Good Fellows." Several of the people of the community spoke a few words also the groom's father, Mr. Leonard Hendricks. Lunch was served by the ladies and an orchestra played for a short social period. After the party broke up the bride and groom were given a rousing charivari.

GERMANY RUSHES WORK ON NEWEST DIRIGIBLE

Their faith in lighter-than-air craft unshaken by the tragic loss of the Hindenburg, Germany's dirigible experts are rushing to completion work on the Zeppelin LZ-130 which was to have been a sister ship to the ill-fated "Hindenburg" but now will be its successor. This view of the new craft in the hangar at Friedrichshafen reveals that a great deal of acres of fabric has already been stretched over the steel framework. The new dirigible will be 811 feet long and 130 feet wide.

HEAD OF RUSSIAN FASCISTS IS HOST TO CZARIST PRINCE

It's a fairly safe bet that when Prince Theodore of Russia (Left), arrived at the home of A. A. Von-Lindley (Right) in Thompson, Conn., as pictured here many an uncomplimentary remark was passed, touching Mr. Josef Stalin and Co., and the erstwhile land of the Czars. For Prince Theodore is a scion of the former Russian royal family and Mr. Vonstaley is a reputedly world leader of the Russian National Revolutionary Fascist party, pledged to overthrow the Communist government at Moscow. W. H. MORTON, PUBLISHER.

A GREAT EXPERIMENT

Britain is trying out and the League of Nations will try out one of the greatest experiments in history, that in Palestine, to bring to an end the bitter rivalry of Arab and Jew, who, the Royal Commission finds, possess civilizations which will never assimilate. Opposition to the setting up of Arab and Jewish states and to the establishment of a third state under mandate which will also control holy places is naturally expected from the inhabitants of a land which has seen so many cultures come and go. What will be the ultimate result, time alone can tell.

No land is in such a state of rival forces as Palestine, particularly as the problems involved touch not only the racial but also the religious outlook. Three great religions of the world, Judaism, the earliest, Christianity, next in period of time, the outgrowth of the Hebrew faith, and Mohammedan religion developed there. No land has been so overrun by the commerce of the world and by war as Palestine and as well it has given the world its choicest in shrines of religion.

Though since the war the Zionist movement has developed beyond hopes and there is real development, the problems have been acute enough to start bitter strife, unexpected by those who considered the fate of Palestine after the conquest of Jerusalem by the British armies under Allenby. As the opportunity for freedom of development came with the opening up of Zionism, the problems naturally became more acute. Then the conflict of interests and racial aspirations arose, to end which strife is the aim of the finding of the Royal Commission.

A Jewish state along the Mediterranean and an Arab state inland with access to the sea are the decision of the Commission. As well there is the setting apart of a third section under British mandate which will control the cities of Jerusalem, Bethlehem and Nazareth and other holy places.

Feelings of the two races are tense though there is quiet and there is a belief expressed that possibly there may be a united front of Jewish and Arabs against the partition, for different reasons of course. An acute phase has been entered upon. Before the League of Nations Council meets at the end of this month to consider the report, feelings will have have to crystalize more clearly.

Other lands have some such problems but with none are they so acute. In parts of Europe there is the eternal boundary and racial question, where there are mixed populations with different political leanings and racial aspirations.

The Great War removed one element, that of Turkish control. But the Arabs have been long enough in the country to have established themselves since the seventh century. The tenacity of the Jewish people in holding to their land in the face of countless invaders and of the population of Mohammedans all through the centuries gives the Jews every ancient right.

Jerusalem can never be controlled by followers of one faith—that much is made clear by the report.

The British press is generally found in support of the bold effort to end the strife and to give peace to the distracted country. But London Express (Independent) is outspokenly in favor of the keeping of the promise to the Arabs that they would have the Turkish state given them, and that they have a good right of possession as any modern people.

The Commission has acted boldly, seeing no hope of compromise and so sets up the new states in the hope that the feuds and bitterness may end.

DO YOU KNOW

That motor vehicle accidents cost the citizens of Ontario about $25,000,000 each year?

That each year about 550 persons are killed and over 10,000 injured—many of them permanently disabled or disfigured?

That people get into accidents not because they want to, but because they don't try hard enough to keep out of accidents?

That it's the minor mistakes of drivers and pedestrians which cause most of the major accidents?

That other drivers operate their cars for their pleasure and convenience and expect the same courtesy from you, you expect from them. Try Courtesy.

The virtue of the soul does not consist in flying high, but walking orderly; its grandeur does not exercise itself in grandeur but in mediocrity.—Montaigne.

TRUTH

Not many people mow the grass
Upon their neighbour's lawn
Or rise at break of chilly day
To see the wanderer on his way.

And few will stop to clean the snow
Upon a slippery icy walk;
These little things until they die
With laughing jest they pass right by.

They stop then and consider long
Wishing with all their little souls
As on their sick-beds and they lay
That they had learned "the game to play."

BOY SCOUTS JAMBOREE IN WASHINGTON IS CERTAINLY A BIG AFFAIR. Lowell Thomas, world traveller, explorer and author, devoted one of his broadcasts to the Jamboree and various other radio programs were devoted to the affair. Lowell told of two Boy Scouts who had walked from South America to take part, and every country in Europe was represented, most of the delegates being able to speak English, and every nation responded to radio roll call. Every railway company but one granted one-cent a mile transportation rates to Boy Scouts for the Jamboree, and a prominent stockholder of that one sent a large cash donation to Boy Scout headquarters expressing his regret at the action of the railway's officials. In the Boy Scout movement of the English speaking nations is a challenge to those nations which treat the Youth Movement as just a means of supplying cannon fodder.

"MUGWUMP" WAS A NAME APPLIED IN DERISION TO FOLKS IN THE UNITED STATES who did not belong to the ranks of the leading parties, Democratic or Republican, they were on the fence as it were. A TEXAS WOMAN WHEN APPRIZED THAT SHE HAD INHERITED $50,000, said she couldn't bother with it until she had finished a pair of pants she was making as a relief worker. She surely had the interests of her employers at heart and sudden fortune did not dim the thankfulness she had experienced at being employed on a government project aimed to give relief without pauperizing. For nearly two years this elderly woman has been supporting her invalid husband on government relief work for which she received $33 per month.

Director: "Yes, Why?"

Actress: "Then he won't need any rope."

Game and Fisheries Laws

From Monthly Bulletin, Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries

The Department deplores the fact that it is necessary to prosecute in order to obtain enforcement of the Game and Fisheries Laws. It is hoped that strongly education, an enlightened public opinion, and a general knowledge of the value of our resources, the lawbreaker will become so unpopular that his depredations will be considerably reduced. To the meantime, however, the poacher, the unscrupulous trapper, and the petty law-breaker, still keep the enforcement officers busy. During the month of May convictions for infringements of the Act numbered 146. In connection with these convictions some 220 seizures of equipment, pelts, etc., were made. These confiscated articles are sold by public auction, or otherwise disposed of according to the provisions of the Act.

Many of the convictions were in regard to the illegal taking of beaver. For some weeks the enforcement officers have been waging a campaign to stamp out the unlawful destruction of this national fur bearer. Heavy penalties for the illegal possession of beaver pelts have been imposed by the courts, the fines ranging from a minimum of $20.00 for one pelt to as high as almost $800.00, with costs in addition. Sample penalties taken from the May records are as follows: $120.00, $180.00, $320.00, $260.00, $220.00, $780.00. In addition to the penalties the pelts were confiscated. It is hoped that the activities in this connection and the penalties imposed will have a salutary effect on the unscrupulous trapper and fur buyer.

Know Your Bass

(Game and Fis heries Bulletin)

A well-known sporting magazine which sponsors an annual prize fishing contest for the largest fish caught in a variety of different classes has had to change its regulations somewhat as applied to black bass because, as it states, "Often in the past we have received entries in the Small-mouth class which, on careful examination, turned out to be Large-mouth bass." "These entries," it continues, "are usually made through ignorance on the part of the contestants and, or enquiry, we have found has surprisingly few fishermen know the simple and definite rules for identifying the two species." Our own observations lead us to believe that a great deal of confusion does exist as to the identity of the two species, particularly among the less experienced anglers, and we offer, briefly, certain characteristic differences which will serve to distinguish the two.

There are three methods of identifying the species:

1. The color scheme.
2. The size of the mouth.
3. The scales

The small-mouth is a golden green with a bronze lustre, but is blotched with darker spots or short-vertical bars. The large-mouth is a dark green above with a lighter or silvery tinge below. Unlike the small-mouth, however, it is not blotched, but has a blackish stripe along the side from the head to the tail. These markings are quite definite on small fish but are liable to have changed in the larger specimens, and as a consequence, taken alone, this method of identification is not reliable.

Probably the most positive method of identification is the scales. A comparison of the two fish shows that the scales on the large-mouth are larger than those on the small-mouth, and as a consequence there are fewer rows of them on certain parts of the fish. This difference will be observed on the cheek and from the median line to the middle of the back. On the cheek of the small-mouth there are approximately 17 rows of scales, while on large-mouth the number of rows is approximately 10.

A study of these characteristics will leave no doubt as to the identity of the bass.

Sunday School Picnics

VICTORIA AVENUE BAPTIST

The cool breezes and shady trees of the Community Park at Wellington proved an ideal spot for the annual picnic of Victoria Ave. Baptist Church, voted by many present to be one of the most enjoyable in years.

Nearly two hundred members and friends crowded buses and cars shortly after noon under the direction of Messrs. Lorne Anderson, Bert Cox and J. Hamilton, and Rev. A. J. Sinclair. The cool shadiness of the park was the scene of a variable sports program which occupied the attention of the large gathering for the major part of the afternoon. A tug of war between the Bachelors and Benedicts proved highly exciting and caused much merriment before the Single Men were returned the winners. The cold water of the lake was the mecca for a large number of swimmers during the afternoon, while ball baseball enthusiasts indulged in their favorite sport. Free ice cream was dispensed to the children by the committee, and in the early evening a delectable supper luncheon was served to all present beneath the shade of the trees.

Highlighting the sport program was the running race. Here, the ladies of the church ran a short distance to capture a cake of soap, which contained a prize property. Consequently some of the ladies did not buy soap for some time to come. The lady making the most trips was adjudged the winner.

RIOTS FEARED AS BRITAIN PLANS ARAB, JEWISH STATES IN PALESTINE

With over 12,000 troops standing at the qui vive to crush any incipient disorders, British High Commissioner Sir Arthur Wauchope (second from left below) and his associates charged with the task of governing Palestine, awaited reaction of the million-odd Arabs and Jews to publication of proposals to divide the Holy Land into three zones and set up separate and independent states for Jews and Arabs. The proposals already approved by the British government were put forward by the Royal Commission which was sent to investigate recurring disorders between the two bitterly opposed factions and to suggest a remedy. Under the partition, a Jewish state will be set up in the north and west approximately one-third of the country, while Arabs own the remainder of Palestine with the exception of a narrow corridor, including Jerusalem which Britain will retain under mandate. Map shows the partition, the Jewish area marked by single lines; the Arab by double lines; and the British corridor in black. Opposition is expected from both Jews and Arabs the latter led by the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem (lower left); Nationalist aspirations of the Moslem Arabs which have led to bloody riots in the past are whipped up by orators like the one in circle at street-corner crowd at Jaffa. Both this city and Tel Aviv, the modern and completely Jewish city over which the British fighting aeroplane is flying at right, will be included in the new Jewish state. The royal Commission indicated that they held out no alternative hope of reconciling the two races.

NEW TWIN-MOTORED MONOPLANE BUILT FOR MATTERN'S PROPOSED NORTH POLE FLIGHT

Sometime during July this year from Oakland, Calif., to Moscow James Mattern, courageous flier expects to be winging his way over the North Pole on a solo flight and will travel the same route as that of the intrepid Russian fliers. Mattern completes a non-stop hop from Moscow to United States recently. The aeroplane, with a cruising range of 5,000 miles, will be refueled over Alaska. Mattern, essaying the flight in return for the Russian fliers' visit, may travel alone with a robot pilot to aid him.

CAMERA CATCHES IN FORMAL GLIMPSES FROM PITTSBURG PIRATES' BENCH

The Pittsburg Pirates of the National Baseball league are well up with the leaders, but to look at the expressions on the players' faces in this layout you would begin to think they were having a tough job keeping out of the cellar position. As it is, their nearest rivals are the St. Louis Cardinals who are trailing close on their heels. Maybe it is this fact that has them worried at present, for other than that they should be satisfied with their third place position. These pictures of several of the players were taken from the Pirates' bench. In case you are not certain as to the positions on the field of these players we will act as your informant. Arky Vaughan plays shortstop, while Lucas attends to some of the hurling duties. Suhr is the regular first sacker.

CANNIFTON RUNS STRING OF WINS TO 8 IN ROW

Defeat Latta With Last Inning Rally 4 to 3

Latta, July 8—Canniffon still remains undefeated in the S. H. League, having stretched their winning streak to eight games without tasting defeat, although they were extending to the limit to pull out a win here at Latta, Wednesday. Going into the last inning facing a two run deficit, the Canniffon boys retained their record when they scored three runs to put them one ahead.

Errors played a prominent part in the scoring both teams being very ragged in the field. Latta were the worst offenders in this respect they out-erring their opponents 7-3 and literally threw the game away in the last inning when they committed three glaring errors to allow three unearned runs.

Joe Marsh started on the mound for the losers and was nicked for three hits and one run up to the third when he retired in favor of Youngs who pitched hitless ball for the remainder of the game but issued two walks in the fifth which proved his downfall. E. Smith pitched his usual steady game for Canniffon, limiting opposition to three hits, one a homer by J. Marsh in the third. Both Smith and Youngs had seven strikeouts, the latter's performance slightly bettering that of Smith's, as in the 2 1-3 innings he pitched

Lineups:

Canniffon—L. Jarrell, 3b; Simpson c; Kimpson, ss; Bush, 2b; Smith, p; Sharpe, lf; Sleeckman, cf; Braddon, rf.

Latta—Gowe, cf; Orr, c; Marsh, p. and ss; Simpson, 2b; Parks, 1b; Fargey, rf; C. Hall, ss and 3b; Tummon lf; A. Hall, 2b; I. Youngs p.

Score:	R.	H.	E.

SIX RUN RALLY HELPS POINTERS

"Cementmen" Defeat Bell-Sargents 10-8 in Senior Fixture

A six run rally in the fifth inning gave the Point Anne "cementmen" sufficient margin to win 10 to 8 over the Belleville-Sargents in a Senior Softball fixture at Coleman Flats last evening. In defeat the "bookmakers" were batted at four consecutive victories last night. The Bell-Sargents took a four run lead in the initial frame and were leading with a comfortable margin when the ballcoop ended in the fifth. An eight inning rally on the part of the losers failed to pull the game out of the fire, as they fell two short of knotting the count.

Manager Bateman was Skipper Sedore's choice for firing the duty and the Bells touched the ex-Springstrock fireball artist for a total of 12 hits, including many for extra bases. Sager started for the losers and was kicked for nine hits in five frames. Eddie Schreiber being hurried to the mound to fill the breach in the fifth and stopping the "cement-men" to allow them two hits for the remainder of the game.

Kiser and Barrage collected a trio of tingles each, Kiser getting a brace of doubles, McMartin, Cole and Gray also hit with success for the losers. Bob Ostalin led the Point Anne squad with the hickory, getting two doubles and a single, Sero pounding out a triple, a double and two singles.

Bateman whiffed five "bookmakers" while Sager struck out three in his stint, and one-half inning, Schreider lacing the pitchers to whiff four in four frames. Sager walked two, Schreider issued one while Bateman's control was perfect, as he failed to issue a single walk in nine innings. The result of the game had no bearing on the league standing. Two games are scheduled in the league for this evening with the Cement City and Point Anne and the Aajmaa kids meeting the league leading Corbins at Coleman Flats.

The line-ups:

Belleville-Sargents— Lupenstie 3b; McMartin cf; Barrage 2b; Kiser rf; McGuire ss; Cole 1b; Gray c; Robinson lf; Sager and Schreider, p.

Point Anne—Murray lf; Bateman p; Sero ss; Green c; Ostalin 1b; Whitehead 3b; Tummon cf; Merlaw 2b and Scott rf.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

Immediately after Vince Guay, junior hockey wiz the Fosters squad in the South Hastings League, cuffed the three bagger that spelled defeat for the local junior squad on Wednesday night, Business Manager Bill Cook grabbed a Junior O.H.A., playing certificate and burned up the lens firms between him and Guay to sign the kid. Coach Woodley was hot after Guay and had stated that the lad intimated he wanted to play with his home club at this time. Guay signed with the local Juniors Wednesday night and O.H.A. Boss at least. The addition of Guay materially strengthens the Juniors' inner works. Bert Noakes, Intermediate defhander, who has returned home from holidaying has also been signed, giving the Kiwanis Juniors three lefthand hurlers, Keith Weeks, Jos Doherty and Noakes, with Joe Kelleher being the lone right-hander on the squad. Slowly Coach Woodley is whipping the kids into shape and we hope to see some good junior ball in Belleville when the provincial playdowns roll about.

Briefly yesterday we broke the news regarding "Honey" Tompkins, Deseronto, leading to Peterboro. Tompkins came to Belleville two seasons ago as a junior hockey player, later playing with Napanee to again return to Belleville and play both junior and intermediate last winter. Tompkins only recently took up lacrosse and from the oniest took to the game like the proverbial duck to water. According to the story circulating from Trenton following the Auburn-Rover game Tompkins is to take up residence in the Littlest City and Argust 1st. Undoubtedly Tompkins is being imported for his hockey ability, but of course may play lacrosse with the Littlest City aggregation also. Incidentally we understand the R. C. A. V. "Tyros" had overtures even feamed in Tompkins' direction although apparently the Peterboro crowd beat 'em to the punch.

Norman "Flat" Walsh, former N. H. L. goalie, coach of Queen's University hockey and N.R.L. referee, informs us that the Cornwall Hockey Club is angling around for Johnnie "One Man Gang" Lalonde of M.O.A.P. hockey fame. Lalonde is a natural offensive defenceman, but not a defensive defenceman as the Flyers used him last year. If he finally located in Cornwall Coach Buck Boucher will convert the elongated Lalonde into a rushing defenceman," explained Flat yesterday.

Although the weather as anything but of hockey atmosphere we're starting to that subject today in order to relegate our thoughts into cooler surroundings. "Flat" Walsh assures us that Queen's University would welcome a senior or intermediate team grouping, that would include Peterboro, Oshawa, R.C.A.F. and Queens next winter. Sounds like a good idea, but the Flyers will have to bolster their 1936-37 roster if they are to compete with Oshawa and Queens, or even Peterboro. Already they have lost Frank Lowrey, classy centre-ice playmaker, "Windy" Windgate, and Roy Laing, while rumors of others being missing from the ranks of the Flyers are prevalent.

The Cleveland Falcon Hockey Club, of the International League, recently signed Bill Cook, former Kingston and star New York Ranger right winger, as coach of the Falcons for two years. Cook is to receive the largest salary in the history of minor league hockey. The signing of Cook is an outstand indication of the rumors stating Cleveland would be included in the National Hockey League within two years.

The Belleville Flying Rovers, having lost their last two starts to Cobourg and Peterboro respectively are on the well known spot for their league tussle versus the Cobourg "Combines" at the Trenton Arena tonight. The Rovers triumphed over the "Combines" at Cobourg 17 to 15 two weeks ago, but in the meantime the Cobourg "Labours" have forged to the fore front and are crowding the Rovers for the second hole in the league standing. The locals must win tonight in order to retain their lofty standing behind the group-leading and undefeated Peterboro squad.

After winning four consecutive games in local Senior Softball circles, the Belleville-Sargents felt by the wayside and lost to Point Anne 10 to 8 last night. The "cementmen" were aided in the offensive picture once, that being in the fifth, when they scored six big runs to assure victory. Sager, the starting pitcher for the 'bookmakers' was noticeably weakening in the sixth and had he been replaced earlier by Eddie Schreider, perhaps the "bookmakers" would have made it five in a row, Schreider giving a fine display of relief hurling, as he limited the Point Anne squad to two hits in over four frames. Once the visitors gave Lorne Bateman their starting moundsman, a working margin, however, he proved equal to the occasion to abrupt ly halt subsequent opposing rallies. The same was a typical slugging orgy with the losers outhitting the "cement boys" 12 to 11, but errors were much too frequent for good ball, however. It's Senior Softball at Coleman Flats and Point Anne tonight.

Elmer E. Lebarre, track racer, Royal McKillop, won all three heats in the special classified race at Sudbury yesterday. Doc Kane has been training Royal McKillop for some time and apparently has the big stud in fine racing condition, as he beat a field of five horses in good time.

Prior to 1907 the Boston Red Sox sometimes referred to as the "Millionaires" owing to the fat wallet of Thomas Fawkes club owner, the Boston American Club was first Somerets, then Puritans, Plymouth Rocks and Speed Boys, the Boston American League team became Red Sox in 1907, when the Boston Nationals abandoned red stockings for white and President John T. Taylor adopted the carmine hose for his A. L. players.

Kingston Ponies added further to their league lead with a mid-week win over Napanee that saw Tammy Jamieson toss up three hit ball and fan six sixty batters en route.

Tony Pavkoski, the Queens University summer student who is doing some throwing for Kingston on the side, set up the season's strikeout record when he recently fanned 13 Oshawa batters.

Ralph Walsh club of Napanee Clubbards is one pitcher in the league who's doing some good work unnoticed. When he starts a game his mates throw it away with erratic fielding and when he goes in on a relief job with his team batting they can't get a run.

Talk of reviving the annual all-star game is quite general. Formerly the previous years champions would play a picked team from the remainder of the league. A date should be left open for this game, when the schedule is drawn up. The game is played on the champions diamond and the expenses are paid proceeds go to assist injured players.

When Kingston played Oshawa a week ago they were minus three regulars. Wonder why Jos Daley didn't give Sykes, his Wolfe Island recruit a chance?

Oshawa revenged for their recent 3-game losing streak that dislodged them from first place when they came back to register to trio of wins in as many days.

Tammy Jamieson's 4x straight victories are spread as follows: From Napanee 1, Peterboro 2 and Oshawa 1, the latter a late inning relief job. Before he can be declared the boss of the league, he'll have to start against Oshawa at home and away.

Napanee, after successive wins from Oshawa and Kingston went into a terrible slump and have only scored 1 run in their last three games.

Tomorrow's games have both the westerly teams at home, Napanee golfy to Oshawa and Kingston making their second visit to Peterboro.

LOSING STREAK BROKEN AT 12

Newark Bears Explode 21 Hits to Down Orioles 17-3

(By The Associated Press)

It looks like the worst is over for Jersey City Giants—and Manager Travis (Stonewall) Jackson fervently hopes so.

Monday's game having a tough time of it, with the Club going into one tailspin after another. The last losing streak got Stonewall down. The Giants had lost 12 in a row and Jackson was so distraught he didn't know if they'd ever win again.

But the Giants did, and did it in an impressive manner. Yesterday, they walloped three Syracuse hurlers, headed by George Hockwitz, for 21 hits to score a 12-3 victory over the Chiefs. It was a big day for the usually weak-hitting Giants and they made the most of it. The hit and run totals represented a new high in both departments for the Giants since the season got under way.

Newark Bears showed the Giants what real slugging was. The Bears exploded 21 hits all over Orioles Park last night as they overwhelmed Baltimore 17-3. Five homers were clouted out of the Park.

Foremost in the Bruin slugfest was flashy Joe Gordon, the Bears' second baseman, and first baseman George McQuinn. Gordon poled out three homers and McQuinn two, with each driving home five runs.

Montreal Royals also used the home run route to defeat Buffalo Bisons 5-3. The Royals made nine hits off Truett Sewell who five of them going for extra bases of which three were four-baggers. Gus Dugas, Dave Harris and Pitcher Crip Polli belted for the circuit to account for four of the Montreal runs.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE (Close)

Toronto, July 9 (CP)—A week of daily advances ended the Toronto Share Market in turned dreary and moderately heavy today. Golds were definitely weak, moderate losses predominated in the base metal, oil and industrial groups. Volume for the day was around 226,000 shares, the lightest of the week.

While the senior oils displayed mild strength Western Juniors were on the weak side. Losses of a few cents each were showing at the close for Brown Oil, Home, Monarch, United, Dalhousie, Footbills and Vicom.

Noranda dropped 3-4 and Nickel and Hudson Bay dropped minor fractions. The close was off narrowly for Wells-Amulet, Ventures, Sherritt, Dominion and Chrysler. Bidorado turned strong and climbed to 36 cents.

FRED PITTS, 37, DROWNS IN MOIRA

Falls in at Malone Fully Dressed And Unable to Swim

Malone, July 9 (Special)—Fred Pitts, 37, resident of Marmora, was drowned in the Moira River shortly after six o'clock this morning, his body being recovered ten minutes later in eight feet of water but artificial respiration failed to revive the victim. It is believed the man slipped and fell into the river due to the fact he was fully dressed. It is understood the victim could not swim. Dr. S. Eagleson, Madoc, coroner for the district, with County Constable Percy Gray of Marmora, investigated and, having the facts, the coroner declared an inquest unnecessary. The body was removed by Walter Gawley, Henry Nickle and Mervin Dafoe. The body will be taken to Marmora for interment.

COLLECTS THE SPOILS

To the winner goes the spoils, and that is just what is happening in this picture. Major George Robertson is seen here handing Bernd Rosemeyer, blond bombshell from Germany who won the 300-mile Vanderbilt auto race, a check for $30,000 plus—the plus taking care of the expense of lap money he won. Rosemeyer also received the large Vanderbilt cup, emblematic of the auto classic.

SOUTHERN GOLDS
In view of the favorable results obtained under the extensive lateral development campaign in the underground workings and from diamond drill operations carried out from the bottom level official of Southern Golds, Ltd., plan an early shipment of ore for test purposes.
Block 1 vein was cut at a depth of 360 feet showing a width of five feet as compared with a width of three feet on the 136 foot level. The No. 2 vein was intersected some 80 feet below the bottom horizon showing improved widths. Officials point out that the present drift campaign is being carried out with the object of establishing the persistence of the vein structure at depth. This has since been proven and results are better than expected.
All intersections to date have shown improved widths and according to the vein structure at depth these will remain as high as those established on the upper levels, where widths of ore shoots have been determined ranging in length from 100 to 200 feet with widths from $2.50 to $35 per ton over good mineable widths.
As underground work proceeds exploration will be carried out on other known surface occurrences, which from the limited amount of work to date will yield other economic ore zones. The veins located to date occur in a mineralized zone known to have a length of 2,500 feet and a width of 600 feet.

Jobless Youth Makes a Job
Scissors Grinding Machine is Now Heard in Belleville
Johnny Martini is a twenty-two year old Italian youth, diminutive in stature but one hundred and twenty-five pounds of Ambition. When the depression struck Ontario land, Ohio, Johnny's home town, he was left without a job. But the depression failed to deprive Johnny of his Latin temperament, and he proceeded to show Old Man Depression that he was far from defeated.
But what to do, was the question. Then opportunity offered itself one day in the form of a one-man portable scissor and knife grinding machine. Johnny's dark eyes gleamed as he pictured a tour of the country, putting an edge on those utensils and at the same time yielding a crimp in the depression, and satisfying his urge to see the world.
This morning Johnny set up his one-man business outside a shop on Front Street. Sparks flew from his emery wheel as he chatted to this reporter.
"Sure, she is one toughs grind." he said, while Leslie Jennings against an olive skin. "An' I dont' wan' to be fonny, I mean dis Method of sharpening da knife and fixin' da umbrell. Sure I getta a lot of da business, but I musta earn two-tree dollar to maka da five cent. Da meat and brawl take a lot of a money. I go from one place to another, data notta good, take too much time. Sometimes I work, I leave Toronto, and come down da pike." I stoppa at every place and do my work."
"What else can you do, Johnny? he was asked.
"Me, sure I do everyting," he grinned. "I sen was good man, but people dey donta know dat. I am good. I go to Montreal next year, starva. Canada sure she is wan good country, fine people and good food. I go to Montreal next year to see da French. Maybe not so much."
And Johnny whistled an aria of Rigoletto as he struggled with the wheel and strods blithely away.

WHAT PRICE SPACE MR. ADVERTISER?
Space in a daily newspaper possesses a power that is lacking in the lineage of other advertising media.
It is not only more economical . . . which is a matter of easy computation . . . it is not only more flexible, it is not only more timely and rapid, but also it is the advertiser's unfailing point of contact with the mass market and every spot market of the Dominion of Canada.
The Daily Newspaper possesses a power by means of which an advertiser, who knows how to use it, can reach and move to action all or any part of the Canadian consuming public.
In this North American continent there was spent during 1934 in the columns of the daily newspapers more than $500,000,000. The strongest of all supplementary media was used to the extent of $114,000,000. Why?
Because for prompt action on sales plans . . . for quick consumer influence at minimum cost . . . for willing co-operation from the retail trade, the daily newspaper is today, as it always has been, the outstanding and most economical basic advertising medium.

WANTS QUIET EATS SAYS U. S. TOURIST

The bally gentleman in the white Panama and shirt sleeves who heralded the family party just emerging from an expensive automobile bearing Indiana licence plates, eyed the restaurant speculatively peering within the door as he awaited his lagging family.
From within the white-coated proprietor swung the door open and smiled invitingly.
There was a moment of hesitation.
"Have you," nodded the prospective customer, "a confounded radio in that place?"
"Yes, sir. Any program you wish!"
"I can't wish. None of us wish. I'm getting sick of radios. I came on this tour for peace and quietness. We want to eat where it's quiet. We don't want any weasel-squawking and din and yelling at each other across the table to be heard.
"We thought Canada'd be quiet —full of woods and so on. It isn't. They've all got them.....radios blasting away all the time...."
Assured that the defect could be remedied in the local eatery the party disappeared within.

Holiday Bride

by ANN DEMAREST

"I didn't drop those dresses, Miss Bartlett," Jeanne burst out then. "They are here in your closet now." Jeanne pressed her lips together to keep from crying. She didn't keep from crying out at this girl who was accusing her so unjustly.

Lance looked at Cilly coldly and then turned to Jeanne. "Come along," he said. "I'm going to take you home. There is no reason for you to be humiliated so unjustly. I think you've lost your mind, Cilly."

"You're damned right she's going out!" Cilly shrieked. "And she'll never coming back either!" She turned on Jeanne "You're fired sister!"

Lance said: "I wouldn't be too sure. Your brother will have something to say about this."

Norma interrupted them: "Lance is right about that, Cilly. She's got your brother wound around her little finger. He won't even let him speak to me on the telephone."

Jeanne straightened her slim shoulders. "I'm going now. You needn't worry, Miss Bartlett. I won't be back. I could never work here again."

"Say, say, whats all the row?" Doug Thorne put his head in the doorway.

Norma turned on Doug angrily. "Go on back to the living room," she said. "This is none of your business."

"If its your business, it's mine too," he said looking around curiously.

"There's nothing the matter, Doug," Cilly said hastily. "Come on let's all go back to the party."

"There was something wrong," he insisted. "I could hear all of you. I said to myself, there is having one of her famous scene again."

"You're right, Doug," Norma took him by the shoulder. "Get your things—we're going home."

"I don't want to go home," he insisted, the color rising in his weak, dissipated face. "And I'm bet tighter than you are. I heard something going on. Cilly is mad because Lance has fallen for Geraine Lamb, the new platinum blonde secretary, I'll bet. I saw them sitting here in the dark a little while ago. And I thought to myself, Cilly isn't going to like that."

Cilly stared at him with blazing eyes and then she swung around to face Jeanne. "Will you please leave, Miss MacDonald? I think you have done enough damage for one evening." Cilly stamped a tiny, high heeled slipper.

There was a sound from the hall and Mary slunk into the room.

"Do you mind telling me where you can find my shoes, Cecile?" Jeanne held a brisk voice asked.

Jeanne looked up with a gasp to see Aunt Cecile advancing across the room, an aristocratic, dominating figure in her handsome fur coat. For a moment every one was silent, and then Doug Thorne said, could stop him Doug Thorne said, "Your niece?" He seemed amazed. "Why, there's your niece, over there. Every one knows Cilly Bartlett." He pointed at Cilly, who was frozen to the spot, eyeing the old lady frantically.

"Hm. That's interesting," Aunt Cecile turned to Jeanne, a queer look in her eyes. "May I ask who you are?"

Jeanne motioned her lips and forced herself to speak. "I am Jeanne MacDonald, Gordon Bartlett's secretary."

"She was Gordon Bartlett's secretary, Norma Carteret said sharply. "She's just been fired."

"Fired!" the old lady echoed. Cilly shook her head at Norma, motioning her not to speak.

"There was some misunderstanding,' she told her aunt smoothly.

Aunt Cecile regarded Jeanne, a strange expression on her face. "I should have known you had a very much sense to be my friend. I hardly believe it at the time."

"Say, that's a good one!" Doug Thorne roared delightedly. "Did you think she was your niece?" he asked, waving his hand toward Jeanne. "Well, she isn't, but she just swiped your niece's boy friend. That's what all the shouting was about."

"Young man, Aunt Cecile said, turning to Doug, "I don't know who you are but evidently you have had too much to drink."

"Come with me, Doug," Norma said, stepping forward. "We'll run along now." She took him by the arm and led him towards the door to the hall.

Doug stared back, bewildered. "O, K. Whatever you say goes, Norma."

In silence they watched Norma steer him down the hall.

"Disgusting!" the old lady snorted. "Who is he anyway?"

"No one you would know, Cilly said. "Doug Thorne."

"Some of your guests seem to be in the same condition," her aunt said.

Cilly eyed her anxiously. "I'm giving a party."

"How do you happen to be here?" the old lady asked Jeanne sharply precisely.

"I was working late — for Mr. Bartlett," Jeanne said in a tired voice and then she threw an appealing glance at Lance. "I'd better go now."

Aunt Cecile shook her head. "I wish you would stay, Miss . . . MacDonald . . . is it? I'd like to have a few things explained to me."

INSTALMENT 11

There was nothing Jeanne wanted more at the moment than to leave the Bartletts' apartment, to close the door behind her and try to forget all she had been through during the evening. But there was a commanding note in Aunt Cecile's voice, and in Lance's eyes a signal that he wished her to stay.

Jeanne nodded. "Very well. I'll stay."

And Cilly, no longer poised and contemptuous, twisted a red chiffon handkerchief nervously about her fingers and asked if she might return to her guests.

"They will think it strange if I don't go back," she said pleadingly to Aunt Cecile.

"And well they might. When I came in no one seemed to know whether you were here or not," her aunt told her dryly.

When Cilly left, the three of them took wicker chairs in a far corner of the breakfast room.

"I overheard some things I'd like explained," Aunt Cecile said. "But first of all, who are you, young lady?" She leaned forward, eyes on Lance. "Our meeting was a little informal."

"I'm sorry," Jeanne said quickly. "She is Cilly's friend, Lance Larkin."

Lance frowned and his eyes seemed to say, "You may call me Cilly's friend but I'm really yours, if you will let me be."

The old lady nodded and said she had heard of him. Then she leaned back in the chair, looking at the two young people keenly.

"Will you please explain some of this to me," she said, turning to Lance. "When I came to New York a few days ago this young lady came to my hotel and represented herself as my niece."

"It wasn't Jeanne's fault," Lance assured her hastily. "You see Cilly was invited to a swimming party and she asked Jeanne to see you."

"To pretend she was my niece? Is she old lady said harshly.

Jeanne flushed. "I'm sorry, Miss Bartlett," she faltered. "After I met you I regretted my promise to go through with it."

But Aunt Cecile did not seem to be listening. "And if I had gone on to California, if I hadn't come back to New York, I would never have known about this."

For a moment the three of them were silent, and from the living room they could hear the orchestra striking up a new number and the loud voices and too gay laughter of Cilly's guests.

"I got as far as Chicago," Miss Bartlett finally said, "and there I had a touch of grippe, so when I got better I decided to come back to New York to see my old family physician."

"I'm sorry you were ill," Jeanne said in a low voice.

The old lady looked at her and then smiled. "You're a nice child, I'm glad to be angry with you. One reason for my wanting to come back was you, and while I was ill," she added thoughtfully, "I got to thinking that it was silly of me to keep up this quarrel with Gordon. After all, he made a mistake in his marriage and paid for it. Where is he now?"

Jeanne turned to Lance doubtfully. "I believe he went out a little while ago, didn't he? You see, he hasn't been much for parties."

Cilly's aunt rose from her chair.

In a little restaurant off Fair avenue they found a table in a quiet corner and lighted cigarettes, facing each other wearily without speaking. Lance ordered sandwiches and they ate them in silence. It wasn't until they finished their coffee that he spoke.

"I don't know what to say, Jeanne. It has been a terrible evening for you."

"It wasn't your fault, Lance," Jeanne said, her lips trembling.

"Perhaps not," he said, "although if I hadn't given you the bracelet Norma might not have made the scene."

Jeanne looked down at the bracelet and then slipped it off her wrist. "You must take it back, Lance. And it's forget about this evening. After all, it is over and there is nothing we can do about it."

He took the bracelet reluctantly, looking at her with grave eyes. "I can forget when I am alone with you," he said. "You look so sweet. There is something very appealing about you, Jeanne. I like everything about you—the way you wear your hair, your dress that seem to fit you though you are troubled and unhappy, and particularly your mouth. It is tender yet courageous."

Jeanne bent her head. She found it hard to keep her control when Lance was so sweet.

"I've probably brought you most of your trouble," he went on quietly. "But I'll do anything I can to help you."

She raised her eyes to meet his. "Thank you, Lance."

"Perhaps some day . . ." He broke off abruptly. "I'm going to take you home now. You need a good rest."

They left the restaurant and in a few minutes Lance left Jeanne at her door.

"Don't worry," he said, putting an arm tenderly around her shoulders. "We'll see that you are taken care of."

Home Improvement Loans Boon To Many in Belleville

One Man Converted Home Into Duplex And Enjoys Revenue Provided—Home Improvement Becomes Epidemic, Bringing Out Private Funds—Bachelor Apartments—How it Works in the Country.

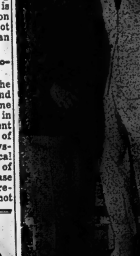
Not only is the Home Improvement Plan providing employment for many classes of trades and people beautifying homes and adding much needed improvements to city and rural residences in Belleville and district, but it is also opening up hitherto unexploited channels and sources of revenue.

For instance there is the case of an elderly citizen of Belleville, at present employed, but who faces retirement on pension in the near future. Under the system of the Home Improvement Plan, he borrowed sufficient money to convert his home into a duplex dwelling, and is now renting the newly acquired addition to his home at a good rental. He now has no ed to worry for the future, for not only will the revenue derived from the new source pay for his loan but will add substantially to his income when the loan is paid up. Thanks to the Home Improvement Plan, his home is beautified, has been added to substantially, and is paying a dividend which in all probability would not have been made possible had the new plan not come into being.

Bringing Out Private Funds

Another important phase which is directly responsible to the Plan is the fact that a large amount of private funds which in all probability would have lain dormant are now being utilized in the remodelling and beautifying of many homes throughout the province. This was typified here in Belleville recently when a lady called upon her banker with regard to borrowing a sum of money under the new system with which to remodel her home. Upon being given the information and told the benefits to be derived, the lady in question decided to utilize private funds of her own. Consequently more money is being placed in circulation, more people are being employed, and building and business in general is undergoing a stimulation which it otherwise would not have experienced to such an extent.

Bachelor Apartments Produce Revenue



Another instance of the tremendous possibilities and practicalities of the Home Improvement Plan is seen in the case of a city resident who through the medium of loans secured under this system converted a practical "wilderness" into a land of plenty. This particular case is the story of a man who realized the possibility of not only supplying business and labor with an added stimulant, but utilized the money secured by loan in providing a source of income.

14 hundred square feet of waste land underwent practically overnight a magical transformation. Now instead of the drab colors of unused property, there stands a trim, modern building containing three three-roomed bachelor apartments, which will provide sufficient income within the next year to more than liquidate the amount of the loan. In short time this fine property will bring in a revenue to its owner which will not only pay for taxes, etc., but also supply a handsome income.

Machine Shed and Electricity

Not only have residents of the city taken advantage of this fine opportunity to improve and add to their dwellings, but many rural dwellers have realized their ambition to beautify their homes and erect much-needed additions and improvements to their buildings. One farmer today boasts a modern machine-shed, one which will house practically all of his heavy farm equipment. Others have, in conjunction with the Hydro Commission, installed electricity in home and barns. New additions have been added to farm homes in many instances, and in some cases the installation of a modern bathroom has been the result of the advantages offered under the Home Improvement Plan.

Further instances of how the Home Improvement Plan is working in Belleville and district will be given in Saturday's issue.

AT THE CAPITOL

Buck Jones in "Border Brigands"

It is seldom that an outdoor adventure picture is so filled with powerfully dramatic situations as is "Border Brigands," which comes to the Capitol one day only, Saturday, matinee and evening, with Buck Jones in the starring role.

The story concerns the activities of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police up under the Arctic Circle, where American and Canadian territories join. Jones is a Lieutenant in the isolated post of the red-coats, and a leader in carrying on a bitter fight against a band of cutthroats and bootleggers in a settlement on the American side of the line. His natural enmity turns into cold hatred when his brother, a private in the ranks of the "Mounties," is slain when he surprises the bandits in a robbery.

The stalwart Buck Jones has never appeared to better advantage than in this exciting picture, and is given fine support by a cast which includes the ravishing Lona Andre, and Fred Kohler.

Added Featurette

With a title as thrilling and dramatic as any underworld racket, "Yes, Can't Get Away With It," you will see how they are exposed by the police who say You Can't Get Away With It. Don't miss this thrilling inside story of how the rackets are smashed. Also a news novelty and musical comedy complete this splendid show, where it is always comfortably cool.

Ends Today

Two grand features end today with last complete show at 8.30. "Love in Exile" starring Clive Brook and Helen Vinson and at 9.10 No. 2, Georgs O'Brien in "Hollywood Cowboy."

AT THE BELLE

Bob Burns and Martha Raye In "Mountain Music", Saturday

I like mountain music—you like mountain music—everybody likes mountain music. Therefor "Mountain Music" at the Belle Theatre Saturday and Monday with those two arch-fiends of merry madness, Bazookin' Bob Burns and Martha Raye. Martha Raye, by the way, is no co-starring role, should be just the right type for midsummer entertainment.

"Mountain Music" is a musical comedy—the story of a couple of feudin' families in the hills. They've patched up the feud, and Bob, son of one clan, is preparing to marry Terry Walker, daughter of his enemies. Bob doesn't want to marry —he doesn't love Terry, and knows that his brother's played a by Dan Howard, does.

"Bob ducks out of the marriage pursued by the guns of Terry's kinfolk, and disappears. Folks around think that Howard has killed him and tote Howard into the clink, charged with the murder.

In the meantime, Bob, who suffers periodically from amnesia, has lost his memory, and, in a strange city meets Martha Raye. They fall for each other, Martha, from papers which Bob found, imagining that he is a wealthy man, Martha and Bob go to a large city, planning to marry—but, things happen: first, they discover that Bob is not the wealthy man he is supposed to be, and then, they meet Terry, who is searching for Bob to prove Howard's innocence. As they meet Terry, Bob gets hit with a bucketful of water, which snaps him out of his amnesia, and the trio rush back home, to try and save Howard.

From that point on, the fun waxes fast and furious. Picture rowdy Martha Raye in the middle of a hillbilly courtroom, and you've got a vague idea! By a combination of more lung-power than any three women are supposed to have, and a good old fireman's hose, she cleans up the trouble, and the last sight of the two happy-looking couples, Bob and Martha, and John Howard and Terry Walker, is of them strollin' down the road, along at the top of their lungs. And when one of those pairs of lungs belongs to Martha Raye—boy, you sure got somethin' there!

Excellent featurettes precede the presentation of "Mountain Music" at each performance commencing daily at 2.30, 7.10 and 9.15 p.m. and include the popular Belle News Flashes of interesting and entertaining events, gathered from the four corners of the earth. A Merrie Melodies cartoon in technicolor entitled "Ain't We Got Fun", that will prove exceptionally pleasing, also "The Perfect Set-Up" another thrilling subject in the crime does not pay series, that has proven very entertaining to Belle Theatre patrons in the past, several releases.

ENDS TO-NIGHT

Two exceptional feature pictures will be presented on the Belle screen for the last times tonight. "Romance in Paris" with Fernand Gravet and Joan Blondell, is a gay musical comedy that last night's audience lauded as one of the best of the year. Edward Everett Horton and Mary Nash, furnishing some of the comedy highlights were many times applauded for their clever dialogue and humor in the picture.

Humphrey Bogart and the supporting cast in "Black Legion" the thrilling and exciting melodrama presented on the same programme was also thoroughly enjoyed.

At Lakeside Resort

Community Park, Wellington, usually known as one of the coolest spots of the district when the thermometer hovers around the eighties, was a mecca for a large number of local and visiting sleepers. Stretched out on the lush grass beneath the large trees many Bellevillians enjoyed the cool breezes of Lake Ontario, returning to the city early this morning. Other rural spots had their quota of sweltering city dwellers seeking relief, and at least a brief respite from the slowly rising temperatures.

A Front Street thermometer registered eighty degrees at one o'clock this morning, slowly rising from a seventy-five degree point registered at ten o'clock last night.

Under The Trees

Several city people forsook the comparative comfort of their bedrooms and sought Morpheus beneath trees and bushes on the family lawns.

Summer camps and cottages situated along the shores of the Bay of Quinte were crowded with owners and guests, with the waters of the bay and other swimming spots of the district being a popular meeting place for crowds of bathers who sought coolness in their bathing suits.

Present weather indications point to little or no relief from the present heat wave.

THE WEATHER

Moderate winds; mostly fair and decidedly warm today and Sunday; possibly thundershowers in a few districts.

FRANCE THREATENS TO ABOLISH BORDER CONTROL

Compromise is Sought By British Government On Divergent Attitudes

French Ban on Shipments of Arms Will Continue to Operate

PYRENEES BORDER

French to Take Action of Portuguese Border Not Patrolled

(Copyright, 1937, by The Havas News Agency)

Paris, July 10 (CP-Havas)—The French Government today decided to abolish international non-intervention control at the Franco-Spanish frontier on Tuesday providing the British government does not find a compromise non-intervention formula in the meantime.

Official sources told Havas, however, a ban on shipments of arms, munitions and other products prohibited under the two-nation non-intervention accord would continue to be enforced by Paris after international control officials have been asked to withdraw.

Notification of Committee.

Official notification of the ban on supervision of the Pyrenees frontier by international control agents will be given to the London committee Monday and not Sunday as was first said unless Great Britain succeeds in pulling the non-intervention committee out of the impasse created by divergent Anglo-French and Italo-German viewpoints on changes in non-intervention control, it was declared.

Portuguese Border Patrol.

The decision followed French Ambassador Charles Corbin's warning to the committee in London yesterday that France would refuse to tolerate international control over its border unless similar control were promptly re-established on the Portuguese frontier, Havas declared.

If the French decision is carried out it will create on the Franco-Spanish border a situation identical to that prevailing on the Portuguese border, it was declared.

HEAT WAVES BLOW WITH UNABATED VIGOR

Chicago, July 10 (AP) — Heat waves billowed with unabated vigor over most of the United States today.

The season's most protracted hot spell showed no signs of easing as assault that has already taken at least 114 lives and caused hundreds of prostrations.

Local showers afforded temporary relief to some sections but temperatures soon resumed their climb. A thunder and hail storm gave Denver residents a chance to catch their breath late yesterday. But with a new wave of Texas broke the heat siege there for a time.

Hitler in Bavaria.

(At Berchtesgaden in Bavaria Chancellor Hitler was gathered with key cabinet members to discuss the situation created by yesterday's Conference meeting at London. Nazi sources minimized the importance of the meeting, terming it nothing unusual.)

Hitler's disclosures were expected in view of Ambassador Corbin's declaration in London that the key to France's objections to the ambiguous situation prevailing along Spain's land frontiers was the result of Portugal's suspension of international control.

War Out of Deadlock.

Great Britain was invested yesterday with the task of finding a way out of the deadlock created by the French delegate's objections to the Anglo-French plan for taking over Germany's naval control of Spain and the opposition to Rome-Berlin counter-proposal that belligerent rights be accorded both factions in the Spanish civil war.

It was declared here the French government, while not wishing to see the present deadlock in the London committee, by the same token did not want Corbin's declarations interpreted as pressure on the other governments involved.

JAPANESE TROOPS IN NORTH CHINA OFFICIALS DECLARE

10 Trainloads Leave Mukden And Somas Pass The Great Wall

LARGE GARRISON

China Says Japan Has Broken Promise to Withdraw Troops

Peiping, July 10 (AP) — High Chinese officials declared tonight that Japan has begun moving part of her Manchukuan army toward the north China trouble zone. They said ten trainloads of Japanese troops had left Mukden and two already had passed the great wall at Shanhaikwan.

At Shanhaikwan the trains pass into Chinese territory.

Other Chinese reports said troops of Japan's Manchurian garrison were pouring through all three passes of the great wall into northern Hopei province, above Peiping and Tientsin.

These reports were made public by officials of the Hopei-Chahar political council, highest Chinese authority in north China.

Maintains Large Garrison

(Japan maintains a garrison of between 100,000 and 130,000 men in Manchukuo, her protectorate, known as the Kwantung army. Hitherto she has not been involved in the fighting near Peiping, which has been confined to Japan's North China garrison, totalling about 7000 men.

The Hopei-Chahar Council declared Japanese troops already in this area had moved back to Lwan and Polo bridge—Wanpingshien district, ten miles west of Peiping, and fighting had been resumed.

The Chinese declared the Japanese had broken their promise to withdraw to Lwan-Shanhaikwan and instead have returned their forces there."

No Tight Rope Stunt Allowed at 'Falls'

Niagara Falls, N.Y., July 10 (AP) — Donald Thompson, assistant manager of the Niagara Falls Chamber of Commerce Convention and Visitors Bureau, said today no permit would be issued to Clifford Leroy Walenda, famous tightrope walk across the falls on a tight wire 1,000 feet above the rushing waters of a similar feat performed by him 45 years ago.

"Publicities are unalterningly opposed to foolhardy stunts with the falls or rapids as background, and certainly no special concession would be made in Calvery's case," Mr. Thompson said.

"We have consistently denied permits for such stunts and have done everything possible to discourage anyone performing them."

GOLD AND SILVER TO BE EXCHANGED BY U. S., CHINA

New Accord Will be Means of Strengthening Currencies

ONE-AT-TIME PACT

Agreement is in Line With Silver Purchase Policy of U. S.

Washington, July 10 (AP)—The United States treasury put into operation today a new gold-silver monetary agreement with China.

It provides that China will buy "a substantial amount" of the United States gold hoards, which aggregates $12,300,000,000. The treasury in return will buy more of China's silver.

A statement by Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau and Dr. H. H. Kung, Chinese finance minister, said the accord will supplement an understanding effected in May last year. The United States agreed at that time to buy an undesignated amount of Chinese silver.

The two officials said the new agreement would give China additional gold reserves and a supply of American dollars in exchange for her silver. The gold and dollar exchange, they said, will be used for currency stabilization purposes.

To Strengthen Exchange

Morgenthau said the treasury followed its one-nation-at-a-time policy in drafting the accord. It does not affect the existing British-French-American monetary agreement, he said, except that increased co-operation between the United States and China may be brought to on all foreign exchange negotiations.

Morgenthau said the agreement is in line with the silver purchase program, which requires the treasury to buy silver until it equals one-third of gold stock or until the price reaches the monetary price of $1.29 an ounce.

The steady influx of gold from abroad has kept the treasury from reaching its present $2,000,000,000 ration. Its silver holdings now are only about one-fifth of the gold reserve.

13 Persons Summonsed On Charge of Assaulting Unnamed Toronto Man

Men Are Said to Have Objected to Attentions to Farmer's Wife

SAYS TAR APPLIED

It is Said Man Pleaded Weak Heart And Men Departed

Orangeville, Ont., July 10 (CP)—Authorities today said thirteen persons were summonsed to appear before Magistrate J. C. L. Bull on assault charges as a result of the alleged tarring and feathering of an unnamed Toronto man here Sunday night.

A band of Orangeville district men is accused of the offence. They are said to have objected to attentions paid by the man to a farmer's wife. Those charged are slated to appear July 16.

The woman involved today said both she and her 16-year-old daughter, who accompanied the couple on a picnic, were roughly handled by the men who accosted them as they returned to their car.

The man was stripped and tar applied to his body. When he pleaded a weak heart the men departed.

ONE IS WOUNDED ANOTHER IS DEAD

Orillia, Ont., July 10 (CP)—Geo. S. Bailey, 45, of Coulson, a hamlet near here, was dead today from a gunshot wound through the heart and John Canning, 61, North Orillia farmer, was seriously wounded.

The shooting was caused, according to police and neighbors, by Bailey's resentment at his late wife's leaving Mrs. Canning as guardian of the Bailey children as well as executrix of her will. Bailey was alleged to have wounded Canning and then turned the gun on himself.

The three small Bailey children, Beulah, 10, James, 4, and Elsie, 2 months.

Police found Canning lying shot through the chest in a field near the Canning house and Bailey's body was found between the house and a garage. Canning was rushed to the Soldiers' Memorial Hospital here in critical condition with a punctured lung, but he is expected to recover.

LORD TWEEDSMUIR AT THE STAMPEDE

Today With Lady Tweedsmuir Will Enjoy Chuck-Wagon Dinner

BY GUY E. RHODES

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Calgary, July 10 (CP)—The Governor General, Lady Tweedsmuir and their touring party, visitors to the Calgary stampede for the first time, will sit down today to a chuck-wagon dinner at the exhibition grounds.

Last night they saw the finals of the stampede chuck-wagon races, sitting at the side of the track through dense clouds of dust as the four-horse teams blazed past the finish line followed by their outriders.

Last of the four heats brought most of the vice-regal party to its feet as the two teams thundered past the finish almost neck and neck.

Lord Tweedsmuir left his seat on the bandstand to start the one-mile Indian bareback race and give away the money prizes with every evidence of a similar feat performed by him 45 years ago.

'KING OF ARCTIC' WILL PLAY NOW

Charles D. Brower, Far-North Trader, Will Retire

Barrow, Alaska, July 10 (CP) — Charles D. Brower, far north trader who made and lost several fortunes, rescued scores of shipwrecked persons and aided polar explorations in an exciting career as "King of the Arctic," announced his retirement today at 76 to "spend the rest of my life in play."

After 52 years at this northernmost North American settlement, Brower expressed only one regret.

"Civilization is crowding me out, and there is no further north to go."

After spending a year in the States on pleasure and business in 1933, he remarked that "I don't mind civilization once in a while but the noise and crowds tire me. I want to get back to work for a rest."

He introduced modern firearms to the primitive Eskimos, took an active part in many Polar expeditions, housed and fed persons shipwrecked in the Arctic. He was credited with improving the lot of Eskimos from his half century here.

ATTENDANT DIES AFTER BEATING

Patient Hitherto Believed Harmless Deals Fatal Blows

Edmonton, July 10 (CP)—Besieged about the head by a male patient, Orville Lee Hall, 24, mental attendant in the Alberta Mental Hospital at Ponoka, died here last night.

The attendant was struck several times with a heavy chair and was helped by a patient hitherto known as a harmless case. Dr. E. A. Braithwaite, coroner of Alberta, ordered an inquest.

Hall's death was the second among mental institute attendants within three weeks in northern Alberta.

Charles J. Brooks, 49, on the staff of the Oliver Mental Hospital for nine years, died in an Edmonton hospital June 17th a week after a struggle with a patient in which he suffered a knife-stab in his right hand.

DISPEL ANXIETY BY MAN'S RETURN

River Dragged But Swimmer Left Only Clothes on Bank

Trenton, July 10.—(Special) — Anxiety was felt for the safety of Leonard Promani, R.C.A.F., but the young man turned up hale and hearty after enjoying a swim off the Government dock. It is presumed the young man disrobed near the Squier's coal yard and swam to the Government dock. His clothes were found later by Melvin Curry and he in turn notified the police. Fire Chief Jeff Baker rushed to the scene and the river was dragged until the young man witnessing the proceedings came back and told police, the clothes belonged to him. The finding of the clothes does not necessarily mean conclusively the excitement for a time. Promani continued his swim.

GAS EXPLODES CRUISER BURNS

Boat Hand in Serious Condition From Injuries Received

Toronto, July 10 (CP)—Fred Pollock, 23, burned when fifty gallons of gasoline exploded, destroying the 40-foot power cruiser Arawa, remained in a serious condition today. Less seriously hurt was George Young, 54, who received head lacerations and possible concussion.

Second explosion on the National Yacht Club boats in a week, the blast aboard the Arawa, owned by R. M. Calvert, occurred yesterday as the club's dock. Pollschuk, a paid boathand, was thrown 20 feet into the water as he was fuelling the cruiser for a Thousand Islands cruise. Young was at the gas pump on the dock.

Tuesday night the cabin cruiser Wilonca was shattered by a similar blast and burned to the water's edge in Lake Ontario off Exhibition Park. Four passengers were rescued. The Wilonca was valued at more than $8,000, while the Arawa's loss was estimated at $35,000.

Calvert had left the club a few minutes before the explosion, having given orders to prepare the launches craft. The boat's mate, despite efforts of firefighters.

'Fairways Phantom' Ponders While He Waits for Police

Proceedings Taken to Establish Mystery Man at Los Angeles

HOLD-UP CHARGED

Los Angeles, July 10 (AP)—Flim-Flam's "Phantom of the Fairways," who has never stripped and purposefully pondered "one foolish mistake" today while he waited in a jail cell for New York authorities to serve extradition papers to take him back east for trial as a bandit.

District Attorney Thomas W. MacDonald of Essex County, N.Y., announced there that he would push proceedings to extradite John Montague, called the mystery man of golf, on charges he participated in a roadhouse holdup near Jay, N.Y., in 1930.

The warrant charged Montague, who police said admitted his real name was La Verne Moore, and two other men held up patrons and proprietors of the roadhouse, slugged one, and escaped with $100.

Meekly he posed for photographers, who for the past year have taken his picture but feared for their safety if they shot one. Yet the soft-spoken Montague refused to pose in the past in disguising them. He merely grabbed the golfing paraphernalia and then paid the cameramen for their pains.

Once again stories of the enigmatic Montague flowed forth, some almost unbelievable. Most of them have their locals at the Pasadena Lakeside Golf Club fairyed spot of the movie folk.

George Von Elm, former United States amateur champion, has repeatedly proclaimed Montague the best golfer in the world," with a tremendous drive and uncanny putting ability.

13 Persons Summonsed On Charge of Assaulting Unnamed Toronto Man

Men Are Said to Have Objected to Attentions to Farmer's Wife

SAYS TAR APPLIED

It is Said Man Pleaded Weak Heart And Men Departed

Orangeville, Ont., July 10 (CP)—Authorities today said thirteen persons were summonsed to appear before Magistrate J. C. L. Bull on assault charges as a result of the alleged tarring and feathering of an unnamed Toronto man here Sunday night.

A band of Orangeville district men is accused of the offence. They are said to have objected to attentions paid by the man to a farmer's wife. Those charged are slated to appear July 16.

The woman involved today said both she and her 16-year-old daughter, who accompanied the couple on a picnic, were roughly handled by the men who accosted them as they returned to their car.

The man was stripped and tar applied to his body. When he pleaded a weak heart the men departed.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiesen
Science Service Meteorologist

Sunstroke is another fuel-stroke in fuel caused by the body becoming heated accompanied by a local heating of the brain. In such cases the circulation most likely to cause sunstroke are (1) exposure during hot weather, (2) illness, as then the body can not efficiently regulate its heat, (3) unhealthy condition of the skin, and (4) wearing thick or unsuitable clothing, for then the body is not sufficiently ventilated. To avoid sunstroke wear sun helmets and loose fitting clothing and sun-bonneting food.

FINAL HUNT FOR EARHART PLANNED

Honolulu, July 10 (AP) — The United States navy opened its heartening eight-day search for Amelia Earhart toward a swift finish today by ordering the giant aircraft carrier and 62 planes to equal searching areas previously covered vainly by air and surface craft.

Amid privately expressed opinions the daring aviatrix and her navigator, Frederick J. Noonan, never could be found, officials declared a final hunt by air of nearly 250,000 square miles daily.

Three vessels and three planes already in the search have covered an area estimated at more than 140,000 square miles since the aviatrix vanished near Howland Island July 2 on a flight there from New Guinea.

Rear Admiral O. O. Murfin, directing the hunt from here, said an area of about 250 square miles stretching in every direction from the barren sandspit Miss Earhart hoped to find round the tiny island would be covered before the search is called off.

WIFE NOT YET BACK

Detroit, July 10 (CP)—A deportation warrant for Harry Crocker, recent recipient of the Detroit Exhibition trip to London raised something of a storm hereabouts, has been received from Washington by Dept. Immigration officials here.

John L. Zurbrick, immigration inspector, said he would wait to see if Crocker is prosecuted on the fraud charge before instituting deportation proceedings. Crocker was arrested May 13 by immigration officials who said he entered the United States illegally in 1918.

Mrs. Crocker has not returned from her trip to England and her whereabouts are unknown.

BOUNTIFUL SUPPLY OF RASPBERRIES SEEN ON MARKET

Prevailing Price of Luscious Fruit Two Boxes For 35 Cents

GREEN VEGETABLES

New Potatoes Sell For 35 to 40 Cents a Peck

Continued hot weather with the mercury soaring daily took its toll on the local market this morning as one of the smallest Saturday markets of the current season was in evidence, undoubtedly due to the continued humidity. The influx of new potatoes and a bountiful supply of raspberries featured, however, with new potatoes selling from 35 to 40c the peck while raspberries featured at two boxes for 35c. The quality of both commodities was exceedingly fine, the result of splendid growth.

The green vegetable market and fruit market, on the outside presented a variety of color and attractiveness to the market. All lines of green vegetables proved tempting to the busy housewife and purchaser. Besides the new potatoes, green peas in the pod, carrots, beets, new beets, cabbage, lettuce and radishes all with all the humid and moist freshness lured the potential buyer. Strict basis sold at the rate of two boxes for 35c with green beans bringing the same price. Cucumbers, one of the new lines featured by a few farmers, who found a ready sale for this tasty commodity. Other seasonable vegetables were staple in price, however.

Cherries Offered

Home grown cherries made their initial appearance on the market, their rich luscious color proving attractive to the extent of rapid sales being registered when this rate of 20c per basket was offered. Basket of Raspberries sold at the rate of 20c the berry box, or two boxes for 35c. Other seasonable fruits, such as gooseberries, the strawberry market being on the wane, however, were meeting fairly a slow market, however, being offered at 10c to a box, while gooseberries sold at the same price. Other fruits appeared, selling imported fruits, including bananas which will be held at 5c per dozen.

The intense was the humidity at the inside market that fans were pressed into service by the weary vendors, many of the booths being minimum, however. Prices remaining unchanged with a fair supply, together with a goodly display of farm produce and general home cooking predominating. Butter sold at the rate of 2-pound roll while eggs were steady at 22c the dozen for new laid and 19c for medium. The fowl market saw a display of especially young broilers that were offered anywhere from 40c to 80c the pair according to the size. Veal sold at the rate of from $1.00 each, but for the greater part sold at the rate of 20c to 25c, few vendors ventured to sell cut flowers and floral displays, but the fact soon saw these in demand. The home cooking saw an increased amount of patronage, many housewife elected to purchase her needs in-stead of cooking over a hot stove for the week end.

The market that opened rather slowly this morning became busy and brisk, livened up somewhat as the morning progressed, although the intense heat and humidity was attributed the cause of the general diminishment in the early hours. Prices were average and a profitable market was still in progress at noon.

POLICE BLOTTER

A charge of reckless driving was laid against Frank Simpson, 14 Bay St., Belleville, following a motor collision at the intersection of Queen St. and Bay St. shortly yesterday afternoon, local police revealed today.

Simpson was proceeding southerly on Foster Ave. and when he approached the Queen St. intersection it is alleged he failed to stop at the designated stop street, when the brakes of his machine failed to function, police stated. Simpson's motor car collided with an eastbound car driven by Miss Clara Downey, Hamilton and later crashed over the sidewalk and broke off the right front wheel. No injuries were sustained. Detective Fred Izard reported after investigation.

No arrests were necessary in Belleville of a recent date, as a matter of fact only one arrest was made in the city this week, that being for intoxication. Despite last evening's heavy downpour of rain only two tramping sought sleeping quarters at the police station. Two week-end motorists were apprehended exceeding the speed limit by Traffic Officer Ellis. Charges of speeding will be laid in each incident, police intimated.

FINAL ROUND IS PURE BRILLIANCE

Henry Cotton Shoots 71 to Lead Field in British Open

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Carnoustie, Scotland, July 10 (AP)—Henry Cotton, a man nobody even pretends to know, is ready to take his place alongside Harry Vardon, Walter Hagen and Bobby Jones among golfs immortals.

It has been suspected for several years that Silent Henry belonged in that select circle. He left no doubt about it when he shot a final 71 in the British Open yesterday to win his second British open crown in four years.

Reg. Whitcombe, the man he beat in that closing burst of pure brilliance, said: "That probably was the greatest round of golf ever shot under similar circumstances."

When he won in 1934 with a succession of sub-par rounds Cotton had only two United States stars to beat, Gene Sarazen and Densmore Shute. This time he trimmed the entire American Ryder Cup team.

Cotton overlook Whitcombe's three-stroke lead starting the final round and finished comfortably ahead. The man is another of rolling stones that come and go along every so often. There is no one to bury him today. He scored 190 for the 72-hole play.

Cotton may make close to $20,000 out of the open championship winnings. Charlie Ward added at lunch yesterday it wouldn't be worth more than $5,000 to his brother Reggie, who was leading at that time. Cotton had passed him.

Cotton finished two strokes ahead of Reg. Whitcombe, who took 292 blows.

Completing a great Britain's great day in her own game, third place, 293, went to Charlie Lacey who turned in the leanest 36 hole score going to the United States in 1931 to become one of the country's leading professionals. And in fourth was Charles Whitcombe, another British Ryder Cup squad, with 296.

EXPERIENCED OPTOMETRIST

Rawdon and District

Rawdon.—The funeral of the late Walter W. Dracup was held in Wellman's United Church on Wednesday afternoon with a large attendance of sympathetic friends.

Rev. J. E. Beckel took charge of the service and the choir sang "In the Sweet Bye and Bye." Mrs. John Heagel rendered "The City Four Square."

The pall-bearers were Messrs. Edward Todd, Charles Denham, Alex Johnson, George Heagle, Bert Thompkins and George McGee.

Interment was made in Wellman's cemetery.

Log of Sine School S.S. No. 6 Rawdon.

Before the building of the present stone school, a log building was used. This school faced the west. The seats, which were benches fixed each other and ran lengthwise of the building.

The majority of the settlers were United Empire Loyalists who settled in this section.

In the summer of 1864 A.D. the stone building was erected. One of the masons was John Gay, a member of this section. The money for the building was raised by a levy on the property to the value. There was enough raised the first year to begin the work and the following year it was paid for. The seats were made with cast ends finished off by the carpenter. The attendance averaged forty in summer and sixty in the winter.

The first trustees were Silas Sine, Silas Smith, and David Sine. The first teacher was Joel Forester. He was followed by Robert Smith. The caretaker did the sweeping and the building of fires. He was given the ashes and two cents a fire in payment.

Mrs. Turner Sine has in her possession one of the "first" books used in the Sine school. It contained thirty-five pages and was divided up into lessons. Comparing the Second reader of 1884 with the second book of today several selections are found to be the same.

The school was used for church services as well as for school purposes. The first service was a funeral service for Wm. Badder. When the building was erected, the entrance hall faced the north with doors facing east and west, near the south end. Here there were two circular 'robbies. Between these lobbies was a high desk with three steps leading up to it.

Some years later, about the year 1880, the two south windows were boarded up, the doors stoned up, and the circular partitions were removed. The entrance door for both pupils and teacher was made in the north end of the building.

Under Inspector McIntosh an extra lot on the east side of the school was bought from James Lafferty for a playground. In front of the school a row of willow trees were planted by Miss Emma Vanderwort, a member of the section now living in Chicago. Along the south and east and of the school in earlier days was a fence made of boards while to the north along the road was a picket fence. This has since been changed to a wire fence. The woodshed which formerly stood at the road has been moved back, beside the school. Following Mr. Smith in 1884 in close succession were Andrew Glass, Bedford Wesen, George Wiggins, Robert Broadworth, S. Matthews, M. Mosher, H. J. McKnight (1892 who is now Dr. McKnight residing in Toronto), Miss Dorland, Mr. Chapman, U. Solmes, S. Stiles 1899, Miss Gunter 1900, J. Johnson 1901-02, B. F. Cummings 1902, Misses Breaker 1904-06, Miss Sutherland, Chas. Bailey, Blake Sine, L. McKenzie 1908, Miss Sullivan, A. Dillon, Miss Bateman Mr. Foster, E. Reid, J. Sone, R. Eggleton, F. Eggleton, Blanche Wright 1926-27.

Among those who attended the Sine Settlement School and later entered a profession are Dr. Butler. He later taught at Wellman's Corners after which attended college and graduated in medicine. He then went into partnership with Dr. Parker. He specialized in ear, eye, nose and throat and then, located at Lindsay, Ontario. Messrs. John, George, Frank (Tait) Butler, Mr. Wm. Sine graduated as veterinary surgeons. Dr. Frank Butler practised in Belleville and died short time ago in Campbellford.

In 1926 school supplies were bought by the section for the children. With money raised by children in putting on Christmas entertainments a phonograph was purchased. In 1927 by way of observing Coronation year thirty-two cedar trees have been planted along the west side of the school.

Any further information with regard to the history of Sine School, S. S. No. 6 Rawdon would be very much appreciated by Miss Marion Wright, Harold, Ontario.

A large number of Rawdonians attended the street dance at Marmora on Wednesday evening when the Mountaineers furnished excellent music.

A number from Rawdon attended the ice cream social at Sidney Baptist Church on Wednesday evening. After lunch a good program was given in the church.

OVER 1,000 ENJOY VISIT TO BEACH DURING THE WEEK

During Past Week Construction Centred on Road Grading

TREE PLANTING

Popularity of the new civic bathing beach which began, as yet is far from completed, is evidenced by the fact that during the present week over one thousand residents have been availing of its bathing facilities during the afternoons.

In spite of the fact that relief labor which had been supplied for some time has been withdrawn from the project, work has been carried on with a smaller force continuously. It is expected that a shut down will occur today due to lack of funds on the part of the organization sponsoring the movement.

On Friday one bath or dressing house had been erected on the beach, while today a second one was in course of construction. These sturdy little dressing rooms are to be the first of more expected to be placed on the location when further funds are raised.

During past week construction has centered mainly on road building, levelling and grading. Locations for rock gardens, sites for tree planting and other work which will transform the site has been carried out under the direction of Douglas Rews who has voluntarily accepted the engineering work connected with the layout.

Vastly different in appearance than one year ago, the beach site reflects the work that has been carried on there during the past several months. At the present time a sloping, partly sandy shore which curves in a gentle, sweeping line, awaits further sanding and levelling. First of the tree planting is expected to be carried out as soon as more funds are forthcoming from voluntary subscriptions, or raised through the efforts of the Beaches Association. The beach is adapted particularly for younger swimmers owing to its gradual descent into deeper water from shore, running into the bay for a considerable distance before deeper water is reached.

FRANCE, GERMANY SIGN TRADE PACT

Commercial Treaty Will Be Effective For Two Years

Paris, July 10 (AP)—France and Germany today signed a commercial and financial treaty to be effective for two years.

The agreement was signed at the foreign office by Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos and the German Ambassador, Johannes Graf von Welczeck.

A French Commerce Ministry spokesman said part of the accord already had become effective, with Germany relaxing its exchange restrictions to permit German tourists to bring about $4,622,000 to the Paris Exposition.

WEST MARRIAGE STILL IN NEWS

Mae Did Not Show Up in Court Yesterday on Schedule

Los Angeles, July 10 (AP)—Threat of suit charging him with stealing the love of screen siren Mae West from her Reception husband confronted James Timony, the actress' manager, today.

Avery M. Blount, Los Angeles attorney for Frank Wallace, the "long lost" husband, said he was waiting word from Wallace's New York counsel before pressing allegation of affections action.

Miss West finally admitted Wednesday she married Wallace, song-and-dance man, in Milwaukee back in 1911. She denied Wallace's claim that they lived together four years.

Miss West, scheduled to appear in court yesterday to answer questions about her marriage, did not show up. The court ruled it was all right in view of her admission of the marriage.

Counsel for Wallace, however, declared they would start new deposition proceedings to compel the actress to say whether she had married Frank Wallace or his wife.

The attorney added that Wallace will probably sail for an accounting of community property.

CELESTIAL GAME WILTS IN CRICKET

Father Divine's 'Promised Land' Likes Sit-Down Strike Plant

"Heaven" was too hot yesterday for energetic sports . . . so Father Major Jehovah's "Celestial Citymite" in the 1,000-acre Greenhill "promised land" evolved into an imitation of a sit-down strike.

Worn out from a sleepless, mosquito-slapping night and a day of chanting, singing and stomping, the faithful fell upon the ground and waited wearily in the heat for a boat to take them back down the Hudson to New York City, headquarters of the negro leader's cult.

Divine Walks Out.

Father Divine, however, offered a sharp contrast to his wilted followers. The bald, stocky little Harlem negro, called god by his followers, walked out on his disciples and angels Thursday night for a good sleep in his Chapel Street extension "heaven" in Kingston.

After starting for a few hours yesterday to bear his praises song in swing time, Divine again left the sweltering "promised land" with the assurance, "I'll see you at the boat".

With no boat in sight, the disciples and angels sank into a state of comparative lethargy.

No Score Kept in Cricket.

The "Opening Game" were confined to a session of cricket played by 18 negro natives of the British West Indies.

Brother Delightful Shepherd, who said he left Trinidad 22 years ago and was now 72 years old, explained that the game, which lasted 12 hours had gone only two innings.

"We didn't keep any score," Delightful announced. "The Divine Cricket Club doesn't go in for what you call competition."

ORANGEMEN PREPARE FOR GLORIOUS TWELFTH

Members of the Orange Order throughout Ontario today sounded bugle and fife in preparation for July 12 celebrations to commemorate the victory of William of Orange over King Charles forces at the Battle of the Boyne.

City, town and village will be the scenes of picnics and parades led by present day versions of King William and his white horse. Main celebrations will be staged at Fergus, Chatham, Clapred, Gananoque, Merrickville, Renfrew, Ottawa, Middleboro, Niagara and Niagara Falls.

A huge picnic is slated for Niagara Falls today when the chief speaker will be Sir Richard Squires, Grand Master of the Grand Orange Lodge of British North America, and former Premier of Newfoundland. This gathering was arranged for today so Sir Richard could speak at the July 13 picnic in Toronto when Leopold Macaulay, former Ontario Conservative Cabinet Minister, also will speak.

Lodges from Counties of Wentworth, Lincoln and from Niagara Peninsula will journey to the Falls today aboard train, bus and auto.

MONTREAL WELCOMES TRANSATLANTIC FLYING BOAT AND CREW

After completing its history-making flight across the north Atlantic from Foynes, Ireland, to Botwood, Newfoundland, without incident, the British Imperial Airways' flying boat Caledonia, resumed its flight to cover the 900 odd miles to Montreal and landed in the St. Lawrence river just below the Canadian metropolis. The Caledonia will proceed later to New York. The huge 40-ton machine is pictured above, resting on the St. Lawrence after the landing while its commander, Capt. A. S. Wilcock-Hands is shown satisfying the demands of autograph seekers as a triumphal entry to Montreal's civil reception began.

READY TO CRUSH ANY UPRISING AGAINST PALESTINE SPLIT

An impressive array of British military might, photographed with an old fortress for a background outside Jerusalem. These are some of the men commanded by Lieut.-General John G. Dill, who is ready to clamp martial law upon the Holy Land at the first sign of an outbreak of fighting between Jewish and Arab populations. Such an outbreak is feared as the result of the resentment aroused by the recommendations of the British Royal Commission that Palestine be divided into separate Jewish and Arab sections, which would be divided by a British neutral zone. Neither Arabs nor Jews want such partition.

THE WEATHER

Weather has again become the topic of conversation after about one year's relief from the heat wave which set a recorded high of all time for Belleville and district. Though the weather has been warm here, unusually warm for a summertime, it is considerably short of those hectic days of last July when the mercury went beyond the hundred mark.

Relation of agriculture to the sun's heat is also the theme of conversation and anxiety is expressed in some quarters of the northern world as to the crops. Ontario croops so far look good. In Western Canada not so good is the report. In some parts the crops in Alaask area are so poor that the stations set up for the distribution of hopper poison have been closed as there are no crops, it is reported, to sae.

Human ingenuity in cities was put to the test to find ways and means to reducing the discomfort of homes heated by the continued spell of warmth. Every ancient plan like that of sleep below the wide and starry sky to modern riding about through the night in a motor car to cool off was used.

As usual the waters have taken toll. Water has temptation doubled for man and child at this season—water to drink and water in which to swim. It is the latter use which claims so many lives. Once again the fact stands out glaringly that so few in a large company know how to swim. Many have learned to play in water of safe depth, only to drop their precautions at a time and step beyond depth, to lose there lives or force some one else to risk their rescue and possibly cause the loss of other lives. The other day in Quebec fellow companions of a young man had to stand by and see him sink to his death only eight feet away because no one else in the party could swim. It seems high time that individuals should give some thought to preparing themselves to stand their fellowmen in real stead at a crisis in their lives by equipping themselves so as to be able to save if there is any chance of so doing. Associations have been doing good work in this regard and few if any lives are ever lost at one of these outings but where the people gather from various quarters and are not so generally trained, there is always the possibility of some one getting into danger without the necessary help being at hand.

That pathetic tragedy this week when two children of one home went to their death in water is one to break the hearts of parents everywhere. For water has that power to tempt even little tots—the least prepared for such a terrible danger.

WHAT RACERS THINK

"Foolhardy amateur automobile drivers by thousands are taking chances at high speed on the open roads that skilled professional drivers would not shudder to think about. Several of these racing drivers will not drive on the highways—it's too tough on their nerves, they say." So says the Montreal Gazette, which quotes one racing driver as saying that drivers on the highways have become too familiar with the motorcars on the road and do not think of the capacity of a car for havoc. He also notes the desire to be competitive and says drivers look upon their cars as a new game. He advocates impounding of cars of offenders to prevent the holocausts on the roads. The monetary penalty is laughed at, he says.

Ontario is trying a courtesy campaign. It is to be hoped that it educates the amateur drivers to the seriousness of the occupation which is theirs.

If professional racing drivers are almost afraid of the driving menace on the roads, with how much more care should the amateur see to it that he accepts no false motions about driving and gets into his make-up no false mood or code which will ultimately lead him into trouble. Racing drivers in professional races know what the other drivers will do in a given situation and can depend on them to do what is expected. But the same cannot be said of amateur drivers on the roads. Only 'courtesy' can cure that.

AMELIA EARHART

That Amelia Earhart and her navigator may be saved from the Pacific is the wish of all those who have followed her career. There have been few more dauntless women in history in the realm of outward achievement. Many of course wonder what is the value of all such flights. But time will reveal whatever merit they have. Her last choice was a very hazardous journey and to the average person it does seem that the most daring fliers must sooner or later run into a set of circumstances from which it is difficult to extricate themselves.

If she is safe on some small atoll or island, the question is how long she can survive. Will her fate ever become known? The fate of some fliers has never been known, like that of Redfern believed lost in the jungle.

WORK TRAIN

The Passenger's lordly train
And passes like a streak.
The Speed-freight's also rather vain
And doesn't stop and speak.
The Dead-freight isn't quite so grand,
It's classified fourth-class
But all old-timers wave a hand
To see the Work train pass.

It hasn't any class at all,
It doesn't look for praise;
At everybody's beck and call
It keeps its devious ways.
When blizzards fill the cuts with snow
Or washouts wreck the track,
Away the faithful Work trains go,
Clear up and then come back.

It often happens for a week
The Work train's out of sight,
But 1st and 2nd class don't speak,
They take it as a right.
And isn't this like life today,
When all is done and said?
The "no-class" people pave the way
For plutocrats to tread.

FREQUENTLY WE HAVE TO HAST. EN BACK TO KIPLENG for encouragement when things have a tendency to go screwy, through our own fault or that of others. And so, with Kipling we realize the truth of the dictum that "if you can keep your head while all around you are losing theirs and blaming it on you; if you can trust yourself when all men doubt you, and make allowance for their doubting, too—or being hated don't give way to hating, and yet don't look too good, nor talk too wise . . . If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you. If all men count with you but none too much; if you can fill the unforgiving minute with sixty seconds worth of distance run, yours is the earth and everything that's in it, and —which is more— you'll be a man my son."

"DIRTLESS FARMING" SO CALLED, IS AMONG THE NEWEST HOBBIES OF OUR AMERICAN COUSINS. Hearst Sunday Magazine gives it a full page with illustrations, with the screaming headline:: GROWING BUMPER CROPS WITHOUT ANY SOIL. Tells how with "a few cheap chemicals" vegetables, flowers and even fruits can be raised in water, sand, or sawdust, in small spaces, all the year round, independent of climate and immune from most bugs and blights. One illustration shows a housewife raising tomatoes in a closet picking them when required for the table. An enormous turnip raised in Russia by this method of "dirtless farming" is depicted, also a large and healthy tomato plant growing from a pot of sterile sand saturated with the necessary plant food chemicals, the chemical solution dripping from a jar to the sand in what looks to be an old sewer pipe.

CIVILIZED NATIONS TRAINING THEIR CITIZENS in the use of gas masks to preserve their lives in the next war, which it is taken for granted will be waged with "frightfulness", inflicting death and suffering on as many of the civilian population as possible, is a sad commentary on the progress of civilization—and the frightfulness is expected to be practised by supposedly civilized and cultured nations.

A PROSPECTING EXPEDITION INTO NORTHERN ONTARIO recently reached the spot designated only to find that the "discovery" had been made on a map by a fortune teller in the city. The "discovery" was located in a moose pasture where there was not even an indication of "God's gold." Any more angry party of prospectors when the news was broken to them they had been following the gleam of a fortune teller's lamp would be hard to find.

OTTAWA PARADE

Back Stage in the Dominion Capital with

WILFRID EGGLESTON

The most original reason I remember for a man standing to run for Parliament was provided by Alan Webster Neil, the British Columbia member who shares with Sam Jacobs of Montreal the title of Humorist of the Commons.

Mr. Neill explains that when he was a very young man he was taken one day to see the local member for the District.

"He was having a friendly drink, along with some Indians, I listened to him drunk, and I later listened to him sober, and I decided that, at least, I could do as well as that."

Once he decided to devote his life to public service, Mr. Neill made a pretty good fist of it. He was successful three times against one defeat, in running for the British Columbia Legislature, and then won five successive elections for the House of Commons, 1921 to 1935. When you consider that Mr. Neill is not a 'machine' politician, but has repeatedly run as an Independent Liberal (he styles himself 'Independent' in the Parliamentary Guide but sits with the Liberals) you see what a succesful campaigner he is.

The member for Comox-Alberni says that his unfulfilled ambition in the old days was to have been a criminal lawyer. More recently he had a yearning to be a senator—but both possibilities have disappeared."

Mr. Neill sits with the 'overflow Liberals' to the left of the speaker, in the same section of the Commons as the Conservatives and other Opposition members. There is a curious psychological effect, I am told, about sitting on the opposite side to the Treasury Benches. Even a Liberal member soon becomes partially becomes an opponent, and some ordinary notes of hunger agency against the Tariff and other policies of the government came last session from 'the Bump'.

The 'Bump' one night, had a dinner, and A. W. Neill was invited to speak. In his droll way he began by saying that he had been looking up the word 'rump' in the dictionary, and had discovered that it was that portion of the body that surrounded the spine Which gave all the rebellious left-wing Liberals of the Rump the excuse for a mighty cheer.

Mr. Neill not only tells a good joke himself, but he appreciates those from others. So far from harboring jealously all the wit of Sam Jacobs, the other outstanding humorist of the House, he likes to recall some of Sam's best efforts.

He reminded me, for example, of an incident just before the House dissolved for the 1935 election. The Commons was waiting for the Black Rod to come along and summon members to the Senate for Royal Assent and voices were being lifted in song, among others, they sang "Show Me the Way to Go Home." After finishing Sam Jacobs arose, and said in his dry way: "Would the gentlemen now sing it to the words of 'Show Me the Way to Oome Back,' which I would appreciate more?"

Mr. Neill also remembers with amusement the time when a member had made a speech in faltering French, with which language he was evidently not conversant. The effort, however, was usual, received great applause from the French element in the House.

"When the member had finished, Sam Jacobs got up, and said: 'Very nice, would somebody now translate that into . . .' and of course, we all thought he was going to say 'English', but he added 'French'."

Mr. Neill has no hobbies or unusual outside interests. Politics occupies all his time. His favorite reading is humorous stories of the Wodehouse type.

The member for Comox-Alberni has an unusually choice stock of campaign stories.

One of these concerns an occasion when a pre-election crowd was being tortured by a very boring speaker. The meeting had become dull and dreary to a degree, and had a way of suddenly making his voice a high pitch and suddenly making a dramatic pause.

"In one of these pauses a dog that was lying in the side got up and made a most prodigious yawn, and the dog had the full interest, for it was such a complete epitome of the sentiment of the audience that it ended his usefulness on that occasion."

"On one occasion," recounts Mr. Neill, "I had a joint meeting and, deeming it good policy, I had promised my opponent into leaving his temper, which he did quite obviously, and when he sat down my old chairman reminded him that he still had eleven minutes, he replied: "To Hades with your eleven minutes!"

The meeting then closed on that note, and we proceeded to sing, 'God Save the King'. I cannot sing, but my opponent could and, as he belonged to a party that makes a specialty of their loyalty, he stood to the front of the platform and joined very lustily in the words. When he had finished—in that momentary pause that always occurs, after singing 'God Save the King', before the people began to move away, a little wizened old man, in the front of the audience, put his hand to his ear and said to my opponent, 'Was that 'er King you were singing about Mackenzie King?'"

Another of Mr. Neill's campaign yarns is about a joint meeting of rival candidates, when he disguised as Jones and Smith. Jones could talk, but Smith could not. The latter engaged a lawyer to speak for him. When Jones had been heard, the lawyer spoke at great length. The audience said: "We've heard Jones, we've heard Smith's lawyer, however, continued to talk.

"When Jones came to reply," says Mr. Neill, "he affected not to remember the lawyer's name, but of course he had to allude to him from time to time.

"On the first occasion he referred to him as Mr. Smith's lawyer—on the second occasion, as his self-spoken; and on the third occasion, he apologized for forgetting his name, but he said he was referring to Mr. Smith's Wet Nurse.

"Even the lawyer himself had to laugh, but he took his grip and went home in a long step in the direction of world betterment. That the carrier of the precept in practice is indicated here. Small visitors

In an address given at John Street Presbyterian Church recently Mr. W. G. Mikel, K.C., gave some interesting facts in connection with early Church history in Canada, including the following of local interest: Fifty years ago the Rev. Dr. William McLaren was pastor of John Street church. The elders were Dr. Holden, Mr. Geo. Robertson, Mr. Charles Ketcheson, John G. Campbell, Mr. A. G. Northrup and Mr. John Reid. The pastor and elders have passed to their reward. Services were held then at 11 a.m. and 6.30 p.m. on Sunday, a lecture was given every Wednesday evening and prayer meeting was conducted on Friday evening. There were as many as one Roman Catholic Church, two Anglican and two Presbyterian Churches, but only two Methodist Churches and one Congregational Church. The Congregationalists have gone out of existence. There is the additional Methodist Church, a Baptist Church, a Reformed English Church, the Salvation Army and the Plymouth Brethren. The population of Belleville was then about 9,000; now with the suburbs the population is about 13,000. It seems remarkable that with an additional 4,000 of population it should be seriously considered doing away with one Presbyterian Church. It is said that at no service, either morning or evening, are there over 1500 people at all the Belleville churches and often less. That is about 10 per cent of the population.

July 27th will be Civic Holiday in Belleville.

Popular Ontario Holiday

Summer life in Ontario is centred this year as far as possible around camps like those at Devil's Lake and Devil's Gap near Kenora so popular. Their location, not far from the city yet in unspoiled heavily wooded lake country, gives them undisputed advantages.

The Canadian Pacific Railway's chalet-bungalow camps at Devil's Gap and French River are outstanding examples of this type of holiday resort. Fishing is excellent for "muskies", great northern pike, large and small mouth bass, trout and other game fish. The camps have their own modern facilities, including bungalows, canoeing plants, and electric light plants.

Search for a perfect holiday like this is what makes bungalow camps like those at French River and Devil's Gap near Kenora so popular. Their location, not far from the city yet in unspoiled heavily wooded lake country, gives them undisputed advantages.

MINER SPREADS GOSPEL OF LOVE FOR BIRDS

Jack Miner, Canada's naturalist-philosopher, believes that the education of children toward a love for birds is a long step in the direction of world betterment. That the carrier of this precept in practice is indicated here. Small visitors to Mr. Miner's bird sanctuary at Kingsville, Ont., are helping the naturalist tag young ducklings so that he may identify their migratory habits. And it's obvious that he is having difficulty in holding their attention.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 10—With the drying up of profit-taking and lack of constructive developments, Toronto Stock Exchange traders found little of market interest today.

Junior golds were quiet. O'Brien sold down 20 cents to 6.40 but came back slightly before the close. Hollinger was down a little while Patamour lost 5 cents. Bamfield, Bidgood, Kerr-Addison and Shaw Lake made minor advances among the cheaper gold listings while Central Patricia, Parkhill, Preston East Dome, MacLeod and East Malartic softened narrowly.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, July 10—Stocks encountered more profit selling in today's brief session, but, except in a few instances it was absorbed without any great disturbance.

While fractional losses predominated in exceptionally quiet dealings, there was an assortment of declines of as much as one to two points. Transfers were around 900,000 shares.

There was moderate demand for McIntyre Porcupine. Canadian Pacific eased somewhat. International Nickel was steady. Canadian government 4's sold higher while Dominion funds were quoted at 90.81¼ cents unchanged from the previous close. On the curb, Lake Shores Mines was inactive.

Stocks moved with the pace of the market although the price of heavy selling scrap was given another lift at Pittsburgh.

Optimistic sales reports enabled Chrysler Corp to buck the trend for relatively large turnover at a small advance. Expansion plans for Allis-Chalmers helped this stock. Sloss-Sheffield, Great Northern preferred, Standard Oil of N.J. and Douglas Aircraft also were hesitant.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

One group of securities that is well regarded locally is the "newsprints" and good buying has been noted in these securities for some little time. Since the beginning of the year all the newsprint machines in production have been operated near to capacity. Some idle machines have been put into production, and others are being prepared for operation later in the year. This is expected to take care of the 1937 demand. While various companies expanding their capacity it has been estimated that with all the machines which can be effectively used at present price levels operating at capacity about 4,000,000 tons of newsprint could be produced in 1938, so that no actual shortage is contemplated.

Small Amount of Gold Offering in London.

Cable advices to Financial Service state that gold offerings have declined rather rapidly in London. During the last nine months hoarders of this precious metal have been heavy sellers—not so to-day. Moreover, Russia has sent no gold to London, so far as British trade figures show, for two months. Earlier this year, Russia dumped $150,000,000 in London and the United States bought nearly two-thirds of it. Whether Russia is now holding her new production or whether it is being sold elsewhere in undisclosed ways is a question to which there is yet no real answer.

Gold Production in Ontario.

Gold production from all the mines of Ontario reached approximately $42,000,000 during the first six months of 1937, or nearly $4,000,000 above the record of the preceding year.

FROM EVERY CORNER OF THE WORLD

to the daily newspaper come flashing the engrossing incidents that are at this very moment making today's history. The whole atmosphere of the daily newspaper is comprehensive action—dealing with things of the moment that have just happened, or are about to happen.

When white paper leaves the printing presses in the daily newspaper office, it is no longer some inert material, but an active powerful force reaching the thousands who thirst for its contents.

Practically every Canadian family reads a daily newspaper.

ADVERTISE IN DAILY NEWSPAPERS FOR Action

It is an essential part of daily life and without it all would feel a distinct loss—nothing can take its place.

On the newspaper's pages also are advertisements placed there by thoughtful, energetic and far-seeing merchants and producers. The best traders in Canada—the firms which grow in strength and prestige year after year—know that the daily newspaper is as necessary to them as their raw material. When the fight is hardest—they have often proved this—it pays to strengthen their newspaper lists.

Follow their good example!

Weddings

LONGWELL—McINROY

West Mennington United Church beautifully decorated with a profusion of summer garden flowers, was the scene of a pretty wedding at seven o'clock this morning, when Evelyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter McInroy was united in marriage to Donald MacLaren Longwell, eldest son of Mrs. Longwell and the late Mr. Donald Longwell, Rev. W. Trimian officiated and the wedding music was played by Mrs. Graham MacKay, A.T.C.M. of Odessa, sister of the groom. Mr. Morley Anderson sang "I Love You Truly," during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely gown of white chiffon, in long princess style with cascade of ruffles from the waist to form a slight train effect at the back. A ruffled cape formed the bodice and she wore a tulle veil with a halo of orange blossoms and carried white roses and lily of the valley.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Marjorie McInroy as maid of honour, and Miss Jean Longwell, sister of the groom as bridesmaid. The maid of honour was gowned in blue chiffon with bolero of ribbon trimmed net. She wore a shoulder length veil of pink tulle and carried an arm bouquet of Talisman roses. Bob Burns and Martha Raye in Uproarious Comedy "Mountain Music" Now Playing

Hang onto your hats, folks—here we go again! That irrepressible pair of mad merrymakers, Bazookie' Bob Burns and Martha the ultra-Vivacious, have been swapped from the Bobby-hatch and landed today for a two days' engagement at the Belle Theatre, in their latest chuckle-filled insanity "Mountain Music."

"Mountain Music" is a comedy—filled with music. Bj'b Burns plays a mountain boy with an unfortunate habit of losing his memory whenever he's hit on the head. He only maybe back to normal when splashed with large quantity of water—and knowing Martha Raye, you can imagine what a welcome invitation that is!

Bob meets Martha after he has run away from home to avoid being married off to Terry Walker, with whom his brother, played by John Howard, is in love. Bob has lost his memory, and finds himself in possession of an impressive string of cash, and a driver's license issued to Hamilton Hawkins. He thinks he is loveless, and in—that character, Bob and Martha fall in love.

From that point on, the fun goes completely wild. Every once in a while Bob gets slapped in the face by a pail of water—he recovers his memory, and can't stand the sight of Martha—then she clunks him on top of the head, and, presto! He's once more Romeo to her Juliet.

The police are on the trail of Lovelace, who is wanted for swindling, and they finally catch up with Bob. He manages to convince them that he is no crook, and he and Martha walk out just in time to meet Terry Walker, who has been looking for Bob, whose arrest she heeded back home in the hills to convince a jury that John Howard did not kill him.

The trio—Bob, Martha and Terry—set out to find the feud between Bob's family and Terry's blazing hotter than ever. Things look tough—but our Martha steps in, and by the use of the swiftest comedy routine seen in months, and the biggest and loudest display of mouth-and-lung power ever, brings matters to a happy conclusion. And the two loving couples—Bob and Martha,—and John Howard and Terry Walker—gallop off down the road, warbling "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain."

"Mountain Music" is the swiftest comedy with the most delightful mountain music we've seen in a whale of a long time! Don't miss it!

An excellent array of short subjects is presented in addition to "Mountain Music" and include an original and two detective mystery story reels with thrills and suspense throughout entitled "The Perfect Setup." An entertaining and extremely clever made-up movie parody called "Hollywood Color that pleases everyone, titled "Ain't We Got Fun", also the latest Belle News flashes that take in many world wide happenings that are interesting to witness on the screen, as though you had been present in person when the scenes were taken.

Starts Tuesday

The Belle Theatre will present on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week International Kipling's amazing story of adventure, "Elephant Boy" one of the most thrilling adventure stories ever screened. This story was shot in India by a Canadian. Bob Flaherty, famous for his "Nanook".

POLICE CAPTURE A DARING PAIR

Officers Fire at Two in 'Jungle' After Constable Held-up

Toronto, July 10 (CP)—Mike Zebrouk, 18, Jerseyville, Ont., and John Lynch, 35, awaited arraignment today on charges of shooting at police officers with intent to kill, carrying a concealed revolver and of robbery.

Charges were the sequel to two episodes in the Canadian National Railways yards in East Toronto yesterday. Lynch, accompanied by Zebrouk, is alleged to have held up Constable Alex. Young of the railway police at revolver-point and took his handcuffs. He let Lynch go, however, after saying he had mistaken him for a constable "who beat me up."

Lynn turned in an alarm and city police searched the district, centring upon the pair hiding in long grass in a field near the railway yards. Lynn allegedly opened fire on seeing Detective J. McLaughlin and McLaughlin fired four shots in return, over the heads of the fugitives.

They came out with hands aloft after the exchange of the six shots and after McLaughlin warned "Come out of there or I'll let you have it."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Little Lord Fauntleroy" and "The Princess Comes Across"

Freddie Bartholomew and Dolores Costello Barrymore are co-starred in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which opens at the Capitol as his No. 1 on a revival feature show on Sunday, midnite at 12.05 and Monday and Tuesday.

Hugh Walpole, distinguished novelist, who adapted the story to the screen, has adhered faithfully to the original, which is laid in the England and America of the '30's. The chief departure from tradition is in the appearance of Fauntleroy, for Freddie Bartholomew wears neither the long golden curls nor the plush suit associated with the character.

The story follows the familiar adventures of the little American boy, who became a nobleman and went to England to live in the Dorincourt Castle with his grandfather, the irascible old lord, who misunderstands the child's adored young mother, "Dearest," because his late son had married her against his wishes.

How the little chap's love works a complete transformation in the gruff old fellow is charmingly depicted, and the menace is introduced in the person of a vulgar woman who appears to claim that her son is the unpleasant little brat, is the rightful heir.

After many difficulties, "Little Lord Fauntleroy's" right to the title is properly established, Mother, and the Earl makes the child's happiness complete by bringing "Dearest" to Dorincourt.

Dolores Costello Barrymore returns to the screen as "Dearest"; C. Aubrey Smith is seen as the Earl; Guy Kibbee plays Mr. Hobbs, the grocer; Mickey Rooney is cast as Dick, the bootblack; Henry Stephenson plays the part of lawyer, Havisham; and Jackie Searl is seen as the fatalistic.

"The Princess Comes Across"

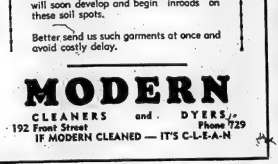
"The Princess Comes Across," first film to reunite the screen sweethearts who made their bow together in "Hands Across the Table," is bright, sparkling entertainment of the romantic comedy order.

Fred MacMurray and Carole Lombard play their new roles with a story kept at high tension by intrigue and a double murder mystery.

The picture, shown at a revival hit No. 2 at the Capitol, presents Miss Lombard as a beautiful American girl who poses as a Swedish princess in order to land a film contract. Aboard a transatlantic liner, on which all the action of the picture takes place, she meets MacMurray, the leader of a swing band.

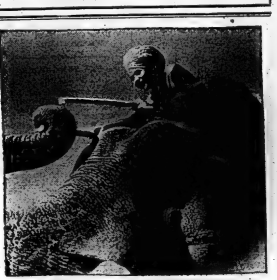
The romance begins immediately after the concertina-playing bandleader and the phony princess bicker on the ship's royal suite. It is interrupted almost at once by the first of two murders.

Five international detectives, en route to New York to attend a convention, are enlisted in a hunt for the criminal. Never for a moment is lacking its fast comedy pace, the story leaps from suspense to romance; from blackmail to concertina serenades; from a ship's party and swing music to drama.



Additional comedy is provided by the wisecracking of Alison Skipworth, a brusque society lady-in-waiting to "Princess Olga," and William Frawley, general manager for MacMurray's band.

Ends Today



Buck Jones as a Mounted Policeman of the North West in "Border Brigands" at the Capitol today only with a short featurette "You Can't Get Away With It" inside working Edgar Hoover's O Men in Killing the rackets. Also latest news events and a comedy comedy. Last complete show at 9.30.

Rovers Return to Winning Ways To Defeat Cobourg, Score 17-9

After Two-Game Loss Rovers Click Nicely to Score 7 Goals in 2nd Frame

CLEAN GAME

Partridge And Tompkins Lead Rovers in Scoring

Trenton, July 10 (Special)—The Flying Rovers returned to early season form last night to hand Cobourg Combines a 17 to 9 setback. A normal sized crowd was on deck to witness the C.O.D.A. fixture staged in the Quinte Street arena and the fact that there was a penalty dash only during the game established that interesting exhibition of lacrosse can be presented without rough tactics on the part of the artists. Belleville opened the scoring two minutes after the match got under way and gathered a three point lead before the visitors came through with a single that brought the session. The Rovers leaned splendidly and most of their registers were netted on fast combination plays.

The "tourist town" squad were greatly handicapped, only having eight men on their line-up—one loaned from Belleville. Logie of the Rovers performed in centre ice while the visitors turned in a sterling exhibition when they scored a goal was on the attack when other counters were chalked up. Boyce taking part in his first Rovers game surprised his backers with his clever and promising work in defence-out front line man. He scored late in the 4th. Lalonde, Baby Belleville centre-forward man who suffered a painful injury in the Tuesday night game, was missed the balls from the side lines.

Partridge Star Scorer

Scoring laurels of the evening went to Stan Partridge and Tompkins of Belleville. The former collected five goals and two assists while Tompkins garnered four goals and one assist. Gould, Smart, Clay, Monaco, Robinson and Burtell were credited with scores, for the Rovers. Hagerman, Henderson and Natalia ran in two points each for Cobourg and Swyed, Boyce and Logie each one. Penalties were few the Cobourg twine was the busiest when Referee Hall's coolness prevented the Rover ball carriers from staking the rubber on many occasions. Goodier scored a fine goal of a match for the winners and looked best in the close in play. Twice he was forced to leave his cage and retrieve the ball from the left hand of a Cobourg player.

Two minutes after the referee started the play, Partridge gave home Belleville's first score. Partridge sank the next one two minutes later and Smart took Partridge's rebound to register the Rovers' third counter. Hagerman for Cobourg tallied on a beautiful pass from Cobourg and his teammate Henderson counted Canalla's assist with only a minute and a half left to go in the initial round. The period ended Cobourg, 3; Belleville, 2.

Cobourg Scores

The second frame opened with Swyed of the Combine knotting the count on a fifteen foot shot. Then Our side broke into the fun again when Honey Tompkins, Partridge and Drake combined to score. The invaders tied the game up again when Henderson went through alone, to outpass Goodier's easily. Clay took a neat pass from Partridge and put the Belleville aggregation the upper hand once again and Tompkins added another to the lead on Gould's assist. Canalla beat Goodier and Boyce playing in his first league game tied the score again for Cobourg as he fell sounded on the ice. Monaco, Cobourg 6; Belleville 6.

Partridge went on a scoring spree in the third canto and ran in three goals unassisted for Belleville in the first three minutes. Day rifled Drake's pass into the twine behind Brown for the Rovers and Robinson counted for Belleville a short time later. Gould took a long pass from Goodier, the Rover net custodian, to score and Tompkins tallied Drake's assist from the side, as time was called. Belleville 13; Cobourg 6. The visitors bolstered their forces in the final quarter and went on a par with the Rovers on the play although outscored by one count. Gould slipped the ball between the Cobourg bars soon after the gamsin commenced. Logie, Canalla and Hagerman scored for the Combine in rapid succession and then the Belleville defence took shaky. Slim Burdess was rewarded, taking Partridge's smooth pass to beat Brown. Partridge and Tompkins got together and chalked up Belleville's sixteenth goal and Tompkins wrote finish to the fifth by scoring Drake's assist. Cobourg 9; Belleville 17. Teams:

Cobourg—Goal, Brown; defence, Swyed, Hagerman; rover, McNeil; centre, Logie; forwards, Canalla; alternate, Hoyce.

Belleville—Goal, Goodier; defence, Smart, Burdes; rover, Partridge; centre, Drake; forwards, Gould, Tompkins; alternates, Day, Houston, Kerr, Robinson Clay, Tabbs. Time—3.

FLAG CONCEDED TO NEWARK BEARS

Have Lead of 18 1-2 Games And Season Only Half Over

(By The Associated Press)

With mighty Newark Bears streaking along in front of the International League Parade with an 18 1-2 game lead at the season's half mark, the rest of the clubs in the loop have practically conceded the Yankee farmhands the pennant and only hope the Bears aren't so hot in the second part of the race.

While the Bears go along at a pace that rarely sees them win more than a game a week, and seven times of late have added that a rut that seldom sees anything of the sensational. The way the Bears are going, they have settled down to be the Bears all along at the Newark baseball park. Buffalo is in second place for the place position, and Syracuse, Toronto, Baltimore and Jersey City slightly in out for the remaining playoff position, with Montreal out of the running entirely.

Though the Bears didn't play yesterday, their lead shot up another half-game as the second place Buffalonians dropped a 5-2 decision. Ertel Crabtree and Jack Juelich belted home runs with a man on in each case to give the Wings their margin and spoil a Rochester pitching celebration for Rabbit Maranville, Montreal Manager, who was pitching his first game of the season.

Syracuse barely managed to stay in front of Toronto in their fourth-place fight when they split a double-header with Jersey City. Good pitching prevailed in both games as Giants won the opener 2-1 and the chiefs copped the nightcap 7 to 0.

Bears' game with the Baltimore Orioles was advanced to a later date and Toronto and Buffalo were not scheduled.

DIMAGGIO STARS

Poles Two Homers, Triple, ouble And Single in Five Trips

By SID FEDER

The much-pummeled pitching fraternity still huddled in storm cellars today, while baseball's war-club swingers shouted for more three-day layoffs and hotter heat waves.

Except for a slim few, notably Luke Hamlin, Jim Turner and Joe Bowman of the National League and Monte Pearson of the American, the shell-shocked pitchers were inquiring timidly if the war was over.

The three-day vacation caused by the all-star game, as well as the heat that mailed pitchers down like so many frying snowballs, made a hitting holiday out of virtually all yesterday's eight games, and put the elbowers generally in the dime-a-dozen class.

Only Lefty Gomez managed to survive the slaughter that saw 36 flingers led to the block in the eight contests, and clouters in both leagues holding the upper hand to such an extent that 128 runs were scored and 203 hits hammered out.

Red Sox Lead Cannonading,

Leading this cannonading was the 13-11 decision the Boston Red Sox pulled out over the Athletics in 13 innings, with the two clubs piling up a total of 36 hits. But for plain and fancy flailing that knocked the ears of pitchers as fast as they served them up, the New York Yankees, Pittsburgh's Pirates and (believe it or not) Brooklyn's do-or-die Dodgers took win, place and show.

Joe DiMaggio served as executioner No. 1 for the Yanks and smashed out a pair of homers, a triple, double and single as murderers' row gauged up on the Washington Senators for a 16-2 victory.

Sharing the spotlight with Deadpan Joe was a free-for-all fist fight in the sixth inning, precipitated by a flurry of punch-tossing on the part of Yankee Jake Powell and Washington Buddy Lewis. The umps broke it up after both clubs had a hand in the festivities.

The Pirates, given effective flinging support by Joe "Pop Fly" Bowman, climbed all over three Cubs' pitchers for a 13-1 win, with Big Poison Paul Waner doing the chief damage.

Cubs Not Hurt By Loss.

This setback, however, didn't cut into the Cubs' fourth National League lead, since the second-place New York Giants were also running into particularly heavy weather. Their feuding partners, the Dodgers, turned in the same single club hit total, banging twenty safe blows all over the lot, and walloped the Giants 15-7.

Probably the "sanest" game of the day was the Boston Bees' 5-0 victory over the Phillies, behind Rookie Jim Turner's five-hit, no-walk pitching. Otherwise the White Sox slugged the Browns 11-7, the Tigers trampled the Cleveland Indians 10-8, and the Cardinals conquered the Reds 8-7, in a battle of homers.

COSGRAVE STABLE FAVORED TO WIN

(By the Canadian Press)

Seven horses are entered today for the featured Stalter Handicap for three-year-olds and up at Fort Erie race track. The Cosgrave stable's entry of Joy Ride and Jack Riches is favored to win over the fast Teddy Haslam and Sabin.

Mindreader spurted to win yesterday's avid A. Boyle Memorial over Chrysanna and Lady Flight. Trainer J. H. Black horse, ridden by J. Osborne, paid nearly six to one.

Crucible set the pace most of the distance but faded at the quarter turn and was replaced by Chrysanna.

The 3,000 crowd saw several good races featured in the seven-race meet. Florescence, with C. Brown up, was the top choice of the day at 13 to 5 in the short fourth. It was the mare's second win of the meet. She finished a length ahead of H. Dirks' Green Ire, in turn a neck in front of Simoneu.

CEMENTMEN WIN OVER PERCIVALS

Score Unearned Run in Last Frame to Win by 1-0

An unearned run in the last inning gave the Point Anne "cementmen" a one to nothing win over the Percival Stores in an abbreviated seven inning Senior Softball tussle at Point Anne last evening, the game first being interrupted by rain and subsequently terminated on account of darkness in the seventh frame. The Cement-men's victory elevated the Point Anne aggregation into within a half a game of the league leading Corbin Locks which leaves considerable bearing and the group leadership hinging on the final outcome of next Friday night's game when the "cementmen" will be the cement-clad chaps in Belleville.

Stan Luffman, former Tweed fireball hurler, hooked up against "Shorty" Shortis, hurling his initial game of the season for the Percivals, with pitching honours being somewhat even throughout. The Percivals touched Luffman for four safeties while Shortis limited the homesters to a like blow but walked two, while Luffman only passed one opposition batter.

Errors Pave Way

Errors paved the way for the downfall of the Percivals, as they booted the ball twice in succession in the final frame to allow a score tallied for an unearned run and victory for the homesters. The Percivals made the best stand in the final frame also, as they left two runners stranded on the sacks as Luffman's team mates gave him superb support in the clutches. Luffman whiffed four, while Shortis struck out two.

Manager Chuck Barriage of the Percivals led all hitters of the game with a brace of safties. Thrasher and Smith getting singles for the losers. Bob Gaulin, with a double, Murray and Meraw with singles were the only members of the home squad to hit safely. The only run of the game was scored without the resemblance of a hit as the two pitchers predominated in a sterling hurlers' battle.

A league of the first inning resulted in the Asimas versus Corbin game at Odessa, Pats being called off after the "lockmakers" had scored four runs in the initial frame. This game will be replayed on Tuesday night.

"BUD" WILKINS IN MOUND DUEL WITH KEN JUBY

Foxboro Nine Win Tidy Struggle From Shannonville by 4-1

Shannonville, July 10. — Base hits were scarce at Shannonville, last night as in an scheduled S. O. League fixture "Bud" Wilkins and Ken Juby hooked up in a tidy pitchers' duel in which Juby's performance slightly overshadowed that of his rival in that he allowed only three safeties as against Wilkins' four, while he struck out eight to his rivals six, but Foxboro came out their hits count as they bunched enough hits in the first to score three runs.

Wilkins' smashing homer with two aboard in the first was the deciding factor of the game and this was Juby's only mistake as for the rest of the game he was on top of every batter.

Letter to the Sports Editor

Manchester, Eng., June 26, 1937

Dear Ken:

I am having a good time and meeting a lot of people but the meeting a lot of people but the thought that I didn't finish even if it was only back row sort of spoils it a little. I sort of feel that I let a lot of people down but the only thing I can say is it was nobody's fault as the things broke could not be helped.

The only lap I got in in the senior race was over 75 mph. from a standing start which was not too bad for the first time but not very much when compared to the best man's time of 82 mph.

I am a hill climb on Sunday over here and it convinced me more than ever that the average rider over here is not quite as good as the average rider in Canada. The star riders here who are riding all the time are really good and are in a class by themselves.

The hill they were climbing on Sunday was about the same as the one the club used out near Madoc only a little higher but no steeper, yet only 3 got up to the top. The others fell off.

I had a letter from Eric Chitty, the dirt track rider, he is a Canadian and rider for West Ham in London and is doing very will. I am going to see him ride and when I do I will write and tell you about the track, etc.

I hope things are going o.k. as regards the race over there, after seeing the crowds they get here and the way they go about things up the course, it seems as if Belleville can make a lot out of the races in it.

The I. O. M. since last summer has put down about 10 miles of new road just for the races, and have resurfaced about 5 miles of the old road. They close the roads at 4.30 a.m. each morning during practice and the people do not mind even though they are awakened at 4.30. The race goes through Douglas, where there are 22,000 people and through Ramsey where there are 5,000 and you can see how much they value having the races there as they do not object to being wakened at 4.30 in the morning.

I think that a team of Canadian riders if they could get good machines could put up a real show. The problem is to get the machines. The course you can see about 15 m.p.h. slower than the ones they use themselves.

The British riders get first choice of machines. The races are run absolutely on the level, there is no question of dirty work or anything like that. I would like to see a team of Canadians come over and clean up on them which maybe will happen someday.

Well goodbye for now and thanks for all your trouble which seems to have done you no good.

George Pepper.

Games next week — Tuesday — Belleville at Norwood. Friday — Oshawa at Belleville (Trenton Arena.)

Ralph "Big, Pockets" McCabe, former Belleville roundsman, turned in a six hit effort versus Cobourg as the Oshawa intermediates went on to win for him 10 to 0 decision. Ken McCabe's third consecutive victory in the Lake Shore loop. It is rumored that the Oshawa baseball moguls may build a junior team around McCabe at this late date, the veteran Duke Dabnby and Walter Knox, former C.O.B.L. juniors, have joined the Motor City intermediate. McCabe is thought highly of in Oshawa and regardless as to whether a junior team is formed around him or not he is still assured of a berth with the present intermediate club. Just another ball player Belleville let slip out of its surroundings without an effort to retain him.

The Point Anne "cementmen" added yet a ripple to their 7-8 win over the Percivals on the home diamond last night. The game proved to be a pitchers' duel with the home team getting their lone tally knocking two successive errors doing the trick. The Sedore-Led aggregation have won two games this week while the league leading CCorbin Locks dropped their lone tussle. Last night's Point Anne victory elevating the "cementmen" into a tie with the one-half a game behind the league leaders who play their return game next Friday night at the Flats. Nuff said.

The Cannifton "Buggers" continue to make a runaway of the South Hastings League, winning 3-0 over Latta last night. It was the "Buggers" ninth consecutive victory without a long being chalked up against them, this season. The Foxboro club are beginning to go places in the loop however, having won their two starts this week and taking a firm hold on the second rung of the league ladder. Incidentally Manager George Sharey's Cannifton club is installed under the C. B. A. A. this week in the intermediate "O" circuit and will doubtlessly make a strong bid for the provincial honors.

The Belleville Rovers snapped a successive two game losing streak when they won their victory over the Cobourg "Combines" last evening. The score was rather even for two periods, but the Rovers' attack in the third afternoon attack in the third stanza to bag seven big goals and assure themselves of a win and a hold on clinch on the second rung of the league ladder. Stan Partridge, of K.C.A.F. hockey fame and "Hunter" Hampshire, ace right winger of the champion Rockmen were the scoring threats of the winning attack, Partridge getting a score five, and Tompkins bagging a quartette. With the beginning of the third period, when the Rovers were leading by a comfortable lacrosse, the game was marked with torrid checking on the part of both teams, but no penalties or major penalties was noted last night, which was appreciated by the patrons who pay their money to see a game rather than their personal contact. Incidentally Billie Hughes, ex'ed Canadian athletic coach, lost in the game and became interested in the welfare of the Rovers. It might be a good idea to include the name Mr. Hughes on the Rovers' board of strategy as advisor, or sample'.

Vic Fleming, veteran Canadian trotting driver, conducted four races at the North Randal track Tuesday, winning nine out of ten possible heats.

Holiday Bride

By ANN DEMAREST

"Then impalpably she scolded herself. Bryan could no longer remain her ideal. He had taken her love and carelessly thrown it away. And even though he was ill, she had to forget him. One could no more go on forever loving a memory.

"The next day it was raw and cold, and the small room was scarcely warm enough to dress in. Jeanne got into her limited wardrobe quickly and decided to go to a small restaurant on the corner for her breakfast. On the way out of the hotel the her landlady handed her an envelope.

"A letter for you," she said indifferently.

Jeanne thrust it into her purse without looking at it and did not think of it again until she was having a cup of coffee. It was from her, mother.

"I am glad my little girl has such a good position," she wrote, "and if trouble comes to you I can send much money but the doctor says that I need three more months and they will be expensive."

Jeanne's eyes filled. Her mother was really ill and that meant Jeanne had to send more and more money. She crushed the letter in her fingers. How could she take care of her mother without a job? Not many men paid a secretary as well as she was paid, and as long as she was interesting as his would be hard to find. Jeanne wondered what he thought of her. If he knew how ill she was he would find that Cully had fired her and that Jeanne didn't like him unexpectedly, prepared to forgive her nephew. He might resent the fact that Cully had been so high-handed but he would never be able to take his secretary's illness so much trouble. For a moment Jeanne toyed with the idea of going never be able to go to the lovely penthouse apartment any more and that Gordon Bartlett would be left with his book, having a strange secretary to help him.

When she turned back to her mother's letter and read the next pages were so startling that Jeanne forgot all about the Bartletts and the trouble before.

Marilyn Freeman was spreading ugly stories around Hilton about how Jeanne was able to support her mother so well!

"I don't know who started these stories," Jeanne's mother wrote, very much distressed, "but Mrs. Neal in New York for a few days and when she came back the neighbors told me what she was saying. Of course I know it isn't true and she must be doing it because she is jealous of you and Mart".

When Jeanne left she was frantic. Instead of going out to look for work she turned downtown. In her room she flung herself on the bed and not even noticing the cold, she lay there and cried. The source of Marilyn's stories was only too plain. At this minute she was telling Marily his suspicions. They must have seen each other when the wealthy Marilyn had been in New York. And Marilyn, only too glad to think ill of Jeanne, had evidently had gone back to Hilton with the gossip. To safeguard himself Jeanne was certain Mart must have let people in Hilton know that he was no longer interested in her, giving the rumors her mother mentioned as the reason for breaking off with Jeanne.

"I don't know which way to turn!" Jeanne cried to herself.

What people in Hilton thought of her mattered little but the worry and unhappy because her mother had to put up with the malicious gossip of her small-town neighbors.

And then she found herself thinking of Lance again. There, perhaps, was a way out. And yet, when she thought of him, the dreadful things that stood out clearly were his car, his well-groomed good looks, and his gay conversation with Bryan. He had been different. In him she had found things that were deeper and more binding.

"Does anyone ever get over first loves?" she asked herself. "Or does it always stay in the background as something better and better, no matter how it ends?"

Jeanne sat up with a start. Some one was standing at her door. When she crossed the room hastily and opened it not the landlady but her chat some one wanted her on the telephone.

"I called you three times," she told Jeanne impatiently.

"I'm sorry!"

Jeanne sped downstairs. Who in the world could be? Perhaps it was Lance. But it was not Lance's voice that answered her. It was Gordon Bartlett.

"I want you to meet me at Aunt Cecile's restaurant, the Main Hotel at three o'clock this afternoon," he said.

"Why, yes," Jeanne said in surprise. "I'll be there at three."

So last night's episode at the Bartletts' was not a closed chapter, she thought, as she hung up the receiver. Mr. Some reason Gordon Bartlett wanted to see her.

Instalment 23

When Jeanne arrived at Aunt Cecile's cute and fashionable Hotel, Gordon Bartlett was there waiting for her. Jeanne felt a little ashamed of the past evening and her mother's letter that morning. Jeanne found it difficult to be at her ease with the old lady and her nephew.

"I'm awfully sorry about last night, Miss MacDonald," Bartlett said after Jeanne took a chair with them by the fireplace.

Jeanne nodded, finding it hard to speak for a moment.

"I hear the whole story, Gordon," his aunt said. "How is it, Miss Jeanne's fault."

"I realize that," he said, smiling at her, and then, drawing his chair closer to Jeanne, he went on: "It's a nothing I can do about it. I'm sorry to say. Even if I took the blame for it, it wouldn't help what happened it might be very unpleasant for you at the moment, though."

"Oh, I couldn't go back, Mr. Bartlett," Jeanne said in a low voice.

He rose abruptly. "I want you to take this, please. It is a gift from Aunt Cecile with the help you have given me since, you became my secretary."

Jeanne looked up at him but she did not take the envelope he held out to her. "No, Mr. Bartlett. You paid me a very good salary. I don't need any more. I'm sorry you've anything because of what happened."

Jeanne's voice broke.

"It will make me very unhappy if you don't accept it," he said, laying the envelope on the arm of Jeanne's chair. "And now I want you to do what you like evening. Aunt Cecile. Good afternoon, Miss MacDonald. You know how sorry I regret all that has happened."

"Of wide," he hadn't done that," Jeanne said to Aunt Cecile after Bartlett left. "None of the trouble was his fault."

"Nonsense, child. You deserve anything he can do for you. He told me he was giving you a check for five hundred dollars, and I agreed that it was only just. You received miserable treatment from Cully and that friend of hers, Norma Carteret."

Jeanne gasped. "Five hundred dollars!"

"It was worth that to him to be rid of Miss Carteret. She won't bother him any more. Did you see his paper this morning?"

Jeanne shook her head.

She clipped had said with that young man she was with. Thorne is his name, I believe."

"Really, with Norma Thorne."

Aunt Cecile nodded with a satisfied air. "It's a good match, hiding from the Mids I was of them. Cully will be better off now that they are out of the way, Aunt Gordon, too. His first marriage was bad enough."

"It does seem to simplify things," Jeanne said.

"And now what are we going to do about you, young lady?" Aunt Cecile said, playfully tapping Jeanne on the knee.

"Oh, I'll manage somehow," Jeanne said with a rueful smile. "And with this check for Mr. Bartlett to help me out I won't have to worry so much about money."

Aunt Cecile was watching her closely. "You're pale, Jeanne, and much thinner. What's been happening to you since I've been in Chicago?"

"I've just been working hard, that's all." Jeanne refused to meet her eyes.

"How is Bryan?" the old lady asked softly.

In spite of herself Jeanne felt quick tears sting her eyes. Carefully she looked away from Aunt Cecile. "I haven't seen him."

"You miss him, I can see that."

He's been ill. I tried to see him but the doctor won't allow him to have visitors."

"Why, you poor child, I'm sorry to hear it. Is he very ill?"

"I don't know. When I called yesterday the desk clerk said he was very ill."

The old lady rose decisively. "I'll call myself and see how he is getting on. I think you have you worrying yourself to skin and bone over him. He's a big man anyway."

Jeanne gave it to her and the old lady walked out into the hall to the telephone. Jeanne could hear only snatches of the conversation and could not tell whether Miss Bartlett had been connected with Bryan's apartment or not. But when Aunt Cecile came back into the room she looked very grave.

"Some one has been deceiving you, Jeanne. When I called, the clerk asked for my name, and he said he was not supposed to give any messages. I told him Bryan was my nephew and I insisted upon knowing how the boy is. When I said that I was a friend he was much better and had gone to a nursing home in Connecticut for a few days to recuperate. He left last night. When I asked why you hadn't been told I couldn't be told where he was, he said he had strict instruction from a Miss Summer not to give out any information."

"That's Sandra " Jeanne cried. "She is the girl you told me about, isn't she?"

Jeanne nodded.

"I thought as much. Mark my words, Jeanne, that girl can't be trusted. I'm positive that Bryan is ill and it doesn't know how she is running things."

"It doesn't matter," Jeanne said miserably. "If he wanted to see me he would, no matter what Sandra says or does."

Aunt Cecile shook her head. "I'm afraid you'll have to bow with it, Jeanne. If you weren't such a stubborn little kitten, you would go to him and clear up this misunderstanding in a minute."

"No, oh no, I couldn't do that. He thinks it's money I want, and that's all there is."

"What made him think that?"

Jeanne hesitated. "Well, you see, he asked me to marry him, and I asked him to wait. We didn't have much money, and I was taking care of mother, and I thought we should save some more before we married."

"Hm. Do you think money is so important to you?"

"I don't know." Jeanne admitted. "I've been thinking of it a good deal times I'm not sure. I always thought love came first but I see now that it doesn't."

"Love is first, and you know it," Aunt Cecile said sharply. "Look at my niece. Money has been the ruination of her. I wish some nice young man would come along and marry her. It would be the making of that person."

"Lance Larkin has been in love with her for years."

Aunt Cecile looked up at Jeanne quickly. "Perhaps he was at one time, but he's not now. Don't be silly. But I think he has gotten pretty much over it, I'll guess-oc. You are the girl he admires."

"He really loves, Cilly, I'm positive that," Jeanne said more naturally.

"Frankly, I wish he did. He might be able to manage her. She needs a strong hand, and Lance is much better than the general run of young men."

Jeanne nodded in agreement. "It was five hundred dollars, and I may work out in time. Now that Lance is seeing less of her she will find out how much he has always meant in her life. She's just been taking him for granted."

"Perhaps Lance he is failing in love with you." Aunt Cecile said thoughtfully. "If you want him, if you take him, Jeanne. You've been having a hard time."

"I suppose so. I like him a lot," she said honestly, "but I don't know that I could. I could never marry him."

"Then who gets you is getting a fine girl. I'm very fond of you and I want to see you happy. And remember, dear, that love has to get in touch with you, see him. Don't let love slip through your fingers just because of foolish pride."

But it wasn't just foolish pride, Jeanne thought later, after she had left Aunt Cecile and went back to her room. Lance had made it obvious that he did not care to see her.

That evening Lance telephoned and later came to take her out to dinner. Jeanne, who had ordered, he leaned toward her, stretching his hand across the table. "You look pale, Jeanne. You can't go on like this."

"Like what, Lance?" she asked, wishing she wouldn't look at her so seriously.

He shook his head impatiently. "You're getting thinner and paler every day. You look much like the same girl who worked for Mr. Conway."

"Things have been difficult lately," she said in a low voice. "I'll be all right, really."

"You won't if you are going to be that careless. Have you been letting your head off over that man," he said quickly.

Jeanne smiled, a tired, forlorn little smile. "I'm not a very good secretary, Lance. I'm afraid I can't admit I'm licked."

"Then you are licked. That's what I'm trying to knock into that pretty little head of yours. There are lots of men in the world, Jeanne."

"Yes," she said slowly. "I know that."

He interrupted her. "For instance, me."

She thought we settled that. Lance. I'm not your sort of girl. I'm not sophisticated. I'm quite unable to wear clothes and the things that the girls you have always known take for granted."

He bent forward and asked quietly, "Would it be hard to get used to them?"

Jeanne smiled in spite of herself. "No, spending money would be a very easy thing to learn. I'm afraid I'm not the person you want," he finished for her.

For a moment she was silent. "I think that must be it," she agreed slowly.

Lance leaned back in the chair and when he lighted his cigarette Jeanne noticed that his hands were trembling.

"Well, perhaps you'll let me take you to dinner once in a while, anyway."

Jeanne sent forward impulsively. "You've been sweet to me, Lance. I'm sorry I've been such a fool about that."

Just being with you occasionally is enough to keep me in New York," he said softly.

Going out with Lance was pleasant, she admitted to herself after he had left her at the door. He was a good-looking, so perfectly dressed, that any girl would feel a thrill of pride in being seen with him.

"But you built up an idea when you were a little girl, Jeanne MacDonald," she told herself, "and you're stubbornly sticking to it. If you had listened to Sandra months ago this wouldn't have happened. You would have encouraged Lance from the beginning."

And Jeanne wondered whether Sandra, who always wanted money, was finding happiness with Bryan, who had so little.

Instalment 23

Bad luck seemed to face Jeanne at every turn. For three long days the snow fell steadily, and it was that either the girl who had applied a few minutes before had been chosen for the job or that it was work that she was not fitted for. And the woman who ran the agency was curt and uninterested not satisfied with the brief explanation Jeanne had given for losing her job at the Bartletts'.

Jeanne trudged wearily to another day of trudging from one office to another seeking vacant jobs. Jeanne could hear. And the weather for days was cold and raw, with flurries of snow. Jeanne's every penny during the holiday shoppers and Jeanne realized with a sharp pang that Christmas was not far off.

Every evening Lance would telephone and Jeanne stupidly refused to see him. It was not fair, she thought, to let Lance take her to dinner when she had so little to offer him in the way of gay conversation. By evening she was too tired, too utterly discouraged to see any one. But Lance said nothing, telephoning.

"Sorry I can't see you, Jeanne," he told her. "It is some comfort just to talk with you, to know that you are all right."

"How is Cilly?" she asked him once.

"I don't know," he answered quietly. "I haven't seen her."

Jeanne was thinking about Lance and Cilly late one afternoon when she dropped into a small tea room where she and Sandra used to have dinner together. There was no one she knew there, wealthy and good-looking, should not have had a perfect life together. There was nothing but unhappiness lay before them if Cilly did not come to her senses. Lance, although he might find another girl, would always remember Cilly as the girl he had first given his heart to.

"I'm getting morbid," thought Jeanne as she entered the tea room and looked about for a table. A cup of tea and some toast will make me feel better."

Jeanne."

It was Sandra calling to her from a small table in the corner of the room. Sandra in a sleek black satin frock with a new black carcasi coat thrown carelessly over her shoulders.

"Hello, Sandra."

Jeanne walked towards the table, forcing a smile on her lips.

"I've got to show her that I don't care," she thought fiercely as she seated herself across the table from Sandra.

Aloud she said, "It's grand seeing you again." Then she turned to give her order to the waitress.

Sandra leaned back in her chair, lighted a cigarette, and watched the smoke casually.

"My dear," she murmured, "I've thought of you so often since I saw you last and I've meant to phone you but the time has slipped away like mad." She paused and then added significantly, "I've heard you know that Bryan is going to South America."

Jeanne smiled, a bright strained smile. "No, I hadn't heard."

"Yes, he's leaving and the office has decided to send him."

"I heard that he's gone to Connecticut."

Sandra looked at her sharply and then nodded. "He'll be back in a couple of days. The doctor thought it would be better for him to leave before he left. It's a nervous illness there."

Jeanne sipped her tea. "I should, n't feel this way," she told herself miserably. "I might have known that Sandra would go to Connecticut to see him."

"Will he be able to stand the long trip south?" she asked, trying to sound indifferent.

Sandra nodded with an important air. "Oh yes. I suppose he's dreamed of having him go without consulting more than one doctor about it. They all agreed that he'd would do wonders for him."

Sandra took out her compact and powdered her nose carefully. "Sorry I can't stay to chat with you but I'm simply rushed to death. I must up the apartment and packing."

Jeanne felt her heart sink. "I'm sorry but she forced herself to say. "You must be busy."

"Yes, there is so much shopping to do."

Sandra slipped into her coat and pulled soft white suede gloves carefully over her fingers.

"How do you like my coat?" she asked.

"It's lovely," Jeanne answered with honest admiration.

"Yes, isn't it?" I wanted Mink,' she told Jeanne with a little laugh, 'but as I told Bryan, this one will do until we can afford Mink.'"

It seemed to Jeanne that Sandra would never leave. It was torture to have to sit there and listen to these casual remarks about Bryan.

"By the way, Jeanne," Sandra said as she rose from the table, "there are some things of yours in my apartment. Drop in any time you're that way and I'll see that they reach the janitor will let you in."

Jeanne nodded and Sandra, with a careless good-bye, swept out of the tea room.

It seemed to Jeanne that she had not gone, that her presence was still there to torture her. The waitress was with the oriental perfume that Sandra used and her cigarette lighter. The tea room was still smouldering in the ash tray.

Bryan was going to South America. Jeanne clenched her hands under the table. And Sandra was going with him. Slowly she took her check from the waitress, paid it, and hurried from the tea room. All the weeks of suffering had not dulled the pain. Her coat open, the front of the cold, she stumbled down the snowy street, unconscious of the people who turned to her room where she could fight this terrible ache that seemed to be engulfing her whole body.

When Jeanne let herself in the front door she heard the insistent ring of the telephone in the hall was ringing.

"You'd better answer it," the landlady called to her from the living room. "Some one's been calling you all the afternoon."

Jeanne lifted the receiver. "Hello," she said trying to make her voice steady.

"Jeanne, this is Aunt Cecile. I've been trying to get hold of you all day."

"I've been out trying to find work," Jeanne said.

"Then you'll be ill if you go around in this weather. There's a taxi waiting for you. I want to talk about, Jeanne. Won't you come over to the hotel this evening?"

Jeanne hesitated. Kind as Aunt Cecile was, Jeanne did not feel like seeing her. She was exhausted by the bath t'd bed was what she needed. but Cilly's Aunt had been kind and expressed sympathy.

"I'll be glad to come," she said.

"Good. I'll send the taxi right up. Until then."

Jeanne scrambled up to the bath room and a quick bath. That gave her an hour to bathe and dress. Hastily she laid out clothes in her room. She was too tired even to wonder why Aunt Cecile wanted to see her. Throwing off her hat and coat, she lay on the bed for a few minutes, resting her head on her arm, closing eyes to shut out the picture of Bryan's white and well-groomed in her black satin frock and handsome fur coat. All that Jeanne had counted on—Bryan's love, happiness, his success in South America—was Sandra's now.

"I'm so glad to see you, child." Aunt Cecile greeted Jeanne when she entered the hotel room together. "But you are looking very tired. Sit down and rest. She was too tired even to wonder why Aunt Cecile's greeting,

Tweed and District

Tweed—Mr. W. A. Donnelly, former O. P. S. agent at Tweed and for the past seven years at Whitby, has been promoted to a similar post at Fort Hope. The move is in the nature of an advancement in his official rank, glad to learn. While in Tweed, Mr. Donnelly was assistant superintendent of the Tweed Church Sunday School. In Whitby he was superintendent of the Sunday School.

Mr. C. McVay has just finished painting his home and it is the finest paint job in town. The colors are Amoroll yellow with orange trim. Situated near the southern entrance to the village near to park, it greatly enhances the appearance of that section of the town and is attracting considerable favourable comment from townsfolk and visitors.

Tweed Milling Company is engaged in making considerable changes and improvements in the plant at Tweed. New machines are being installed for grinding and making grains and an additional storehouse will be erected in a short time.

Word from Kingston General Hospital indicates that Dr. M. O. Dales is beginning to register a marked improvement in his condition. For the past eight weeks he has been confined to the hospital in Belleville and Kingston but it was not until a few days ago that his condition took a turn for the better. He should be able to leave the institution in a few days should continued improvement be shown.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jones, Sr. entertained a number of friends on Wednesday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Crosscliffe who were recently married in Marmora. The young couple were presented with a wicker rocking chair and a lamp by friends from Tweed and district.

Miss Hilda Jones read the following address:

Dear Verna and Ira,—

We, your friends and neighbours, have gathered in your grandfather's home tonight to wish you "Bon Voyage" on the sea of matrimony. We could not allow this great occasion to pass by without rejoicing with you both, and wishing you health, wealth and happiness.

Our association with you, Verna, since childhood have always been of a very pleasant nature, because of your kind, genial and friendly disposition.

We hope to become better acquainted with you, Ira, and that you will feel that these friends of Verna's welcome you among them, and include you, also, in these best wishes.

Kindly accept these gifts, not for their value, but as tangible tokens of our esteem and good will toward you both.

Signed on behalf of the community,

Hilda Jones
Lyman Jones.

Norman Thompson.

Mr. and Mrs. Crosscliffe thanked all their friends for their kindness and presents in such appropriate terms. The evening was spent in dancing, followed by refreshments.

The last rate of Tweed Village will remain at 53 mills, the same rate as last year. Law costs in connection with the County Equalization section had some time ago and the action of the Provincial Government in taking two fifths of the revenue collected in fines, has resulted in a decreased revenue, but it is believed by the councillors that demands for relief will be down considerably during the year.

The following report for the month of June was presented by Constable J. C. Hayes:

Business places not locked 2; Gas pumps not locked 3; Summons served 7; Arrests 8; Warrants executed 2; Letters received 35; Letters written 33; Lotterers picked up 2; Fines imposed, payable to the Village $23.00.

It was decided by the council to instal a number of new water contors in houses where they are not at present in use.

Mr. and Mrs. John Sager have returned from Peterboro to reside in Tweed after an absence of two years. Their many friends are glad to welcome their return.

Mr. W. E. Turnbull is to be one of the speakers at the 100th anniversary of Norton Robinson Orange Lodge on July 12th. Mr. Earl Rowe is W. M. of the above lodge and it is expected that a large number will attend the celebration.

A wedding of great interest locally was solemnized on Wednesday morning at St. Carthage's R. C. church when Mary Marjorie eldest daughter of Mrs. M. J. Quinn and the late Mr. Quinn, was united in marriage to J. Raphael, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Rashotte of Tweed. The ceremony was performed by Very Rev. Jos. Guillmane in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Tracey Quinn, wore a lovely gown of white lace with short train, long-fitted sleeves and cowl neck-line. She wore white satin sandals and carried a prayer book decorated with a shower of lily-of-the-valley.

The bride's sister, Miss Patricia Quinn, as maid of honor, wore turquoise blue taffeta, with matching hat and gloves and carried pink roses and sweet peas. The bridesmaids were four sisters of the bride, Miss Pauline, Miss Cecilia, Miss Dorothy and Miss Norine, and a sister of the groom, Miss Irene Rashotte. All wore dainty gowns of organdie in different shades and carried bouquets of sweet peas and roses.

Mr. Gerald Quinn, Tweed, acted as groomsman, and Mr. Carl Casey, Brampton, and Mr. Anthony Quinn, Tweed, as ushers. The wedding music was played by Sister M. Inez. Mr. J. Edgar Quinn of Peterboro and Mr. Owen Marchen sang during the ceremony and the signing of the register.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride. Mrs. Quinn received in black lace with black hat and wearing a corsage bouquet of roses. Mrs. Rashotte wore navy blue chiffon with white hat and gloves and shoes to match.

After a motor trip to Ottawa and other eastern cities the young couple will reside in Tweed.

JACKS VEHICLE UP THEN TAKES WHEEL

A new racket that is not only most aggravating, but leaves the victim in a rather embarrassing position, is being practiced in this city. It seems sneak thieves in the night approach an automobile that has been parked in some quiet road where, once, since a jack beneath it and removes one of the wheels, stealing the tire, tube and rim.

Thursday evening, Victor Drake, 131 Beverley Street, Kingston, parked his automobile in the Pelle Theatre lot on Princess Street. Some time between ten and eleven o'clock Thursday evening during Mr. Drake's absence, the thieves approached his car, placed a jack beneath the left rear wheels and after hoisting the vehicle with the jack, removed and stole the entire wheel, including the tire, tube and rim. It was a new tire, Mr. Drake informed police, when he reported the theft.

When Mr. Drake returned to his car it was standing on three wheels and the jack was still in position beneath the left rear side of the vehicle.

At least they were good enough to leave the car jacked up so I could mount my spare wheel," sarcastically stated Drake as he unlocked his spare wheel and placed it in position.

This is the third report of this kind received by local police within the last fortnight, the previous two seeing the robbers enter a private garage and remove the tires.

POLICE BLOTTER

While pulling away from the west curb on Front Street, Thursday evening, the right fender of a local automobile caught in the nipple of a city hydrant with the result that the fender of the vehicle was badly damaged. The driver failed to report the mishap, is not by any means the first accident of this nature to be reported to the police, numerous other motorists apparently failing to observe the hydrant on Front Street with costly results. This section of the street has been much more prevalent since the introduction of parallel parking, police revealed, however.

TARZAN'S QUEST

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Tarzan fought his way against the stream of panicky warriors, who were intent only in seeking safety from the wrath of this seemingly supernatural creature. In the ape-man's mind was one maddening thought—"Had the high priest already struck?"

Invisible to Tarzan, Kavandavanda had paused when he perceived the panic. But now, as he saw the mighty figure fighting toward him through the mob, he knew he must delay no longer. If he killed the "witch" the vengeful power of the stranger might be broken.

His dagger swept upward, then down toward poor Jane's heart . . . . But already Tarzan was at the edge of the crowd. From a warrior he seized bow and arrow. Like lightning an arrow flashed across the room. And Kavandavanda pitched backward, the ash through his chest.

Jane looked about her with unbelieving eyes. Then she beheld the author of this miracle. "Tarzan! my Tarzan!" she cried; "Tarzan! my Tarzan!" But her elation was short-lived; for now she saw a Kavuru warrior lift up his spear, to hurl it at her beloved mate!

HOME IMPROVEMENT PLAN — HIP

And How to Improve It

A Series of Articles on Suggested Home Improvements Advisability, Value, Cost, Etc.

Is your home safe?

Every home owner in Canada wants comfort, convenience and beauty in the home. Practically every home owner would be astonished and incredulous if informed that there is an essential of even greater importance which he or his neighbor IS NEGLECTING OR FORGETTING. They are simply taking it for granted.

That essential is SAFETY. Above everything, your home must be safe. One of the great virtues of the Home Improvement Plan is that it can help you to make it so.

The importance and real value of home repairs and improvement has been drawn to the attention of Canadians from almost every angle. The exceptional opportunity to make such repairs and improvements opened up by the Home Improvement Plan, has been stressed. Numerous reasons, and excellent reasons, for seizing this opportunity have been offered.

SAFETY

But until now no great emphasis has been laid on what is certainly one of the most, if not the most, urgent reason for home survey, and if necessary, home repair and improvement: This reason is summarized in the single word "Safety".

DO YOU KNOW?

Never before has the average citizen enjoyed a better opportunity to obtain improvements to his home which will reduce or eliminate fire hazards. Under the terms of the Home Improvement Plan, funds are available to the home owner which can be utilized to make the home safe against one menace which year after year exacts its tremendous toll in human lives and material wealth from this Dominion. You may think that there is little or no possibility of your home catching fire. But do you know?

ELECTRIC HAZARDS

It is well known that a portion of losses from fire may be traced to faulty construction. Obvious faults of design, inadequately protected electric wiring and-kindred mistakes contribute their share to this ghastly annual bonfire. But there is another which should be emphasized. It is the human element. People frequently ask their edectric wiring to carry a higher load of current than it should. If the cord connecting the lamp or radio with the outlet is not long enough, they extend it. They may or may not do it properly. If not, it, as well as the overloaded wiring, is a fire hazard.

GAS HAZARDS

Again, to illustrate, in some kitchens where coal and wood are burned the stove-pipe leads to a fire hazard chimney, perchance balanced uncertainly on a wooden bracket. Or if the fuel for cooking is gas, the pipe joints, and burners in the stove may not have been checked for years. Chimneys may have never been cleaned or cleaned so rarely that they are a source of danger. Your home may be beautiful and comfortable, but is it safe? And, if not, shouldn't it be made so?

INSPECTION A NECESSITY

Where does the Home Improvement Plan come into this picture? Well, in the first place, and on the proven principle that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure", why not have a competent electrical contractor go over your wiring and general installation? Tell him all about the apparatus you use — stove, heaters, lights, iron, toaster, etc. This will enable him to estimate the load you are carrying. If he suggests changes — the Home Improvement Plan stands ready to assist you in making them.

If you burn gas or coal, a similar inspection followed by necessary repairs and improvements, is in order. Your entire heating plant, including the chimney, should be checked over, and Summer is a good time to do it. Faulty chimneys have caused a lot of fires. And remember, if your contractor tells you repairs or improvements should be made, it is no solution to shut your eyes and trust to luck. The real solution, in many cases, is the Home Improvement Plan.

FIREPROOF WITH INSULATION

Insulation is a real help. Homes can be fire-proofed, or partially so at least, by the use of fire-proof insulating materials and shingles. If you look into the matter you will find that many, very many fires start in attics, or in that unfinished wooden loft at the top of the house which no one visits, unless necessity drives them to it. They start, no one knows why often, but a fire in a dry attic means trouble, unless the attic is fire-proofed.

Fire sometimes starts in oily rags, or among piles of papers. A fire-proof storage closet for oil mops and such things is safety equipment. Installation of fire-resisting materials around or over the furnace eliminates another possible source of danger.

CHECK FOR FIRE HAZARDS TODAY

Check your home for fire hazards. Do it today. No truer maxim was ever written than "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." And remember, if you find work which must be done, do it. The Home Improvement Plan can help you.

HEAVY ELECTRIC STORM IN STIRLING DISTRICT

TORRENTIAL RAIN, VIVID LIGHTNING IN STIRLING AREA

Worst Rain in Ten Years And Fields of Grain Flattened

BUILDINGS STRUCK

Barn in West Huntingdon And House on Ridge Road Damaged

Stirling, July 12 (Special)—With people seeking cover from the intense heat at various summer resorts by cool lakes and rivers, taking their Sunday dinner in baskets to cool places for enjoyment on Monday last, an electrical display, the first warning of the coming storm, which was to cost them all to shelter. Shortly after noon, it broke, with the heaviest downpour seen in the district for many years accompanied by heavy winds, thunder and lightning. The worst was to the farmer's prayer cause to leave in its path thousands of dollars worth of damage to what seemed to be a record crop. Grain had never looked as good in thirty years. But with the continued heat of last week, farmers said there must be rain to save it.

Fields Flattened

Sunday's storm came to lay flat fields of standing grain, some of which that had been a source of inspiration to all interested in agriculture were finished as if by a huge steel roller. Limbs were torn from the trees, pavements became mud and roads as the heavy rains washed the soil down from the lawns. The actual amount of rainfall recorded by the rain which raised the waters in Oak Lake over a foot, is hard to estimate. Hydro service was disrupted completely for over two hours as wires and poles were torn down. The emergency crew of the local Department of Hydro were on the necessary repairs. A tree struck by lightning fell across the high tension wires on the sixth concession of Rawdon Township and burst into flame.

Barn is Burned

The home of Lewis Rodgers' on the Ridge Road was seriously damaged as lightning shattered the windows and tore the roof. The Rodgers family narrowly escaped absent at the time. A barn owned by Mr. Harry Thompson of West Huntingdon, was totally burned after being struck by lightning. The building and its contents were revealed on the streets of Stirling by the L.O.L. for the immediate celebration to be held there today were also badly damaged by the storm. All this and the tremendous cost was the damage created by the worst rain storm seen here in years.

GEORGE GERSHWIN COMPOSER, DIES

'Rhapsody in Blue' Lifted Jazz From Tin Pan Alley to Classics

Hollywood, July 12 (AP)— Death, striking swiftly, today claimed the composer of George Gershwin, whose "Rhapsody in Blue" lifted him music from Tin Pan Alley to the level of the classics.

He died up from a $15 a week song plugger to compose scores of film musicals at a reported $250,000 a year. He was a Pulitzer Prize winner.

Putting it another way, Pandro S. Berman, who directed Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in a picture as they danced to Gershwin's songs, said: "He was a superman in his rare ability to link classical music like 'Rhapsody in Blue' with popular music."

Gershwin was ill a week ago Sunday, yesterday of a brain tumor, after a blurred, disjointed illness.

He and Ira Gershwin, his brother, had been busy writing songs for the music for a new motion picture, "Goldwyn Follies". An illness of new days before had been accepted as a nervous breakdown. Saturday he became unconscious from which he did not emerge. The body was to be sent to New York today for funeral services and Hollywood Memorial services will be held here Thursday.

Gershwin was born in Brooklyn. He showed early musical talent in music to at the age of ten and received a meagre education in it. At 16 he wrote his first tune, "When You Want 'Em, Lucille," and there followed the scores of "Girl Crazy" and "While's Scandals.

His best known work, "Rhapsody in Blue" had its premiere in 1923 at Aeolian Hall, with the aid of Paul Whiteman's band. The first audiences of the classic had come to sniff, but when the last note of Gershwin's finished, they rose to cheer. The Blue Rhapsody bridged a gap between jazz and the classics.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Climbing into and out of high thin air: During the summer months many engage in that standard sport of mountain climbing or spend their vacations in the mountains. As one climbs the air gets thinner. Every breath of air taken into the lungs contains less oxygen than at lower altitudes. To compensate for this compensated for by deeper breathing. It takes time to acclimatize one's self to high altitudes. This depends on an increase in lung ventilation, and alteration in the power of the blood to absorb oxygen, and an increase in the percentage of red corpuscles in the blood. It is reported that climbers on Mt. Everest reached 28,000 feet without the use of oxygen apparatus.

MIXED MARRIAGE ISSUE IS RAISED AT DEMONSTRATION

247th Anniversary of Battle of Boyne is Celebrated

BRITISH MIGRATION

County Master at Toronto Says English Language Given Second Place

Toronto, July 13 (CP)—"The canonical law of any church shall never dominate the civil rights and liberties of our people," Hon. Earl Lawson, Conservative member of parliament for York South, declared at the assembly of the Orange Order in Richmond Hill today.

On the 247th anniversary of the battle of the Boyne the order re-affirmed its adherence to the traditions and principles of civil and religious liberty, he said. There were influences at work, however, in this country which sought to impose denominational ideals and restrictions upon the citizens of this country.

Right to Unite in Marriage

"Our law guarantees to certain civic office holders and on the strength of their religious declarations the right to unite a man and a woman in lawful marriage," Mr. Lawson said. "This power of the state was challenged by the church of Rome which asserted the canonical law to be superior to that of the state in that any marriage to which a Roman Catholic was a party could not be legally performed by a Protestant minister, but only by a priest of the Roman Catholic Church."

Annulment Cost.

Despite the ruling by the judicial committee of the privy council that a mixed marriage performed by a Protestant minister was legal under the civil law of Quebec, a Quebec lawyer recently informed him that such a marriage in Quebec but declared that a marriage under similar circumstances was a nullity in Ontario, stated Mr. Lawson.

Dealing with immigration, Mr. Lawson said that in 1936 there were admitted to Canada at least two non-British subjects for every British subject.

"Surely it behooves us to demand from our government at Ottawa that at least in a proportion which the immigrants be admitted to this country," said Mr. Lawson, "and that some studied plan of immigration be adopted to keep this country British and free for the British."

Separate School Tax.

The speaker said the law which the Premier of Ontario had introduced to tax separate schools was another example of encroachment on the rights of the people, Mr. Lawson declared. "Mark what I say," he added, did not mean that the law would be passed.

"You will soon have an opportunity of demanding in a very direct and forceful way your condemnation of the amendment to the assessment act which is before this province," he stated. "No issue is to be considered by the Grand mount to the maintenance of the principles for which we are bound to fight. We are bound to maintain those principles by voting for men who have sacrificed them for political power. You can only preserve them by acting to put legislators there by whom you know will maintain them."

Amid the clash of the two crushing anti-Democratic forces of Fascism and Communism, the British Empire and the United States stand as a bulwark of democratic institution," said Hon. Leopold Macaulay, M.P.P.

Seeking the Distance Record Soviet Fliers Near North Pole

Second Attempt Made to Fly Over Top of World

MAKE GOOD PROGRESS

Moscow, July 12 (AP)—A Soviet airplane piloted by Valery Chkalov today was rapidly approaching the North Pole.

At 2.17 p.m. (8.17 a.m. E.D.T.) the plane reported its position by wireless as 70 degrees North Latitude, about 1,400 miles from the North Pole. It was not expected to reach the Pole until about 34 hours after the take-off which was at 3.22 a.m. (8.22 p.m. Sunday E.D.T.)

Seeking a distance record in the second Soviet attempt to span the top of the world, the pilot, who has yet to overcome a Polar snowstorm and a vast waste of Polar ice.

Brief reports said all was well aboard the plane and indicated it was making excellent speed on the first stages of the flight to North America.

The Soviet air ace Mikhail Gromoff reported he and his two companions passed the latitude of Archangel at 9.10 a.m. (3.10 a.m. E.D.T.) and left the continent of Europe behind at noon (6 a.m. E.D.T.)

Except for small islands the fliers will be out of touch with land for nearly 6 to 36 hours until they for the Canadian mainland and point their red-winged monoplane south.

Hundreds of Orangemen' Walk' in County Demonstration

Cottage Struck by Bolt In Storm at Oak Lake; Occupants Escape Harm

Structure Slightly Damaged as Lightning Tears Way Through

DOOR CASING SPLIT

His ears still ringing from the effects of a vacuum which seemed to exist during the reminders of the afternoon, and mind still slightly blurred from the cracking rapidity with which it happened, James G. Cordes, 11 Keomaz street of this city, told today of how miraculously he and four others of his family escaped destruction from a hurtling lightning bolt which struck his summer cottage at Oak Lake yesterday afternoon during the height of the storm, bounced through one room of the building and finally disappeared after wrecking the sill of the door through which it entered.

Lightning Path Clean.

While trees bowed under the weight of the lashing wind which accompanied the storm, the family had taken refuge within the cottage. Suddenly, in a brief flash of the elements, the inky clouds parted and a big ray of sun streamed into the cottage.

"We were unaware that it had struck so close," declared Mr. Cordes today, "until we saw a blinding flash of light strike a tree immediately outside the cottage. Almost simultaneously we had a vision of the bolt leaping from the tree to the corner of the cottage. It seemed to play around the structure for the briefest of intervals, then jumped to a metal window screen. From here it again followed the wet door to the iron door lock, and seemed to enter the building there.

"We sat rigid, unable to move, so sudden had been the occurrence that we could notice was a deafening crack, the odor of sulphur or cence. There was also a dazzling light.

Door Casing Split.

"It went as swiftly as it came, with a heavy crackling sound we later discovered to have been caused by the splitting of the door casing. Only after it was all over were we suddenly realize just how miraculous we were to escape.

"Our ears were deafened for hours afterward, and the strong smell of sulphur which permeated the cottage seemed to linger all afternoon, while a slight burn was the only injury we suffered," declared Mr. Cordes.

The bolt struck the roof a way from this one, a lightning bolt entered the building through a hole through which it tore to hole. A boy standing near the table escaped shock.

LOCAL LODGES TO VISIT STIRLING

Bedecked in Full Orange Regalia, Members Start For Celebration

Under heavy skies, which during the earlier hours of the morning held a threat of rain, Orangemen of this central district, bedecked in full regalia of the various lodges, tramped in their hundreds to the heat of drum and shrill of fife in Stirling and Campbellford today, two communities officially designated as the central point for the various gatherings.

Hundreds of loyal members of the Order from Belleville, made up the huge assemblies which filled trains and roads to overflowing in both places.

Today's gathering were in direct contrast to the big event held successfully in this city just one month ago, the first demonstration held conducted in the history of this district.

Today, the 247th anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne, is being celebrated.

In Belleville events were more or less overshadowed by the occasionally was the shrill tune of the fife heard in city streets, while the call of the drum was even less noticeable. Only an occasional "Orangemen" march broke the calmness even tenor of the day's business. Instead, the city transformed its car after car was loaded with loyal adherents bound for the northern villages. Throughout the hour, scores of cars decorated with Orange insignia and emblems sped through the city, or halted briefly, enroute from the municipalities further east.

GUNS BLAZE IN C. I. O. ISSUE

One Killed And Five Wounded in Clash of Workers

Massillon, O., July 13 (AP)—Gunfire in a sanguinary encounter between police and strikers increased to four the number of persons who lives taken by violence in John L. Lewis' C.I.O. drive to win recognition from four steel producers of the United States.

One man was shot and killed and five others were wounded in a clash last night at the entrance of Massillon's "new deal" lodge of the Steel Workers Organization Committee for Industrial Organization affiliate.

The dead man was Fingerio Galasso, identified as a native of Mexico and a former Republic mill employee.

Guns blazed intermittently for nearly an hour as uniformed and special city police besieged a two-story frame building in and near which strikers and sympathizers had assembled. The structure is located on the edge of the southern limits of a Republic Steel Corp. plant.

Police said 100 men were in custody today, held in the city and county jails to face possible charges as a result of the outbreak.

ARMED POLICE PATROL BELFAST

Reserves Will Quell Any Disturbance as Orange-men March

Belfast, Northern Ireland, July 13 (AP)—Belfast was patrolled by armored police today as thousands of Orangemen gathered for celebration of the 247th anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne.

Police reserves were mobilized to prevent the Protestant-Catholic clashes which in other years have claimed scores of lives.

The ancient battle, in which King William III, Protestant, defeated the Stuart King James II, established Protestantism supremacy, the official religion of Great Britain and gave Ulstermen religious liberty and independence from the Catholic.

Officials feared any outbreaks, for the battle which took bloodshed, death to nine persons, might inaugurate a period of tension during the state visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to Belfast July 29.

Police were ordered to patrol with the parade route along which Orangemen will march to high points of the Boyne celebration and armored cars cruised through the city to keep order.

SUIT IS ENTERED

Toronto, July 13 (CP)—Suit for $250,000 was instituted against the city of Toronto today by the Joy Oil Co., claiming "meddling and interfering" with the company's attempts to erect gasoline and oil tanks on the waterfront. The company's statement a long dispute and alleges the city had no right to forbid erection of tanks.

NARROW ESCAPES ARE REPORTED IN VIOLENT STORM

Occupants of Boats And Inmates of Cottages Escape Results of 'Blow'

LAKE LEVEL RISES

Roads Flooded, Trees Broken And Washouts of Soil Reported

Breaking with dramatic suddenness and with but the briefest of preliminary warnings, one of the worst storms experienced in this district in years raged over the section late yesterday afternoon causing a trail of destruction and property damage comparable with the worst onslaught yet recorded.

The conservative estimate of places total today of several thousands of dollars of crop and building damage, based on destruction, washouts and culverts as the result of washouts which followed a terrible cloudburst in many localities.

The storm which rolled across the northern Hastings entrance north of Bancroft to the north shore of the Bay of Quinte flattened hundreds of acres of standing grain, uprooted trees in the city and country, halted automobiles on the roads and turned shallow creeks into rushing, turbulent torrents. So heavy did the downpour register that drainage from the Oak Hills area in the city ran in the water level four inches at least.

Miraculous Escape

One summer cottage at Oak Lake was struck by a lightning bolt in the storm which followed the cyclonic wind which reached a velocity widely of sixty miles per hour. Its five occupants miraculously escaped death. A barn owned by Harry Thompson, West Huntingdon, was struck by lightning and destroyed by fire.

STORM DAMAGES FIRE ALARM BELL

Electric Device of Fire Station Out of Commission Time

The city fire alarm bell at No. 1 fire hall was out of commission for a short time during the progress of yesterday's storm, when a bolt of lightning struck one of the city, to the accompaniment of thunder and vivid flashes of lightning, which lit up the city. The bell house was heard to give a sharp ring.

"We thought it was the special hospital bell, but investigation proved otherwise. We tested all bells and found that the fire bell was out of commission, although the actual damage to the apparatus operation," declared city firemen today.

It is believed the lightning made contact with the fire alarm system and carried through until it emerged into the large dual bell, causing clarm at the station house, when the lightning struck. Bells are equipped with an electrical device which is believed to have attracted the lightning. No serious damage was done, although when the lightning struck residents throughout the immediate vicinity heard the interference with their radios and on the conclusion of the storm.

New Two-Point Patrol Plan Formulated by Anthony Eden

Would Put Italo-German Observers Aboard Patrol Vessels

PERMANENT PATROL

Paris, July 12 (CP)—Diplomatic sources today declared British Foreign Secretary Eden outlined a new two-point non-intervention control plan to Sir Eric Phipps, British ambassador to France, on a week-end cruise off Deauville.

The compromise plan to keep men and arms from reaching Spain was said to have been presented for elucidation to the French government.

It would provide for reconstruction of the land and sea cordons around Spain with British and French ships taking over all the naval patrol with Italo-German observers aboard the patrol vessels.

Then a permanent patrol program would be worked out to place neutral observers in all non-Spanish ports and airports likely to be involved in Spanish commerce in arms, men or war supplies or volunteers go to Spain.

When the permanent observers had been established the old naval patrol would be abolished, ending the difficulties that arose when Italy and Germany withdrew.

The committee in London was to be asked to recommend immediate action in the Spanish non-intervention scheme. After tomorrow, unless there is a last-minute change, the scheme will be little more than a series of patches with a series of National decrees that have proved ineffectual in the past.

BODY OF GIRL FOUND IN LAKE

Identified as Viola Guy Drowned About June 28

Rochester, N.Y., July 13 (CP) — Two weeks after she went canoeing along the Lake Ontario shore near Toronto, body of a 16-year-old girl was identified here early today as that of Viola Guy of Long Branch, Ont.

The body, brought to this lake port by the captain of the collier Keyfell, was identified by the girl's father, Samuel Guy, who came here from Toronto.

In company with 16-year-old William Burch, also of Long Branch, Miss Guy went canoeing on Monday, June 28, and, inside of a week, the boat brought the girl's body here, no sign of them was seen, despite a wide search in which thousands took part. Their red canoe was found last week by the boat docked at Dalhousie near St. Catharines, Ont.

SOAKING RAINS COME TOO LATE

Some Sections of West Will Benefit From Heavy Downpour

Calgary, July 12 (CP)—Soaking rains that came too late for wheat in some sections but should benefit feed crops and pastures in wide areas of southern and central Alberta during the week-end.

Heavy extended east from the mountains to Medicine Hat and Red Deer 100 miles south to High River, 40 miles south of Calgary, pending a lay spell of warm weather.

Lethbridge and other points south of High River reported no precipitation but crops in southwestern Alberta are in good condition because of good May and June rains. Wheat in southeastern Alberta is expected to yield the poorest return in years.

No rain was reported elsewhere in the west except over the week-end a hailstorm experienced heat with Regina high at 99 degrees.

City and District News

LITTLE DAMAGE FROM STORM IN CITY

Outside of a litter of tree branches, which were being cleared from the streets today by public works employees, no damage in the city property was reported as the aftermath of Sunday's storm. In the lower section of the city three or four large trees were partly uprooted by the heavy wind and in several instances store signs through the boulevard section were refastened after being found in a shaky condition.

LARGE FLAG POLE AT CAMP TOPPLES

Toppling over at the height of the windstorm which swept the city late Sunday afternoon the large flag pole at the city tourist camp fell directly across the lawn of the camp, fortunately missing buildings and one or two parked cars in the camp in its fall. Employees of the Department of Public Works were engaged in replacing the mast today.

MARKING BUOYS IN QUINTE BAY UNHURT

Marking buoys and other harbor equipment left through the storm without damage, it was revealed by a check up made today by Harbormaster, Jos. Waddell. Only a report of a few boats capsizing at their buoys, smaller craft which escaped damage, were entered in the harbor log today, the last being a light yacht the property of Glen Allan shipped over 2,000 cases and other smaller freight for Montreal.

BIG BAY FAVORITE SPOT FOR ANGLERS

Following a period of scanty luck, fishermen have landed and cast for bass over the week end showed success for their work, it is said since the season opened in the Bay of Quinte. While catches were not heavy, many of the anglers report a catch of small and large-mouth black bass, others exhibited by returning parties on Sunday. Big Bay lately has become the favorite rendezvous for fishermen.

WALTER MARSHALL IS BITTEN BY TURTLE

When nine-year-old Walter Marshall of this city gave a snapping snapping turtle lying in the sun in the future he will probably adopt a handle of pollen. The young man's his lesson on Sunday afternoon at the same time almost it was captured forefinger to which the reptile clamped with vise-like grip when he disturbed sleep of the railway tracks near the Bay Bridge Road.

Boy retaliated by prying the steely jaws of the-turtle from the finger after he had severed the flesh, almost to the bone.

ABSENCE OF GULLS IS ACCOUNTED FOR

For the first time in many years waterfront observers this summer have noted the almost complete disappearance of gulls from Bay of Quinte. Where flocking hundreds have been accustomed in past years during the warmer months, now only a scattered few are noted.

The reason points out one fisherman, is that counting numbers of shad have been washed up on the shores of the lake this summer, and the gulls flocking to feast for past weeks have taken up residence along the lake.

POLICE COURT

One of the shortest sessions of local police court in many months was seen in Magistrate H. J. Butler's local court today, the entire proceedings being concluded in the short space of a few minutes.

Facing a charge of intoxication assault, James McNamara, Tyendinaga, stepped from the witness box and was granted an enlargement for one week. "We're not all of our witnesses here for the prosecution," explained Provincial Constable E. Smith. The accused man's request was permitted, however.

Although his name was called thrice in and out of court, Frank Simpson, Belleville, failed to answer to his name. The man is charged with reckless driving and was alleged to "put on his dull," explained Chief Kidd as he asked for a bench warrant for delinquent's arrest.

An inebriated man who had his failings but claimed he was in his own residence, when apprehended by police. "If the accused man did his drinking in his own residence, we cannot charge him with consuming in a place other than his residence," explained His Worship as he dismissed the charge.

"Every time I get drinking intentions, young man, or you are heading for trouble, I'm afraid," continued His Worship in warning.

WEST HUNTINGDON BARN IS BURNED

Struck by Lightning at Height of Sunday's Storm

West Huntingdon, July 12 (Special)—A barn owned by Harry Thompson, West Huntingdon, was destroyed by fire after being struck by lightning, Sunday afternoon, in one of the most sensational storms that has visited that district in some years. The storm was accompanied by torrential rain and crops were damaged. Many trees were uprooted in the orchard of William Hammond, one being carried a distance of 200 feet. So heavy was rain, that little gullies were made in the fields,—but the farmers generally are not complaining for the rain was much needed.

The Thompson barn was struck about three fifteen and was soon enveloped in flames. The hay crop had been placed in the barn and was destroyed along with a number of hens. Other livestock were out on the pasture when the storm broke. The loss is partially covered by insurance. A lawn fence at the home of Arthur Wilson was struck and grass was burned.

POLICE BLOTTER

"Except for the storm, everything was quiet and orderly in this department," stated local police officials regarding the maintaining of law and order in the city over the week end. One arrest was necessary, when a local resident, who imbibed freely but apparently not well was picked up on a charge of intoxication. The arrest came the second last week, both of the same nature and are also arrests recently in eight days.

Frank Cannon, Mountain View road, reported to police authorities the loss of a licence plate number, the returning home from the northern part of the county yesterday. Mr. Cannon has the front license, light of his car. It was Ontario 3-J-822, he said.

Only three patients availed themselves of the sleeping facilities at the police station over the week end, one on Saturday and two last night. "Traffic was slowed down yesterday and accidents at the minimum," stated Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Irvine today as he reported all clear in his department. The close of the quietest week end in the annals of local police history in some time.

ORANGE PARADE TO S. A. CITADEL HELD ON SUNDAY

Adjutant Alderman Gives Inspiring Message on Christ And Church

TRIBUTE TO ORDER

Members of the Orange Association, kindred orders and the L.O.B.A. held their July church parade in association with the celebration of the Battle of the Boyne, when they paraded in large numbers to the Salvation Army Citadel, Pinnacle Street Sunday morning.

The parade was under county auspices in charge of County Master Eric Denyes. Other county officers present included W. J. Hall, County Secretary, and O. F. Reed, County Treasurer and Grand Treasurer of the Grand Black Chapter of Ontario East. Among the prominent Orangemen in the parade were noticed, Past Grand Master George A. Reid and H. B. Fetterly of the Grand Lodge of Ontario East.

S. A. Band Heads Parade

The Salvation Army band headed the parade and played during the services in the citadel. Miss Dorothy Mitchell presided at the piano during the service of worship.

Misses Dorothy, Marjorie and Ruth Alderman daughters of Adjutant and Mrs. Alderman, sang a trio and also male choristers sang a number. Singing by the men and women in the congregation was a feature of the service, with that vibrant spirit which always marks an Army service of song.

Adjutant Alderman brought an inspiring message to the visiting brethren and the women who are members of the L.O.B.A. He first welcomed them with a typical "Army Welcome" and paid reference to the protection and support which the Orange order has given the Army in the early days. "We do not forget this," the officer said. He said that he realized that there is a spirit of doubt abroad and the adjutant gave an inspired appreciation of the New and Old Testaments, comprising the Bible on which the Orange Order and hundred societies place their inspiration.

Adjutant Alderman's Message

Adjutant Alderman spoke from 2 Corinthians, 15:4, saying that St. Paul the greatest soldier of Christ had been equipped for his service by thorough knowledge of the Scriptures as the Captain of the Leader of the Gentile Church. Paul emphasized the pre-eminence and pre-existence of Christ.

The officer traced through Scripture references to Jesus Christ as a rock to show the various viewpoints from which He can be regarded as the Saviour of the world. He was the rock in the weary land, a refuge in the time of storm and trouble. He spoke at rest in the weary. Then again the rock symbolizes the spirit of holiness, the mystical Christ. The Church of Christ. "If this world is to enjoy peace," the officer said, "or any sense of security is to come, it must come through the church, the mystical Christ.

"It is necessary to retain the faith in Christ which alone can save the world," the officer said, "or any civilization will perish."

Ada Blessing on Order

"May God especially bless the Order you represent," he said in closing, "May God save the Church from error."

At the close of the services the National Anthem was sung to band accompaniment.

The Rev. A. L. Green, veteran of scores of Orange walks, and the holder of many offices in the order, among them the Grand Chaplain, which he still holds despite his great age, offered the prayers and read the lessons of the day. He was especially with the officer in connection throughout the service.

NARROW ESCAPES

On the farm of Roscoe Vanderwater, Chatterton, acres of one of the finest stands of corn in the years lie today steam-roller-flattened by the high, pelting wind and rain. Other farms through this section report the same damage, much of it reported to be permanent, though in some cases it is expected that the grain will rise again.

Small Boats Overturned

In Belleville gutters ran torrents deep with water as the result of the heavy downpour while business men strung wildly in the leaning wind. On the Bay of Quinte narrow escapes from drowning were many, fishermen and others caught unprepared and without warning, scudded for Belleville harbor and docks. In one instance the canvas was completely ripped from a sailing punt, the boat itself tossed helplessly on the white-capped waves as it was left to its fateful Other smaller boats were overturned at their moorings as the storm struck, make shore in perilous fashion. Foster Gunsolus and George Weymark narrowly escaped drowning when their sailing craft capsized off Peach Point, they were rescued with difficulty by nearby boats, however when fought high seas to their aid.

Prince Edward Co. Missed

Presaged by an sudden gloom and darkening of the skies, brazy with reflected heat, shortly after 5 o'clock in the afternoon, shifted to the north, and again to northeast quarters in full fury was blown over the Bay of Quinte. Through Prince Edward on Long Island and blowing hundreds along the lake shore from the city knew of the midnight storm, according by the rumble of thunder and the blinding flashes of lightning that came as the after'ath of a full week of record breaking heat.

Telephoned reports from rural districts today indicate that the rainfall reached unbelievable proportions in many sections, fall reported to be the heaviest in Mass. Along the highways dozens of cars were halted when driven by motorists as the heavy rain drenched through the downpour, and the pelting rain which completely wetted the ignition systems of their motors.

Almost Pitch Dark

"It was so bad I couldn't see the automobile ahead of the car," reported James Waddell of this city today. "I thought I was all right and still on a road just north of Madoc while the rain was at its height.

Emergency crews of the Hydro Electric Commission and of the Bell Telephone Company stood by readiness at the various stations or worked all morning repairing the damage to systems. In many cases rural lines lay dead and silent for some time forward. Falling trees across rural lines added their quota to the confusion. Flying trees limbs twisted and torn from the parent tree became deadly missiles.

Roads Cut In Gets

Not least of the damage occurred in new gravel roads, sudden windo tore at the top soil lifting inches of the powdery surface into the air and bearing it aloft in a typical dust storm. Concentrated downpours caused devastating furr and force created miniature destructive cyclones which cut wide swaths in grain fields which today appeared as if cut with giant scythes.

Some Damage Permanent

Mr. Jos. Wilson, agricultural representative at Stirling today stated that the most damage was caused to the early grain, the oats, corn and barley which were flattened by the wind and the weight of the heavy rains which fell in the onslaught of the storm. Some of this grain will rise again but much is damaged beyond the ability of nature to repair and will not rise.

From the same section of the country it was stated that there were a number of washouts on hills where there were growing crops. Grains, wheat, rye and oats were laid level with the ground.

The water level at the Oak Lake according to a gauge reading taken by Mr. C. I. White, near his cottage showed after the wind subsided that this level had gone up four inches from rainfall and with the water which had run into the lake from the shores up to the time of reading.

Other estimates of the amount of water entering the lake as falling rain and as water running in off the banks are higher.

In the vicinity of Camilton and Cartwright the loss is reported though a little grain was levelled with the wind. This, it is expected, will rise.

Without Casualties

During the height of yesterday's windstorm, that preceded yesterday's electric storm, that broke over this section of the province, two local lads, Frank Hopkins and George Weymark of this city, narrowly escaped a fatality when their sailing craft capsized before a heavy "twister" that raged down the Bay of Quinte. The two were over an hour campers in the vicinity of Peach Point battled the raging torrents in motor boat and punts before they finally rescued the pair. The craft, reported to be the property of young Gonsolus, was sailing off Peach Point when the two of a crew, when a squall struck suddenly followed by a "twister" that lifted the craft from the water and sent buried its occupants into the raging seas. The craft turned over but the crew being expert swimmers managed to stick with their capsized boat but were fast being swept out into the bay in a torrent of rain and wind.

Put Out to Rescue

William Cook, Harley Wray and Bill Holway, all of Belleville and campers at Point Anne, immediately recognized the danger in which the two boys were in and put out in boats to the rescue. With the capsized craft gaining momentum in the raging torrents and with white-caps being prevalent the would-be rescuers encountered difficulty, but boats took in water with every wave.

After an hour's battle with the capsized craft it was finally brought to the shore at the summer resort of Massassaga Point, where the campers made their way through high into the bay to finally beach the craft. All concerned were practically exhausted before reaching their task, however. Kindly campers assisted the boys and rescuers in the cold and soaked sailors, who were suffering from shock of a fire at Ernie Finkle's camp.

"Twister" Is Described

The "twister" that struck with terrific force in the bay, was one of the most raging blows, when it struck Six Bay of Quinte in some years, according to veteran campers along the shore. The "twister" described as a funnel shaped affair scrog land, took the tops off trees, uprooted large and small trees in its path. The trees which were returned home by motor car, reported that the "twister" was one of the most hectic and exciting experiences they had," stated one of the rescuers today.

MARKET COMMENT

"A slight slackening has been noticeable in the rate of activity of Canadian business," says Canadian Bank of Commerce in its regular Department, entitled, "How's Business?" "While the let-down has been somewhat greater than seasonal, it has all the earmarks of being merely an interruption in the major forward movement which started four years ago. Fundamentally, the present phase gives the appearance of being a corrective reaction to the rather hectic upbuilding of commodities which unduly stimulated many lines of endeavour earlier this year.

"Soaring prices for basic commodities, induced by a high speculative tempo, tended to increase production of many materials. At the same time, manufacturers and retailers, fearful of being caught short and newsprint continue in increasing demand, lumber is now moving out of the country at a faster rate.... As Canada has been able to replace exports to practically the 1929 level the next phase may be characterized by sharp gains in imports and a corresponding increase in internal business activity."

O'Brien—104h Level Shows Good Lengths of High Grade

Most recent reports from O'Brien state that drifting on the 104h level in Rouyn-Merger vein has been carried a distance of 70 feet with the last 234 feet in highgrade material. Short sections of bonanza material have been encountered in the drift, but the average is stated nor as rich as that encountered on the levels above.

This was, however, picked up almost 100 feet east of the point where the downward projection of the highgrade shoot indicated it would be found. The last hundred feet have been under the highgrade shoot. Lateral work on the other new levels down to 1500 feet has shown structure typical of that on upper levels. Insufficient work has been done, however, on the lower levels to indicate the high-grade possibilities on these levels.

Nickel is Obliged to Step Up Capacity of Plant Once More

While having been unable to relief reactionary forces at play in the stock market as a whole, International Nickel capital shares nevertheless have proved more satisfactory performers during recent month than the average of the industrial equity. The decline in this instant was only 25 per cent at its peak, since the bulk of the others dropped 38%. The reason of such an excellent display is not hard to find. An incident recently remarked to Financial Service that International Nickel of Canada was operating at full capacity and that it would be necessary to spend $2,500,000 at the Levack mine in order to produce more nickel. The management is now planning increased production if the same could be financed. Therefore, the reader can take it for granted that the farsighted President, Robert Stanley feels reasonably certain that the additional output is required and that sales will be forthcoming to keep abreast of the ever increasing demand for nickel.

Against Materialistic

"On this day, then, we do well to turn our thoughts away from materialistic conceptions of Government as exemplified by Fascism and Communism and reaffirm our unshakeable devotion to British ideals and institutions. By strengthening these British institutions we help to strengthen those world forces which make for a free and a better life for the souls of men.

"As Orangemen, we stand for political and religious liberty, freedom of press, freedom of association, and freedom of worship, under the British flag. We are not alone in our advocacy of these principles, but we do well to remember that the Orange organization is founded on these basic principles which are so important to national and world progress to-day as ever before in the history of man. This British freedom, as Thompson puts it, 'has broadened down from precedent to precedent.' We today are busy applying it to a complex modern society. We renew our loyalty to the throne, that symbol of unity of British people which stands like a rock in the sea of disunion and disintegration being experienced by European countries.

Tax Issue

"In Ontario, we have had acute controversy over the amendment to the Assessment Act passed in 1936 by the Hepburn Government. Even the Separate School supporters had to admit the effect of section 33 (3) is that it was to compel Public School supporters to contribute to Separate Schools through corporations in which they had shares. The Act was unbalanced and unwise; for the first time in the history of Ontario it deprived from the principle of choice on which our school taxation is based and compelled Public School supporters to pay for Separate Schools.

MRS. E. DUESBERRY 83 YEARS OLD

Oldest resident of Foster Ward. Mrs. Elizabeth Duesberry of 61 South Church Street, was today celebrating her birthday and birthday and the "glorious Twelfth" with a quiet day with her family and friends at Massassaga Park.

A staunch and loyal supporter of the Orange Order nearly all her life, Mrs. Duesberry, one of the city's best known personalities, this year on one of the few occasions has been unable to attend one of the official scheduled celebrations.

It had been originally planned to attend the Campbellford "walk" according to friends, but owing to the distance and the warmth of the weather, the journey by motorcar was decided upon instead.

Exceptionally well and hearty in spite of her advancing years, Mrs. Duesberry smiled at any suggestion that age had slowed her up and her accustomed activities.

"I feel as fine and as fit as I ever did," she told Ward residents today who offered their best wishes and hopes for many more useful years to come.

DISQUIET ON THE EASTERN FRONT

The serious clash between Chinese and Japanese troops on the outskirts of Peiping calls attention to the extraordinary situation that makes possible Japanese army manoeuvres in the capital of North China" says the New York Times. "The Japanese garrison in Peiping dates from the Boxer uprising in 1901, when China signed the protocol giving the principal foreign Powers the right to maintain a military guard to protect the route from the ancient capital to the sea. By the subsequent Hopei-Chahar agreement with the quasi-autonomous Provincial Government, the Japanese have an army headquarters at Tientsin, and in the past year, while the influence of the Nanking Government has been steadily reduced in this region, the Chinese claim that the Japanese have increased their forces to 10,000 men. A force of this size on Chinese territory is bound to add to a tension growing so acute in recent months that developments in North China strike many observers as alarmingly similar to those in Manchuria prior to the Mukden incident in 1931. But it is not a force sufficient to wage war. The Japanese troops in North China are very far from home, after all, and the concentration around Peiping of the army of General Sun Cheh-Yuan indicates that the Chinese were prepared for the present outbreak. Coming so soon after the Amur River episode, however, the incident raises once more the question of the intentions of the military authorities in Japan. After testing out Soviet readiness to fight, do they feel more secure in pushing their policy of penetration in North China?"

CUTTING IT SHORT

While there is much talk of longevity and the ages of patriarchs, and the lengths of long marriages are always hailed with a great deal of interest by the public, some persons by their actions convey the impression that they are not trying to live long. A traffic policeman in Louisville, who has been pondering over this type of persons so many of whom he sees day in and day out, has submitted the following set of rules, which he says are complete guarantee that one will not live to be old. Here is how he says these who want to ward off old age act:

Walking against the lights.
Starting on the amber light.
Waiting on th estreet instead of on the sidewalk.
Standing on the street talking.
Reading a newspaper while crossing the street.
Walking with head down instead of erect and alert.
Going across the street at a snail's pace.
Jay-walking across the street.
Crossing behind a street car or an automobile.

When leaving a street car, starting for the curb on the red instead of waiting in the safety zone for the green light.

TYPICAL JULY 12TH TEMPERATURE

Orangemen always expect warm weather and this year the celebration of the Twelfth lived up to record of warmth. This year the celebration was marked in the midst of a season of intense warmth, almost the equal of that of last year when all available records were broken.

Today's gatherings throughout the countryside gave indications early today of continuance of a refreshing breeze, accompanying the torrid heat. Sunday's rainstorm brought moderation of temperature which the marchers of today appreciated.

AFTER 18 YEARS

It is a far cry back to the days of Brown and Alcock, who on June 14th, 1919 flew from St. John's N.ewfoundland, to land sixteen hours later at Clifden, Ireland. That was eighteen years ago and it was the most intrepid of flights, as their plane was the first to fly over the ocean. The Vickers Vimy the fliers used was a small machine, with a speed of eighty miles an hour increased to 120 by favorable winds. In those days machines were not equipped as the modern airplanes.

So great was their achievement in the minds of the people of that day that His Majesty King George Fifth knighted both of them. In so doing he put the stamp of prophecy on their feat as one which would lay the foundation of a new era. Arthur Whitten Brown and John Alcock had a great vision which is now being realized. Since their day a stream of planes have sought to conquer the Atlantic and many have crossed, but others have gone into the sea. The establishment of a commercial route is the present aim of the crossing of the Atlantic and there is every appearance that mankind is on the verge of full realization of a dream man has long held. In other parts of the world there are commercial routes already established.

Much has had to be done in the way of pioneering, but the pioneers on the ocean like the pioneers in the New World were necessary.

LAMPS

Those lamps that gleam so brightly
For every mother's son,
And daughters, out so late at night
After the toil is done;
How brilliantly austere they beam,
Love's concentrated light,
The sign of soul's unselfishness
To keep the world; all right.

These lamps small, tender, thoughtful
That bend men unto men,
The mercy in their slender wicks
Delves deep beyond our ken;
What care full anxious thoughts they bear
As in the dark they glow,
And send their message to each one
A spotless love to show.

Those lamps, forever silent friends
Holding their steady light,
Helping the sad and heartsick ones
Into their cots at night;
Give them a thought now and again
Placed thus by loving care,
That some day you my boy or girl
May also place them there.

BELLEVILLE KIWANIS HAS MANY WORTHY WORKS TO ITS CREDIT, but none greater than its playground masterpiece whereby the club presented to the children of Belleville and the city generally two of the finest playground plants on the continent. Many acts of charity and kindness have been carried out by Belleville Kiwanis ,the kind that is hidden by a mantle of charity and lends itself not to publicity. Kiwanis support of the Victorian Order of Nurses Work in Belleville is another shining star in the Kiwanis crown.

"WE ALWAYS TRY TO, ANSWER OUR TELEPHONE PROMPTLY", a selling argument advanced by an advertising agency in seeking the favorable consideration of prospective customers. How important that is only those know who, when minutes count, as they generally do in modern business, have to wait for a telephone answer. Telephone manners also form an important business angle. Some folks are inclined to be irritable in their telephone talking and if both ends of the conversation explode the result is disastrous. The soft answer that turneth away wrath is especially valuable on the business telephone. Telephone wraps are about the most futile thing imaginable.

FRANKENSTEIN WAS A MONSTER CREATED WHICH COULD NOT BE CONTROLLED—and Franklin Roosevelt is beginning to wonder if his New Deal isn't developing into another Frankenstein which will destroy the Democratic party which created it. Attempt to cut down the tremendous staffs of relief workers in United States cities is meeting with stubborn opposition, sit-down strikes and everything. Employment projects in the United States include even theatrical companies, and authors writing plays—unfortunately it is said most of the plays are modelled upon the misfortunes of the authors and are full of communistic propaganda. The payroll of one group of government relief workers in the hey-day of its existence amounted to $111,000,000 for a single month, and growing every month.

I am confident that all newspaper editors will go to heaven. No matter how eloquently the editor may boost for the development and progress of his community, no matter how diligently he may labor to build up his home town, no matter how loyally he supports a friend in politics, extolls the virtues of a famous native son, stretches the truth to praise a local primadona-to-be, or gently lays a metaphorical wreath on the grave of a departed, he seldom hears a "Thank you". Rarely does anyone say, "Well done". Almost never does he hear, "We appreciated that." But let him make a slip?—W. Earle Dye in the Rotarian Magazine.

LOOKING BACKWARD

SLEARINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

July 12, 1917.

There was considerable excitement for a short time near the G.T.R. roundhouse in this city last evening when an aeroplane from Camp Mohawk in charge of Capt. Seldon fell flaming to the ground. It appears that Capt. Seldon was returning to camp when, it is said, an exhaust pipe burst and from this the plane caught fire. He was able to lower it to within a short distance of the ground before it collapsed and fell. Other than a shaking up Seldon was not injured. The machine fell in a field on the Elvins farm. Mechanics from the camp arrived this morning and dismantled the machine and took the parts to camp.

Members of the various Orange Lodges in this city left early this morning for Frankford and Napanee where Orange walks took place. The I.O.O.F. Band accompanied the Orangemen who went to Napanee.

YEAR OF WAR FAILS TO MAKE SPAIN A FASCIST STATE

IL DUCE DER FUEHRER FRANCO

Though his nationalist armies, bolstered by German and Italian aid, have occupied more than half of Spain and crumpled government defences on many fronts, General Francisco Franco, commander of the Spanish rebels, must look back upon a full year of campaigning (July 17) with the knowledge that he has failed to crush government resistance or to make Spain a Fascist state. The rebels have conquered many of Spain's most important cities and forced the cabinet to move from Madrid to Valencia, which itself has been under bombardment; but in their greatest siege of all, that of Madrid, they failed dismally to capture the ancient capital. Their Italian allies were routed in the mountains north of Madrid and Gen. Mola, one of Franco's ablest strategists, was killed in an aeroplane crash. Germany razed Almeria in a sea reprisal against alleged government attacks upon Nazi vessels and both the German and Italian dictators have publicly announced that Franco must be victorious; but, on and Adolf Hitler of Germany, the first anniversary of the rebellion's outbreak loyalist armies are engaged in strong offensives around Madrid and observers believe that the government is stronger in men and equipment than at any time during the year of conflict. The rebel commander, whose nationalist junta has headquarters at Burgos, is shown at RIGHT with a view of beautiful Valencia, the loyalist government seat. SIX DROWNINGS OVER WEEKEND; BROKERS KILLED

Drownings Result From Exodus to Beaches to Escape Heat

MAN HIT BY TRAIN

Kingston Resident Struck in C.P.R. Yards; One Suicide

(By The Canadian Press)

Receiver bullets and dynamite and Ontario waters contributed to the Province's week-end death list of fifteen. In one of the three highway accidents two Toronto stockbrokers were killed. A Hamilton man was killed by a train and two others died in industrial accidents.

Six drownings brought the toll throughout the Province since the start of a heat wave last Monday to 21. While some of the deaths the result of the great exodus to beaches by thousands seeking relief from the heat, several were the epicome of boating mishaps.

Tangled communication and power lines, shattered trees and damaged buildings were the result of the storm which hit some communities Saturday and again Sunday. It was the third bad electrical disturbance over Western Ontario in the past ten days.

Lights were off for a time in Kitchener-Waterloo hospital where two maternity cases were being treated. One, however, was completed just before the lights went out; the lights came on a moment or so before the other mother was taken to the delivery room.

Cellars Flooded

Among the storm's victims were Italian residents of Welland whose cellars were flooded. Rain washed into their home-made wine. In both Hamilton and Toronto the thunderstorm came up suddenly and caught pleasure craft unaware. Patrol boats at both ports were kept busy bringing the endangered craft to safety.

Every street in Welland was flooded and thousands of dollars' property damage was reported caused by flooded streets and cellars. Many cars were marooned and children swam in the streets. Hydro was disrupted for a time. Three transformers, hit by lightning caught fire.

A house in St. Thomas was struck by lightning and two persons shocked. Clifford Harrison, Balaclava Street, and Mrs. Cleland Smith, a neighbor, suffered from the effects of a lightning bolt that hit their homes. Northbound radials on the London and Port Stanley line were held by a power interruption.

Boys Hysterical

One of the oddest effects was reported at a Boy Scout camp near Streetsville, northwest of Toronto, where fifteen boys from eight to ten years suffered from mass fright and became so hysterical they were taken home to Toronto in taxis. In York township rain leaking through a church roof caused short-circuit of a wire, and, dropping into the Sunday school room, it burned a young child.

Churches at Kitchener, London and Ingersoll were slightly damaged by lightning. Near Kitchener, Mary Fischer, 18, Kitchener, was killed when a motorcycle on which she rode skidded on greasy pavement. At Port Elgin a man and his wife escaped, when their automobile went over a pier and into Lake Erie.

Mrs. Albert Mossip, mother of three young children, died from wounds inflicted by her husband Tuesday before he put a bullet through his own heart in their Hamilton home. The other shooting victim was George S. Bailey, 45, Orillia District farmer, who committed suicide after shooting John Canning, 61, his brother-in-law.

Brokers Killed

Edward J. Leitrel, 67, and Herman H. Lang, 75, Toronto brokers, were killed near Waterdown, when their automobile hit a tree as they drove to London.

Near Thoroldo, Clarence Snow, 11, Stoblocks, was injured fatally, knocked from his bicycle by an automobile.

Those drowned were Albert Gourdin, 18, Ottawa, in the Mississippi River at Carleton Place; Wilfred Moser, 41, in a fall from a rowboat near Paradise Lake near Kitchener; Einal Tamminen, 30, in Menard's Lake near Cochrane; A. O. Marsh 25, in Lake Ontario, off Toronto; Kenneth Guide, 16, in Owen Sound Harbor; and Jenny Koselink, eight, Windsor, in a pool near Leamington.

John Strutin, - 56, died after a freight train hit him in the Kingston Canadian Pacific Railway yard. John Craig, 31, died from injuries received when dynamite he was handling in a mine exploded. Cali contributed the other fatal industrial accident in the death of Jack Walker, 31, from a skull fracture received when an elevator he was in dropped fifteen feet.

Pauline Lindsey assisting, conducted the funeral service in the Four Square Gospel Hall on Front Street. Bearers were Ena J. Crosby, Margaret E. Copeland, Neata C. Squier, Neata K. SECOND ATTEMPT OF NORTH FLIGHT

Soviet Fliers Leave Moscow to Travel Over Top of World

Moscow, July 12—(AP)—A red-winged Soviet airplane flew toward the North Pole today in a second Russian attempt to span the top of the world and fly down the United States' Pacific coast.

With few formalities, the Soviet pilot Mihail Gromoff and two aides took off at 3:22 a.m. (9:22 p.m. E. D. T. Sunday) on the Arctic sky trail blazed by three other Soviet fliers who landed at Vancouver, Wash., June 20.

Gromoff was accompanied on the flight by co-pilot Andrei Yumashef and navigator Sergei Danilin.

The Soviet North Pole weather observation camp radioed that favorable weather conditions were in store for the fliers, who said they would continue down the Pacific coast as far as possible with San Francisco as their probable destination.

Heavy Load of Gas

Just as a silvery dawn flushed the sky over the Russian hemlock forests, the three aviators stepped out in brown leather flying suits to receive the farewell wishes of Dr. Otto J. Schmidt, leader of the Soviet North Pole expedition, whose department sponsored the new flight.

Aboard the plane were seven and one-half tons of gasoline, a fuel load greater than that carried by their predecessors on the trans-polar route. Valeria Chekaloff, Georgi Baskhuteff and Alexander Beliakoff.

Dr. Schmidt said the fliers would "follow the same route as Chkaloff to the Pole and then proceed as weather conditions indicated."

"They hope to better the distance record and will land when necessary," said Schmidt. "There will be no attempt at speed—only distance."

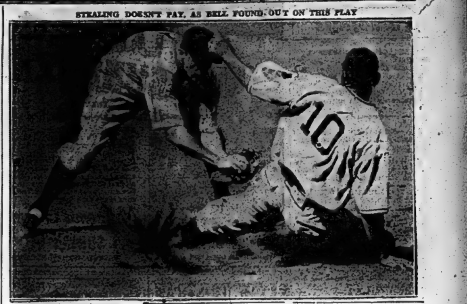
The three previous fliers landed at Vancouver, Wash., 5,288 miles from their take-off point.

BURST GUNFIRE ANSWERS QUERY

Sudbury Constable Hit Seven Times by Daring Pair

Sudbury, Ont., July 12—(CP)—City and Provincial Police heavily armed, searched through the Northern Ontario district today in search of the gunman who fired seven bullets into Police Sergeant Fred Davison Saturday and fled with another man in an allegedly stolen car.

Recovery of a burned car near Capreol led the police search to swing northward. The car answers to the description of the one in which the two men fled. One of the license plates was said to correspond to one on a Royce, Que., taxicab stolen by bandits from Théodore Morin near Field, Ont., last Wednesday.



Sergeant Davidson was investigating an apparent attempt by a man to switch the license plates of a car just north of the city when his quest was answered with a burst of gunfire. One bullet was removed from his abdomen in hospital here and the other six wounds are believed to be not serious.

Further description of the thugs was provided by Thomas Coyne, Capreol town councillor, who said their car after it accidentally hit on his Capreol road. When he caught up with it he was advised to say nothing to police and that he would be paid off next day at a Sudbury address which later proved fictitious.

MECHANICAL RABBIT MAKES THESE GREYHOUNDS STEP

A remarkable picture showing two racing greyhounds in fierce, leaping action as they pursue the elusive mechanical rabbit during the first heat for the Victoria derby at Elsom near Melbourne, Australia. STEALING DOESN'T PAY, AS BILL FOUND OUT ON THIS PLAY

Proving that larceny doesn't pay—if one gets caught at it—Right-fielder Bell of the St. Louis Browns finds himself in the rather embarrassing position of "out." He attempted to steal second in the fourth inning but the strong arm of Catcher Bill Dickey nabbed him at the sack, Second-baseman Heffner making the put-out. The Yankees lost the game, 6-3.

CATCHER AND HURLER ADDED TO TORONTO LEAF ROSTER

Toronto Maple Leafs of the International Baseball league may not be at the head of the league, but they have plenty of baseball ivory to choose from. Manager Dan Howley recently acquired a new backstop, plus an additional hurler. The catcher is Francis "Shanty" Hogan (RIGHT), former major league catcher. "Shanty" is a burly sort of a chap, weighing well over the 200 mark, and is no weakling with the willow, although in his first few games with the Leafs he hasn't had much luck at the plate in a batting sense. The other newcomer to the team is bespectacled Ted Horton (LEFT), former Yale university pitcher. In his first outing with the Leafs he pitched three innings in a relief role and turned in a fine performance. He gave Howley every reason to believe that he has the stuff it takes to deliver in the pinches.

GRISSOM SHOWING FINE FORM WITH REDS THIS YEAR

A year ago Lee Grissom, lanky 200-pound Texan, was a practically unheard-of pitcher in Nashville. Today he is known around the National league circuit as the "one-man" pitching staff of the Cincinnati Reds. He has hurled more than 125 innings and won gamed with the last-place Reds including four shoutouts. In his last time out, Dizzy Dean barely beat him 1 to 0. Lee was among the senior circuit flingers who appeared in the all-star game in Washington. He is seen here just after burning one across the plate.

'HOPPERS RAVAGING GREAT U.S. WHEAT BELT

Adding to the ravages caused by drought and soil drifting, billions of grasshoppers are destroying ripening grain crops in the great wheat belt of mid-western United States, where entire areas have been devastated by the invading insect hordes. It is anticipated that railway workers, farmers, WPA employees, National Guardsmen and other bodies may be organized to combat the scourge and save crops in areas not yet ruined. The grasshopper menace has not been reported acute in western Canada's wheat areas yet this year. This unusual close-up picture shows the hoppers at their destructive work on wheat heads.

SHOCKED LORDS

Youthful Lord Moray, 27-year-old Scottish peer who married a New York girl in 1934, astonished the staid house of lords in London when he delivered four speeches, three of them out of order, on a pending liberalized divorce law and then topped it off by lighting a cigaret in the chamber, something unheard of previously.

Takes All Kinds To Make World

"It has been said—"It takes all kinds of people to make a world."

A paradox of existing nature was lacked at the police station last evening, as two youthful transients sought to quest of a night's lodging. The first stepped up to the desk and gave his name as Bill Evans who was on duty at the time, the name of George Black, Black, spoke up and said: "Where can you going?" asked the constable. "To Montreal," replied the man giving the name of Black, although he spoke with a distinct Irish brogue, unlike Evans.

The next youth stepped up and gave the name of George Wilson, aged 19 who was asked by the same the question as to his destination. Wilson also was going to Montreal in Belleville and endeavour to procure a farm job in this section, stating he was willing to work for any fair wage.

Immediately the former applicant spoke up — "No more farm work for me. I gotta job with a farmer near Niagara Falls. He say he pay me a dollar fifty a day. After 3 weeks work he say he owe me noddings, so I quit. Nexta time I gotta de money first and de job work after", stated Black as he strutted independently into the cell block for his rest, leaving the surprised, constable wondering just what it was all about.

Community Honors M. Longwell

Foxboro—The members of the Foxboro Presbyterian Church, also the many friends and neighbors in the community gathered at the home of Mrs. H. Longwell on Friday night to honor her eldest son Maclaren on the eve of his approaching marriage to Miss Evelyn McIlroy of West Huntingdon. Mac's friends turned out in full force to give him their well-wishes ere he took his departure for his new home in Port Colborne, where he has been residing since last August.

Rev. Mr. McDonald, the Presbyterian pastor, called the friends to order and Mrs. J. Thompson read the address with Mr. O. D. McCullough making the presentation, which was a beautiful occasional chair with end table to match.

The address was as follows:

Dear Mac:

This gathering of your friends and neighbors marks a prospective change in your life.

On this eve of your marriage we are gathered here in your boyhood home to celebrate with you and share in your great happiness. You have grown up among us from early boyhood to manhood and knowing you so well we feel that wherever your work takes you, there you will prove yourself a most welcome citizen.

Your kind disposition, your thoughtfulness for older folk your tenderness and love toward children will bind you with a chain of love to those privileged to know you. With Evelyn you will take up new duties and responsibilities in a new church and community. You will meet new opportunities and we will put you to the test, and will face hard responsibilities, determining how you your best. It is then, if never before, the necessity of true Christian living, that God will be tried in your life, your heart, your home, will make itself manifest. May your influence count only for the good in the new life which opens before you.

We hope you will be as ready and willing to use the gifts and special talent in your new church as you have been in the church you are leaving. We know that to Evelyn, you will have the woman Apoleton had in mind when he wrote that well known poem, "The Woman Who Understands," beginning like this:

Somewhere she waits to make you win.
Some soul in her fair while hands.
Somewhere the gods have made for you,
The woman who understands.

The poem closes with these words:
Then you will the gods when She comes to you,
The woman who understands.

We who have known you do not wonder that Evelyn made you her choice, Maclaren, many of us do not know you nearly so well low—you very much. That is why we would ask in this most important step in your life without some expression of our appreciation and now we ask you to accept this gift, not because of its intrinsic value, but because it will remind you our very sincere good wishes for your happiness, good health and prosperity.

May it help connect the future with the past. May it help bind you upon this gift you will recall pleasant relations with the old home community.

Signed on behalf of the Presbyterian congregation and your neighbors

Mrs. Harold Longwell
W. D. Bartlett
O. D. McCullough

Following the address Maclaren spoke in a few well chosen words, expressing his appreciation, especially of the honor and high esteem in which his fiancee was evidently held by him, thanking them one and all for the lovely gifts and assuring them he certainly will not forget his former friends foremost in mind while using their magnificent gifts. Indeed Maclaren invited all his friends to remember him when calling in Port Colborne.

Mr. John Stewart, representing the Foxboro Ball Club then presented Mac with a fine set of Military brushes as a token of the Ball Club's appreciation of his past performances on the diamond (Mac played around the keystone sack and has been very instrumental in the club's splendid past record).

Mac replied very fittingly to the ball team thanking them for their remembrance of him and he was also regretting that those happy times with the boys in the Ball League were past.

Stumps speeches by many of the neighbors evidenced kindliness out of the past to further express their deep appreciation. Mac were much appreciated while the bit of advice given by the time-honored bachelors will no doubt prove beneficial.

After a dainty lunch the neighbors, en gala home, thoroughly wished Mac and Evelyn a very happy and prosperous wedded life in their new home.

Boy Film Star from India has Leading Role in "Elephant Boy"

"Elephant Boy," which has been directed by Zoltan Korda and Robert Flaherty will be presented on the Bella Theatre screen, Tuesday and Wednesday, and it is without doubt the most exciting and authentic jungle picture ever to reach the screen.

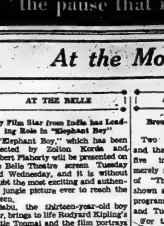
Sabu, the thirteen-year-old boy star, brings to life Rudyard Kipling's little Toomai and the film portrays perfectly the atmosphere of the famous Jungle Books.

Thrilling scenes are shown when Sabu finds the great elephant herds. Hundreds of Kodak pictures were made with one of the largest herds of wild elephants ever discovered in the jungles of Mysore. More than a thousand beaters formed a sun round of nearly eight miles in circumference. They were helped by thirty-six mahouts and their elephants. It took seven days to drive the elephants to the stockade. This was the biggest elephant capture in Mysore in many years.

Another exciting and terrifying scene shows the great elephant Kala-Nag running amuck in the camp after the death of his mahout and the incredible way in which little Sabu is able to calm the infuriated beast.

Sabu was born in the Kaspan Jungle 45 miles from the city of Mysore in Southern India. His father was a mahout. His life in the service of the Maharajah of Mysore, Sabu was discovered and brought up amongst elephants.

The wonderful training of the elephants, elephants were not obtained without great risk to the cameramen, Osmond Borrodaile, the head camera-man, had been waiting all day on a platform up a tree for elephants to come across the nearby river. Finally towards dusk he came across and nearly ran into an enormous tusker standing quietly in the dense undergrowth. There were many exciting moments in obtaining the close shots of tigers seen in the film.



More than a mile of stockade inside of great tree roped together was erected in the Mysore jungle for the elephant round-up, in which about a hundred wild elephants were driven and the twenty-foot gates closed.

AT THE CAPITOL

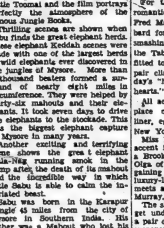
Brought Back By Request—Two Revival Hits

Two murders in a mid-Atlantic and the high-powered sleuthing of five international detectives are merely minor incidents in the plot of "The Princess Comes Across," shown as hit No. 1 on this revival programme at the Capitol today and Tuesday.

For the picture is essentially a romantic comedy, bringing together Fred MacMurray and Carole Lombard for the first time since their smashing success in "Hands Across the Table." In a story perfectly suited to their style of romance the pair clinch their positions as today's "Number One Screen Sweethearts."

Fast action of the story takes place on a transatlantic superliner, en route from Le Havre to New York.

Miss Lombard adopts a Swedish accent for the role. She is cast as a Brooklyn girl posing as Princess Olga of Sweden for the purpose of gaining a film contract. Aboard the luxury-liner "Mammoth," she meets and falls in love with MacMurray, leader of a swing band.



The ship and the romance hardly keep pace with the speed of the first of a pair of murders starts a chain of mysterious events that continues throughout. Music, provided both by the ship's band and concertized by playing MacMurray (who sings his first song in films in this picture) add the comedy and romantic scenes in maintaining the film's light touch.

An unusually fine supporting cast, led by Alison Skipworth as a wise-cracking former vaude-"lady-in-waiting" for Princess Olga, and William Frawley, manager for MacMurray's band, backs up the stars.

"The Long Famileroy"

Revival hit No. 2, Freddie Bartholomew is seen in "Little Lord Fauntleroy" Dodsley Award Winner Barrymore as co-star.

Frances Hill, in heart warming terms the familiar story of the little American lad who became a Lord and went to England to live in a castle with his grandfather, the gruff, gouty, old Earl of Dorincourt, (C. Aubrey Smith), and was separated from the dear widowed mother whom the stubborn Earl refused to receive inside the castle gates because his son had married her against his wishes.

Fred MacMurray and Carole Lombard in "The Princess Comes Across," now at the Capitol.

How the child wins his way into the old man's heart and transforms him into a loving and thoughtful grandfather is charmingly depicted amid smiles and heartings and tears.

Eventually the old Earl softens very toward Dearest, but is too proud to seek her out until his new found happiness is endangered by the appearance of a false claimant to the title of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" in the person of an unpleasant little chap named Bevis (Donald De Searl).

The story has a joyous ending, however, with all the difficulties ironed out and everybody gloriously happy.

"Coming—"Hell's Angels"

Starting Wednesday for three days the Capitol is presenting the mightiest drama the world has ever seen and which will go down in history as an unmatched achievement, "Hell's Angels," featuring Jean Harlow, who after this feature achieved world renown stardom.

WORRIED BY PIMPLES AND ECZEMA

Complexion Unblemished After Six Weeks of Kruschen

"For the past two years," writes a woman, "my face was covered with hard pimples and red blotches, and I also had eczema on my neck and body. I tried boiled potatoes, creams and ointments, without the slightest effect. I became worried. Fortunately I decided to give Kruschen a trial, and without any exaggeration, within six weeks my face was without a blemish, and I had not a sign of eczema since. I take Kruschen regularly every morning, and would not be without it."—(Mrs.) J. A.

Pimples and eczema are frequently due to impurities in the blood—irritant poisons which clog the body organs are failing to expel from the system. Kruschen Salts help to keep the body organs functioning normally and healthily, thus preventing the accumulation of impurities in the blood.

The Consumers' Guide to Quality

More than a century of service to the public has made the advertising columns of the daily newspapers the accepted source of commodity news in two million Canadian homes.

News of goods and services is necessary to every household. Comfort and economy depend on it. The success of every enterprise is determined in the home where the relative values of products or services are analysed and their claims for preferential treatment supported or disproved. Sales volume for any product is the sum of all these individual preferences.

The confidence consumers feel toward advertised goods is the result of personal experience. They realize that advertising reflects the integrity of the manufacturer and the merchant's belief in the value of the goods he thus publicly offers for sale.

Consequently, the advertisements in the daily newspapers are not only news, they are recognized guarantees of quality.

Today, Canadian consumers everywhere from coast to coast read their local daily newspapers for the latest information regarding the commodities and services they need. The advertisements are their guides to quality and their aids to thrift.

Feller Hurls a Two Hitter But Wildness in the Pinches Allows Detroit Tigers to Win

Cleveland Pitcher Has a Fast Ball That is a "Honey"

CARDS BEAT TWICE

Yankees Ran Their Streak to Eight Games Without Defeat

(By Sid Feder)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The case of Bobby Feller — or wisely in a fast ball—bobbed up today as the year's most baffling baseball mystery.

Although he has the makings of just about everything an elbower needs (Cleveland's lightning-ball youngster can't seem to find his name on the right side of the scoreboard when all the runs are added up.

Certainly, he has shown in his last two starts what a whale of a difference just a little experience might make. He pitched fine ball, but lost both decisions through no one's fault but his own.

Bob made the first start last week since the opening day's of the campaign, and lost the ball game because of his own fielding effort—a peg in an uncovered base. Yesterday, in his second time out, he and the tribe dropped all 3 ways around to Detroit Tigers, largely because he had so much trouble as a straw-cyed man in target practice.

Although he pitched two-hit ball his own wildness really lost the ball game. A walk set up the first Tiger run. A wild throw helped the second, and two passes in a row made the third a simple matter.

Thus the Tigers jumped back into second place in the American League, since Chicago White Sox were unable to get better than an even break with St. Louis, Detroit winning the nightcap 4 to 3 after dropping the opener 4 to 1.

National League

Over in the National League the Giants came within half a game of overhauling the pacesetting Chicago Cubs by belting Brooklyn Dodgers, in a doubleheader, winning the opener 10 to 4 after clubbing Van Mungo out, and the nightcap 8 to 1. The Cubs dropped a 3 to 2 decision to Bill Swift and the consolidated Pittsburgh Pirates.

Most astonishing result of the day was the double cost of whilewash Cincinnati Reds applied to the once-touch Cardinals. Peaches Davis blanked them 6-0 in the opener, and Al Hollingsworth repeated 7-0 in the afterpiece.

The New Yankees ran their streak to eight games without a defeat by nosing out the Senators 4 to 3 in the first game of their twin bill, and coming from behind to tie the nightcap at 3-3 just before darkness halted it in the ninth.

Boston's Red Sox had a snap against the Athletics, winning 9 to 3 and 3 to 2. They also pounded Boston Bees 10 to 4 in their opener and then dropped a 1-0 heartbreaker to Lou Fette in the 13-inning nightcap.

Don't forget the Digest games, Wednesday and Friday nights. Registration closes 7.30 p.m. Games commence 7.45 p.m. sharp.

We had a good turn out for the Stoney games Friday night. The rain on Saturday did not deter the keen playing.

R. C. A. F. SQUAD APPEARS CLASS OF TOWN LEAGUE

Win Last Six Starts And Beaten Only Once This Season

MERCANTILE LOOP

Trenton, July 12—(Special) — Judging their performances to date it appears that the R.C.A.F., softball team will take the Trenton Town League laurels this year without much trouble. The Flyers have taken the last six starts and last only one till since the league started. Only teams that will give the Airmen a real tussle are C.P.R., and Capitol Theatre the latter having dished out the only defeat of the Port squad, in the first of the year. Lately Spano has been handling the mound duties for the airforce and previously Snider, Dolan and Gibson performed on the hill. All would be welcomed on any pitching staff in the Province. The Flyers also boast of a number of lofty hitters in LaMorre, Heaney, McNeeley, Lecompte, and Gibson. And when this aggregation of swat kings are working a hurler hasn't much chance to figure on flipping a shut out. Speaking from an unbiased standpoint the airforce softball troupe is a mighty fine bunch of performers, that must be remembered brings things have upset the classiest squads, at a time when they looked invincible.

Mercantile Ball Improves

The softball played in the Mercantile loop this year is far superior to the brand displayed last season and if the Mercantile standard continues the factory lads will be seeking the title from the airforce and town league. Colton Mills nine are in third spot of the Mercantile circle loop at present with the splendid record of five wins in as many starts. The factory lads blister Lecompte some are roosting in second position with four triumphs and a loss while Trent Manufacturers Benedict Produce and Merchants are standing on the third rung of the ladder. Dorset Cooller and Hinde and Daumen are tied for fourth place and Rodgers Clubs is deep in the cellar.

The Flyers are keeping streak probably a record for a softball club in Trenton Parks was severed on Saturday night when the Colton nine nine suffered a 14 to 5 reverse at the expense of the Stoney Lonesome softball club on the Bayshore Park diamond. QUEBEC GOLFER WINS TOURNEY

Jules Huot Becomes Second Canadian to Win in Some Years

Pontiahl, Que., July 12 (CP)—The strong arm of golf has proved to new fields today, the more fortunate sharing in the lucky charm of the $4,000 prize awards of the Central Canada open tournament.

Through sizzling world temperatures and over rapidly baking 6,140-yard Pontiahl golf links of Kent, Quebec, stroked his way to victory in the 36-hole medal competition. He set a new record for the tournament record and became the second Canadian in recent years to hold big-money golf honors. His total of 290 gave him $750 first money.

His victory—on a par with the triumph of Ken Black of Vancouver, Canadian open champion, achieved in the face of relentless cloding by the cream of the United States luminaries, led by Wild Bill Mehlhorn of Lauderdale, Fla.

Takes up Burden

Huot took up the burden that slipped from the fingers of Bobby Cruickshank, Detroit pro, leader for the first two rounds. Gray added a third-round 71 to his opening sallies of 68 and 72 but the strenuous going tagged at his putter in the last 18 holes and he finished in a tie for eighth place with a 76 and 295 total.

The victory seemed to belong to the little French-Canadian. Claude Mealhorn began setting the course afire, dropping to the 17th he needed only two birdies to win and did the first of them. Then Wild Bill sent a long putt down on the 18th into a patch of three-inch grass and his approach went past the cup.

Mehlhorn finally got a 3 on the last hole for a 70 and a 290 total. He was a stroke ahead of Cooper and Long, Jean Ray Maugham of Dayton, O. Jimmy Thomson of Toronto and Bobby Alpen of Ottawa, who were with Mehlhorn in the last pairing, were fifth and sixth with 294 and 295 respectively.

LARRUPING LOU GEHRIG, New York the great slugger crossing the plate. Yankee first-baseman proved his prowess at the plate Dimaggio was on the base. Lou also garnered a double later in the game to bring his "runs driven in" record up to four and clinch the game for his American League mates. They won 4-3.

championship, Canada's biggest money golf tournament, to be played at Lookout Point, Ont. Among the many divot diggers who will be entered in the event is Jimmie Johnstone of Rosedale club of Toronto. Many will remember Jimmie as one of the three Canadians who qualified in the United States open tournament. Another outstanding golfer who will have his eye on the money is Jimmy Thomson of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa. He is one of the hardest drivers in the game.

Many Canadian and United States golfers will be out to win the 72-hole General Brock open,

"DIZZY" AND "LEFTY" JOKE PRIOR TO GAME

Things look to be quite rosy between Dizzy Dean, LEFT, and Vernon "Lefty" Gomes in this picture but it was taken before they opposed each other as pitchers during the all-star game between the American and National leagues at Washington. Dean started on the mound for the Nationals while Gomes was the opposing pitcher. The American won the game by a score of 8-3, with Gomes being credited with the victory while Dean had a loss chalked up against him. Maybe their facial expressions were different after the game.

NAPANEE SCORES SURPRISE WIN OVER GM - MEN

Blazetich Holds Opposition After Pointer Batted From Mound

KINGSTON WINS

Ponies Tally Seven Runs in Last Two Frames to Take Fetes

Oshawa, July 12.—In a loose exhibition of senior baseball, Napanee Gibbards scored a 9 to 7 win over Oshawa General Motors in a C.O.B.L., fixture at Alexandra park here this afternoon.

Johnny Turner who started on the mound for the-homesters failed from the start to hold the Gibbards in check allowing seven hits in the five and one-third innings he worked.

In addition he was very wild issuing seven bases on balls during his tenure on the mound. His mates played erratic ball behind him in the first two innings hoting guilty of four errors.

Oshawa drove Tommy Pointer, ace southpaw of the Gibbards to the showers in the third after they had rapped his offering for six runs in the second inning. In the third Blazetich came to bat the flinging for the Gibbards and he was proven to the contrary for the six innings he worked, holding them to four hits.

This place called Belleville is undoubtedly a cosmic-ray when it comes to some pisces of sport. For instance we have in the community the noble Billie Hughes, whose ability to train and coach athletes and teams is renowned from the blue waters of the Pacific to the shores of Newfoundland. Mr. Hughes did not come to Belleville of his own accord, but was transferred here by his employers. For past years Queen's University, the City of Winnipeg and the Canadian Olympic teams were glad to remunerate Mr. Hughes for his efforts in coaching various lines of sport.

Here in Belleville Mr. Hughes is willing to assist in any way possible the advancement and uplifting of sporting activities, but unfortunately the old dead-to-the-wool sport moguls sit back with a grin and appear to be indifference with the result some good tutoring is being lost through dead and lack of interest. If some unknown moves into Belleville, puts on a bold front and sees his presence necessary to ship, the sport barons go for him in a great big way with the result, that the whole project is a flop. This is no idle gossip as numerous cases can be readily sighted. For instance the local lacrosse outfit would have appreciated Mr. Hughes regarding his efforts to assist Harry Howe in tutoring the Rovers a long time ago. There's an old saying "two or more heads are better than one."

All of which reminds us that the Flying Rovers are scheduled to play in Norwood on Tuesday night. The Rovers took the measure of the Norwood by their first meeting, but both squads have improved since and Coach Harry Howe is looking for some real opposition Tuesday. Incidentally Lakeside, the Rovers centre player, was set off night recently by a bad attack of ptomaine poisoning but we understand that he will be on hand for the Rover squad has been working out with renewed vigor since their Peterboro shellacking, net result, their splendid showing against Cobourg.

Here's a little yarn that actually occurred in Belleville recently although it does not exactly pertain to sport it does seem a memento of our local constabulary happened to be driving down a certain road along Dundas St. when he drove up behind a dilapidated old car! 1920 model touring car. The officer could scarcely believe his eyes, there was no licence plate on the rear of the vehicle. Upon closer inspection he had lost the plate, the officer drove past, but was more surprised to find no licence plate issued to the front of the vehicle. He immediately stopped the car in question, which was driven by a grey-bearded old gentleman. "Why don't your licence plate," queried the law. "I just ain't got none, mister policeman. You see I live on the north end of the county and came in town today to git them char numbers, but when I got to the place where you ets 'em I couldn't make out that there feller's head they hands on, so I'se taking the old bus down a garage guy I knows and perhaps he'll fill out the papers for me," was the surprising answer given by the North Hastings resident. "Well don't you realize you can't drive a car without license plates and also you should have purchased them last spring if you were going to drive your car!" explained the kindly officer. "Well, you see, I don't know much about this here car business, but this is the first time I've been south of Madoc and I jest ain't hada chance to get them numbers but I'm sure tonight, if this garageman can write," stated the old gentleman as he assured the local officer that a constable away out north had informed him he could drive into Belleville for the purpose of procuring his licence plates. The local officer amusingly accepted the old gentleman's story, providing he had purchased some time to purchase his licence plates before returning home. We have been informed Tom's reliable source, that it is nothing out of the ordinary to see motor vehicles driven at night in North Hastings with license plates one, two and three years old. We cannot vouch for this statement, but will accept it. At any rate we hope the old gentleman of our story procured his licence plates and the years in the north.

There is softball at Coleman Field every night this week, except Thursday, with some important struggles on the menu.

TWIN WORMS OF LOOP TURNING

Baltimore And Jersey City Moving Along at Faster Clip

(By The Associated Press)

The twin worms of the International League's early season, Baltimore and Jersey City, continue to show signs of turning.

The Little Giants closed a six-game series with Syracuse Chiefs yesterday by sweeping both ends of a double-header, 3-2 and 4-3. The victories gave the Giants the series, 4-2, and some much-needed confidence.

The Giants' batting came to life in their other victories of the Syracuse series but yesterday they relied on pitching particularly that furnished by Glen Gabler and Don Brennan, for victory. Gabler started the first game and he had to retire because of the heat and Brennan's relief pitching saved the game. Brennan did the same thing in the nightcap although Gabler again received credit for the win.

Babe Dahlgren led the Bears to an 11-10 victory over the Orioles in the opener with two home runs, a double and two singles. The Black chipped in with four-baggers by Poser, Powell, Martin, and Buck Crouse but they weren't enough.

Ray Vandenburg's hurling was enough in the second game, however and the Orioles won 4-3 giving them an even split in a four game series.

A 3-1 victory in an 11-inning pitching duel gave Rochester Red Wings a double victory over Buffalo Bisons. The Wings took the opener 7-1 by bunching their hits in two big innings.

Holiday Bride

By ANN DEMAREST

Shivering with dampness and cold, she went into a telephone booth in the corner drug store and, setting the heavy package into her other arm, she dialled his number.

"Lance."

His voice voice brought a lump into her throat.

"Yes, Jeanne. I hoped you would call me. Where are you? I've telephoned your house every five minutes for the last hour."

"I'm in a drug store," she said.

"Oh, darling, you shouldn't be out in the storm in this state. You must be frozen. . . . Listen to me, honey. Take a taxi and come up to my apartment right away. I'll have a cocktail waiting for you and we can have dinner here."

"All right. I'll be there in ten minutes."

Lance was waiting for her just inside the doorway of his apartment house.

"Your poor hands!" he exclaimed, drawing her arm through his and leading her towards the elevator. "You're chilled to the bone. You must get some of these damp clothes off."

When they reached his living room Lance took off her tweed coat and knelt down to draw off her brown oxfords.

"Well wrap you up snugly in my flannel robe and you must put on my leather slippers. I can't have you getting pneumonia."

He made her sit in a chair by the roaring fire while his Japanese house boy aided her.

Comfortable by the warm fire, relaxed in the deep chair with Lance hovering solicitously by, Jeanne felt a deep tenderness for him. Aunt Sandra was right. Being the way she might touch the stars but being taken care of because of the tenderness of contentment. At the moment she wished that Lance was not going to be sheltered by Lance from the cruelties of the past week.

"Feeling better?" Lance asked, taking a chair close to hers.

She nodded and he bent forward to clasp her slim hands in his.

"It makes me very happy that you called me, Jeanne," he said quietly. "I like to feel that you count on me to take care of you."

Jeanne smiled. "I was cold and tired and I needed just this."

He took a glass from a silver tray that the Japanese was holding before Jeanne.

"This will warm you."

Jeanne sipped the cocktail. Usually she did not care for them but this was delicious and warming. Cool to the taste, it brought with it a pleasant warmth.

"It's very perfect here," she said looking around the luxuriously furnished room.

"I'd forgotten. This is the first time you've been with me since Lance."

She raised an amused eyebrow. "Little?"

"It's not large enough for me," he assured her quickly. "I have my eye on one that will fill my perfect. A penthouse over by the river."

Jeanne leaned back in the chair and closed her eyes. It seemed like a dream. It was hard to believe that she was in Lance's apartment, was going to be married in a few days and that those who could make about trips to Bermuda and penthouses as casually as though they grew on trees.

"I have something for you," Lance broke in quickly, left the room, and when he came back he put a small box in her hands.

"I hope you like it," he said. Jeanne lifted back the cover and then looked at Lance with anxious eyes.

"Oh, Lance, it's too beautiful. I'd be afraid to wear it."

"Nonsense."

Lance laughed and drew the ring out of its satin case.

"I've never seen such a diamond," Jeanne exclaimed.

"I wanted you to have the best one I could get for you," he said proudly, slipping the ring over her finger.

She held her hand out before her. The diamond looked tremendous on her slender hand. It was almost too large, too . . . well, showy, Jeanne thought. And then, seeing Lance's look, she said quickly, "It's perfect. I can't tell you how much I love it."

Reassured, he smiled at her. "I'm glad you like it all the time. Remember. Don't put it away. It's our engagement ring for all the world to see. I want every one to know that we are going to be married. You can show Norma and Sally that you can have more beautiful things than they."

Cliff! It startled Jeanne to hear Lance mention her. So he wanted to show Cliff that he was giving Jeanne beautiful jewels that he was going to push her up to the same level as his society friends.

A bell rang in the distance and in a few moments the Jap came into the room and announced that some friends had dropped in and wanted to see him.

Lance turned quickly to Jeanne.

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads

Was she mistaken, she wondered, in thinking that he looked at her critically; that his eyes did not approve the brown sweater and the tweed skirt she was wearing under his robe.

Jeanne did mind but she said nothing and quickly took off the flannel robe and slipped out of Lance's leather soles into her own small brown oxfords.

"Hy, hey, Lance?" called a voice from the doorway.

"Come in," Lance called.

Jeanne recognized Deke Lord but when he heard Lance call to him she had a moment of panic. Would Cilly be with him? But to her relief the girl was not with Cliff. Her name was Nancy Lee and she was a small, dark-haired Southern girl.

Lance introduced Jeanne to them and then said, "I'm going to make Jeanne MacDonald, my fiancee, a drink. Make yourselves at home."

Deke Lord's eyes narrowed. He was repeating her bridal name after the fashion of the drop in her ring. It seemed strange to her that he should have known it. Lance must have told him.

But perhaps since he had stopped seeing Cilly he and Lance were friends.

Cocktails were served and for half an hour the three of them chattered gayly. Jeanne felt left out. The conversation was all about a set that was not for the world. And she wondered with a little pang if Lance would ever be at home in with these people who dashed from Florida to Newport, and then to Europe with the greatest ease and assurance. It was all so strange and so new, but with Lance's help she felt that things she needed with the remainder.

The day seemed colder and dreary. Traffic was heavy and the streets crowded with holiday shoppers. All morning she spent looking for linen on frocks and slim sandals that she could wear on the beach in Bermuda. And then she bought a large tweed. There was no joy in buying the things she thought with a pang life you had to lead before you were married. We'll travel about in the fall, Lance had said, with a start. There won't be anything you won't be able to get for Christmas. Yes, everything. You'll be the most envied girl in New York.

Jeanne drew in her breath quickly. Lance meant to be kind, she knew, but he was tactless sometimes. Would she ever be able to live up to Lance's standards? Would Cliff's wife be able to live up to them? Jeanne knew that Cliff had married beneath him socially. Cliff's wife was a chorus girl.

After dinner they went into the living room and when the Jap had served the two cups of coffee and two liqueurs, Lance said, "I'm going to run you home, Jeanne. I have an engagement for dinner and I'm going to change my clothes."

He helped his hand in his pocket and drew out a check book. "Now, darling, what do you need? I'm ashamed of her clothes.

"I have something for you," Lance broke in quickly, left the room, and when he came back he put a small box in her hands.

"I hope you like it," he said. Jeanne lifted back the cover and then looked at Lance with anxious eyes.

"Oh, Lance, it's too beautiful. I'd be afraid to wear it."

"Nonsense."

Lance laughed and drew the ring out of its satin case.

"I've never seen such a diamond," Jeanne exclaimed.

"I wanted you to have the best one I could get for you," he said proudly, slipping the ring over her finger.

She held her hand out before her. The diamond looked tremendous on her slender hand. It was almost too large, too . . . well, showy, Jeanne thought. And then, seeing Lance's look, she said quickly, "It's perfect. I can't tell you how much I love it."

Reassured, he smiled at her. "I'm glad you like it all the time. Remember. Don't put it away. It's our engagement ring for all the world to see. I want every one to know that we are going to be married. You can show Norma and Sally that you can have more beautiful things than they."

Cliff! It startled Jeanne to hear Lance mention her. So he wanted to show Cilly that he was giving Jeanne beautiful jewels that he was going to push her up to the same level as his society friends.

A bell rang in the distance and in a few moments the Jap came into the room and announced that some friends had dropped in and wanted to see him.

Lance turned quickly to Jeanne.

"Oh, That's too bad. . . . Well, I'm sorry you feel the way you do about tonight," he went on. "Of course I can go by myself but it looks very strange when I said you were coming with me."

"I don't know the people anyway, Lance. It can't make much difference to them. Just tell them that I'm sorry but I have a headache tonight. Tell them I'm ill or something," she said a little hysterically.

"Very well. I'll see you for tea tomorrow," said curtly and then rang off.

Jeanne sighed with relief as she went back to her room. By tomorrow she could face Lance and their first date together. She was going to be alone. She had the night off in the overwhelming desire to be with Bryan, to call the hotels until she found him. She failed to have him go away believing that she wanted Lance and not him. But now that she was marrying Lance he would never believe her. He would not know that after weeks of despair she was marrying because Lance would take care of her, because she could not face the world without some one who cared at least enough to want to marry her.

Too tired to go out, to dinner, Jeanne ordered sandwiches in her room. Bathed now and wrapped snugly in her warm bathrobe, she slipped into bed and, propping herself in fashionable clothes, seemed to be alone. Any moments she expected to waken.

"I've changed our plans," Lance said when Jeanne answered the phone. He was quiet. "Do you mind if we go to Florida instead of Bermuda? There will be a whole crowd down there that I know so it's silly of us to stay in Bermuda. No one I know and I want you to meet every one. I'll fly down a week ahead of you and then if we stayed off by ourselves."

"I'll be ready," Jeanne said.

Sandra stepped forward and clutched Jeanne's hand.

"Why, Sandra."

"I know you don't want to see me and I don't blame you," the girl said, "but I had to. Please, Jeanne, for the sake of our friendship."

Of course. Come in."

Jeanne stepped back to Sandra's order.

"Sit down."

Jeanne pushed the chair forward for Sandra and then sat on the edge of the bed facing her.

"I'm so miserable, Jeanne," Sandra cried, pushing her hat back on her head. Tears were in her eyes and splendingly on Jeanne's.

Jeanne looked at her without speaking. Sandra was suffering now as she had suffered. It was the first time she had ever seen her cry.

"I'm sorry," she said gently.

"Are you?" Sandra's voice was dull. "I don't suppose you are. I've been so unkind to you. Please, Jeanne, for the sake of our friendship."

"Don't be sorry, Lance," she said in a low voice.

"Sandra stopped and looked at Jeanne with a puzzled frown.

"What is it?" she asked pleasantly.

"Bryan!" Jeanne could feel her heart pound at the mention of his name.

He nodded. "Yes, you see . . . I'm humiliated. . . . He isn't going to marry Sandra."

Sandra straightened and raised her eyes to meet his. "What do you mean?"

"That what I said." Mart half turned away from her.

"That he's going to South America?"

Mart nodded. "Yes. He's going alone, though."

Jeanne was staring at him, bewildered. She could understand now she told me she was going with Bryan.

His voice was dull when he answered her. "I know she wanted to believe that. I believe that she was bored all along that he would marry her but . . . well, I'm sorry, Jeanne," then added bitterly, "there's never been a hope for her as far as Bryan is concerned. I'm sorry for her, does, I guess."

"But why . . ." Jeanne was breathless.

"Because it's as much my fault as Sandra's," he said quickly. "The week-end you lost your job with Mr. Mart, Bryan was out of town. He phoned before you got home and asked Sandra to give you the message. He had to be away on business. He didn't tell her what. And when he got back we told him you were gone because you didn't want to see him again . . . ever . . . and he believed it."

"What reason did she give him?" Jeanne demanded in a low voice.

"She told him you wanted to marry Lance Larkin. You see she was always crazy about Bryan and I suppose you met him."

"I remember us," Jeanne said slowly.

"You know, and she couldn't forgive you for taking him away from her."

He wasn't going out with Sandra now. You, Jeanne deliberately herself.

"They were in the same crowd, though, and she was always thought she'd always be able to get him."

Jeanne's eyes were a steely blue. "Did you know all this at the time?"

Mart bowed his head. "Yes," he admitted. "But I . . . well, I never thought with Bryan out of the way you might marry me."

"And Bryan believed it when Sandra told him I was chasing Lance Larkin."

"I don't believe he did at first but he went around to see you one evening and you were in Larkin's car in front of your house."

Jeanne nodded. "I remember." Then she looked up suddenly. "Did Bryan know about Cliff?"

"Christmas Eve on the Pioneer. That's the day after tobbercow. Why don't you get in touch with him?"

"It's too late now," she whispered more to herself than to Mart.

"What do you mean, too late? You have two more days."

Without meaning to his question, Jeanne rose. "Thank you for telling me, Mart. I'm glad to now and then she turned back to him. "Have you found a job?"

He shook his head. "No . . . I'm hesitated. . . . "I've given up looking. I'm going back to Hilton in August."

Mart was avoiding her eyes, and his face was strangely grim, but Jeanne, too wrapped in her own misery, was not aware of it.

"Now that Bryan is free," she thought bitterly, "it's too late."

On Christmas Eve, when Bryan was sailing, Jeanne MacDonald would be Mrs. Lance Larkin.

CHAPTER 37

It was after six o'clock when Jeanne got home to her room after her meeting with Mart Downes. Waiting for her was a magnificent bouquet of flowers from Lance.

Jeanne looked back at the card. The paper and dove cut the room. A great bouquet of them, with long slender stems and heavy rose buds. They filled the small room with their fragrance. Jeanne looked about helplessly. She had only one small vase and it held only a few of the flowers.

When the landlady knocked on the door and Jeanne opened it to agree that the stores had delivered Lance's thrust the flowers in her arms.

"You take these, won't you?" she asked hurriedly.

The woman gasped. They are beauties, aren't they? My, I've never seen so many. They must be for some young man who's been taking you out, Miss Jeanne."

Jeanne nodded. "I'm going to be married in a few days. I'm leaving in two days."

"Well, I hate to see you go but I certainly wish you happiness. You must have plenty of money to send for flowers like these."

After the woman left Jeanne sat down on the edge of the chair, her hands clasped in her cheeks.

"Yes," she told herself. "Lance has plenty of money but will money be enough?"

And then suddenly she rose, her eyes blazing, her chin determined. "I'll do it," she thought. "I'll make it enough."

Breathlessly she hurried down-stairs to the telephone and with shaking fingers dialled a number. It seemed a long while to her before Bryan answered.

"May I speak to Bryan Patterson, please?"

There was a pause. "I'm sorry," came the clerk's voice, "Mr. Patterson has gave up his apartment yesterday."

"Oh . . ." Jeanne's voice was dull. "Can you tell me where he has gone?"

"He left no forwarding address. I believe he is sailing for South America in a few days."

"Thank you."

Jeanne replaced the receiver and sank down on the chair beside the telephone table. Bryan had left without a word to her. And now there was no way of getting in touch with him. Jeanne realized all along that she would call him when she told Mart that it was too late. But it was too late. In two days Bryan would sail alone and she would be marrying Lance Larkin.

The telephone rang shrilly at her elbow startling her so that she almost choked with disappointment at not finding Bryan there. Jeanne lifted the receiver and then, hearing Lance's voice, she answered, trying to keep the disappointment from her voice.

Sandra shook her head. "He must have gone to a hotel or to stay with her sister. Jeanne, I'm sorry. I'll tell you the truth, Jeanne. I'd planned to get Bryan to-night. I'd planned to get him to-night. I'd planned to get him to-night. I'd planned to get him

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, July 12 (Special)—With the mercury hovering around 95 in the thermometer under the police station, many most of Trenton residents unable to leave the town sweltered until a cool west wind from Lake Ontario offered welcome relief near midnight. Although considered hot, the day was not to be compared with the corresponding date of last year, when the temperatures soared well over the century mark. July 9 in Toronto last year saw the thermometer 105 in the shade, while at Hamilton the mercury touched 110. Children not fortunate enough to attend camp enjoy swimming along the banks of the Trent River or the shores of the Bay of Quinte, in an effort to keep cool Apparently the heat wave does not affect the golfer for the attendance list at the golf house shows little change. During this weather one can't help but envy the Trenton Cold Storage workers.

Militia Off to Camp

Around noon on Thursday some forty officers and men of A Company and a number from the signals section of the Hastings Prince Edward Regiment boarded the train at the Trenton Junction for Barrie-field camp at Kingston. The men will be left ten day camp course of instruction and training instead of the five days course in previous years. In command of A Company this year are: Capt. K. W. Mathews of Stirling, Lieut. C. A. Mullen, T. S. Ketchenson, A. J. Reddick and A. H. Northgrave and H. S. Campbell, C.S.M. R. Weeks is the senior N. C. O. accompanying the local contingent.

R. of Q. T. C. Regatta Here

Regatta Day will be revived in Trenton after over twenty years when sailors and power boats gather in the Bay and on the River on July 31. Canoe and swimming races will also be held in conjunction with the meet. W. J. Fraser, Commodore of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club has donated a beautiful cup for the 14 foot dinghy open race. It is expected that Wing Commander A. E. Godfrey of the R.C.A.F. will sponsor a trophy for power boat racing. The Trenton Rotary Club committee are in charge of the prizes to be awarded the winners of some twenty events. Main attraction of the day will be a portion of the Picton Yacht Club Dominion Day Celebration programme. The day will be closed with an official dinner after which a dance will be held in the Club's recently acquired headquarters, the former "Silver Slipper" dance hall.

ROSLIN

Roslin—The regular monthly meeting of the Roslin Women's Institute was held on Thursday afternoon, July 8th., at the home of Mrs Robert Copeland. There were eleven ladies present and several children. The President Mrs. W. White presided and the meeting opened with the singing of the Institute Ode, followed by the Lord's Prayer.

The Roll Call was answered with "a Canadian Historical Event and Date". It was decided to divide the members into two groups and have a membership drive. After the business period Mrs. Stanley Carter took charge of the program and gave a most interesting talk on the motto for this month. "Let us grow lovely growing old."

The subject of the meeting was "Historical Research" and at this time various items of old jewelry were shown. Mrs Kathleen Carter gave an instrumental selection. Mrs. J. Chisholm read an article on the history of the "Scuttle Hole". All joined in singing several selections from the song sheet. The National Anthem was sung after which refreshments were served a dainty lunch and all enjoyed a social hour.

On Wednesday afternoon July 7th Mrs. W. White, President of East Hastings District Women's Institute and several ladies of the Roslin W. I. attended a "Garden Party" given by the Mohawk W. I. at the home of Mrs. Hill on the Mohawk Reserve.

A most interesting and varied programme was given, of vocal and instrumental music. Readings and tap dancing.

During the afternoon, the beautiful silver communion service which was presented to the Mohawks by Queen Anne in 1714 was shown the visitors by Mrs. Hill.

At the conclusion of the program refreshments were served.

Mr. Connell Leslie is a patient in Belleville General Hospital, where he recently underwent an operation for appendicitis.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Leslie of North Dakota are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Leslie.

Mr. Gerald Bailey is spending several weeks holidaying at Algonquin Park.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Chisholm and family spent a week at Moira Lake where Master Walter Chisholm is camping for several weeks.

SOVIET POLAR PLANE IS FLYING OVER CANADA

FLIERS EXPECT TO REACH GOAL AT DAYBREAK

Plane Following Boundary of British Columbia And Alberta

GOOD 'ATMOSPHERICS'

Constant Touch With Trio Kept Up By Stations

Seattle, July 12 (AP)—The Army Signal Corps Alaska communications office here received its first message direct from the Russian transpolar fliers at 9:36 a.m. today when the plane reported itself at latitude 58 degrees 30 minutes and longitude 120. Army officers said this indicated the plane had reached northern British Columbia between Port Nelson and Hudson's Hope.

Port Nelson is in the northeast corner of British Columbia; Hudson's Hope, in the Peace River area to the southwest, is near the Alberta border and about 200 miles from the United States.

Result Prince By 4 a.m.

At the rate they have been flying, the fliers should reach the Pacific Coast sector about 7:36 p.m. M.S.T. and San Francisco by 4 a.m. Wednesday E.D.T., army officers said.

Edmonton, July 13 (CP)—Port Smith, N.W.T., Royal Canadian Corps of Signals intercepted a message today from the Russian transpolar plane from Moscow to San Francisco via the North Pole which said that at 11:38 a.m. E.D.T. the plane was at longitude 130, latitude 61. This would place it 940 miles northwest of Edmonton.

This location is approximately at the intersection of the British Columbia, Alberta and Northwest Territories boundaries.

Edmonton, July 12 (CP)—Russian airplane on a projected 6,000 mile non-stop flight from Moscow to San Francisco reported its position at latitude 66 and longitude 132 in a message picked up at 8 a.m. E.D.T. today by Port Norman, N.W.T., station of the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals, Major Smith, D.S.O., stations also intercepted the message.

EDEN OFFERS WAY OUT OF DILEMNA TO AMBASSADORS

Non - Intervention Committee Will Meet Friday

AERIAL WARFARE

Both Sides In Spain Claim Victory In Spectacular Fight

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

London, July 13 (CP)—Great Britain drafted a solution in a last effort today to piece together the tattered remnants of Spanish non-intervention.

This afternoon Foreign Secretary Eden sees the Ambassadors of Germany, Italy, France and Soviet Russia and submits to them the British proposals and invites their views. The non-intervention committee itself probably will be called into session Friday.

Should the plan fail, Great Britain and France, it is predicted, will resume full freedom of action.

Neutral observers have been with drawn from both the Nationalist and French frontiers of Spain pending a decision on the new scheme.

300 Planes In Action.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier July 13 (AP)—Both Spanish governments today claimed spectacular victory today after one of the greatest of the civil war's aerial engagements.

More than 200 planes were report ed to have participated in a score of encounters that revolved about Madrid, an attempt by rebel insurgent siege forces on the capital's western front.

A communique from Insurgent headquarters said thirteen government planes were brought down yesterday.

Government sources insisted Madrid's air force "still held marked superiority in the air." They said the insurgents' land and communications around Navalcarnero.

The main forces of the government and Insurgent fleets met in the sky over Brunete yesterday.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Sea breezes! Blowing in from a cooler ocean these breezes delight and resuscitate the hot and tired human on the seashore. They are most pronounced on sunny days. This is because the land absorbs radiation from the sun faster than water. The air over the land consequently becomes warmer than that over the adjacent ocean. The land air then rises and the top part flows toward the ocean while the cooler surface ocean air flows landward. This condition often brings about a 10-degree drop in temperature for the people on the shore. The sea breeze has been detected as much as 200 miles inland, but its greatest effect is felt near the shore.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, July 13—Showery or high over the Great Lakes and in Ontario and Quebec, but fair to moderately warm in the lower Mackenzie Valley, while shallow depressions are moving from the west ward of the Great Lakes, off the middle Atlantic coast and in the west coast of Hudson Bay. Thunderstorms have occurred in Ontario, Quebec and southern Manitoba while in many parts of other districts it has been cooler. Elsewhere the weather has been fair except that local showers occurred over northwestern Ontario, the districts of Keewatin, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Temperatures have been moderate throughout the Dominion.

Lake Superior—Mostly cloudy with local thunderstorms today and Wednesday; moderate to fresh east and southeast winds, becoming variable on Wednesday.

Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta—Not much change in temperature.

Saskatchewan and Alberta — Mostly fair today and Wednesday; probably scattered showers, chiefly in southern districts.

63 PLANES POISE FOR WIDE SEARCH

Survey Area of 36,000 Square Miles In Earhart Search

Honolulu, July 13 (AP)—Greatest war air force ever assembled by the United States for a peace-time mission—63 planes—was poised today ready to affix along the mid-Pacific route in the navy's last search for Amelia Earhart, missing seven days.

If weather conditions are favorable the planes will zoom from the aircraft carrier Lexington to survey an area of 36,000 square miles centering about bleak Howland Island.

It was Howland Island, a dot of land rising but two feet above the water, that the aviatrix and her navigator, Frederick J. Noonan, aimed for when they took off from Lae, New Guinea—a flight of 2,570 miles. Their last radio message on July 2 said they were within 100 miles of their goal, that they couldn't see land and their fuel supply was almost exhausted.

ANGERED FATHER FIRES AT YOUTH

Bullets Fired In Police Station Missed Boy Accused of Crimes

Chicago, July 13 (AP) — Henry Hundreiser, 37, walked calmly into the Summerdale police station early today and fired four shots at John Ardelean, 17, held on charges of raping, beating and stabbing his nine-year-old daughter.

The shots missed although fired at a distance of three feet.

Last Friday when Hundreiser faced Ardelean at the police station for the first time after his arrest, he suddenly struck the youth on the jaw.

The girl is recovering from 33 stabbings. She was stabbed 17 times in the chest with an icepick, and three were seven head cuts, receiving 25 stitches. She was also stabbed and slashed on the back and arms with a pair of pruning shears.

The grand jury was reported to have probed the case for rape and assault to kill against young Ardelean yesterday with bail at $50,000.

THREE KILLED AS AIRPLANE CRASHES

Pilot And Two Passengers On Way To Glorious Twelfth' Victims

Nipawin, Sask., July 13 (CP) — Three persons were killed when an airplane, carrying passengers at a "glorious twelfth" celebration, crashed from 300 feet into a temporary landing field on a farm near this town 75 miles east of Prince Albert.

Bodies of Pilot Ewart L. Andrus, 23, of Star City, Sask., and his two passengers, Dorothy Pedersen, 17, of Petaigan, Sask., and Archie Pomeroy, 20, Carrot River, Sask., were taken from the wrecked plane.

Gliding to a landing on the field a mile from Nipawin, the plane went into a nose dive at an altitude of 200 feet and crashed. An inquest will be held.

Andrus, son of W. R. Andrus, a farmer of Star City, 50 miles south of Nipawin, owned the plane and trained last year as a pilot at Regina. This summer he had "barnstormed" in northeastern Saskatchewan. He had a private pilot's license.

FRANCE SUSPENDS BORDER CONTROL

Keeps Frontier Closed To Passage of Foreign Volunteers

Paris, July 13 (CP-HAVAS)—The French government today suspended international control of the Franco-Spanish border.

Conformity with non-intervention pledges, however, France kept her frontier closed to passage of foreign volunteers as well as arms, munitions and other materials banned by the 27-power non-intervention committee.

Last night, Colonel Lunn, head of non-intervention control on the French Pyrenees frontier, announced all neutral observers there to leave their posts at noon today and gather at specified points several miles within French territory.

Today's move constituted enforcement of the French government's decision to withdraw international control of the frontier as long as Portugal refused to permit British observers to exercise their functions along the Portuguese-Spanish frontier.

MAN BLUDGEONED NOT SHOT, FOUND AFTER AN AUTOPSY

Edward Kassirer, Fort Erie Taxi Driver Is Victim

FIND FINGERPRINTS

Movements of Driver Traced To Certain Time

Fort Erie, Ont., July 13 (CP)—Theory Edward Kassirer, 36-year-old Fort Erie taxi driver, died from a bullet wound was discarded today after an autopsy conducted by Dr. T. W. O'Mahoney, Fort Erie, and Dr. George R. Stuart, coroner of Ridgeway.

The doctors expressed the belief the man was bludgeoned, and not shot as police believed when he was found lying behind a thorn hedge on Albany street in Fort Erie beach district. There was a gaping wound in the back of the head and it was thought this was caused by a bullet entering the temple and spread as it passed through the brain.

Dr. Buiters of Fort Erie who assisted in the autopsy said examination of the forehead showed what police thought was a bullet wound on the temple was likely caused when Kassirer was either struck with a sharp instrument or was dragged, striking it on the thorn bushes.

In referring to the wound at the back of the head, Dr. Buiters said: "We have absolutely established the fact that he was bludgeoned possibly with a heavy instrument like a hammer. No bullet was found in the body or in the abandoned taxi cab."

The doctors expressed the belief the bullet wound occurred inside of his taxi cab and then struck another place as he lay in the field where he was found.

Trace Movements.

In efforts to trace the man's movements yesterday police learned he had been in the Buffalo Grand Hotel opposite the ferry where the taxi driver is known to have driven. The driver was discovered by two Buffalo police officers shortly after noon yesterday. Four prints were those of the driver. Police would not say if the fifth print was identified.

The print was of a thumb mark on the right door of the car. Police today learned the car was driven from Hardiston about 1.15 p.m. yesterday discussed fingerprints and other statements in conference this morning.

New Theory Presented.

Provincial and city police, under Inspector Albert Hunt, conducted an effort to trace the driver's movements after leaving the ferry. Hardiston said until he was found behind the hedge, two boys and Hardiston admitted that he had been asleep for 30 minutes after he was found.

Fort Erie Chief Ferguson presented the theory Kassirer might have been slain by the same person who killed Elson Grant, 20, Dunnville, 47, in his Buffalo home last Thursday. Parsons, native of Dunnville, was also buried in the Ontario city today.

Parsons, refrigerator repairman, was found by his family at seven o'clock last Thursday. He was bludgeoned in the same manner as Kassirer. No weapon was found in the home and so far police have no clue to the slayer.

Five Japanese Bombers Bombarding Airdrome South of Ancient City

Attack Began According To Chinese At 3.00 A. M.

REPORTS DELAYED

Assault On Peiping Made By Garrisons of Two Posts

Tientsin, China, July 13 (AP)—Thirteen bombed Japanese troops from the East Hopei and Pengtai Railway Junction garrisons began today a concerted and direct attack on China's ancient and walled city of Peiping.

Peiping, China, July 13 (AP)—Five Japanese bombers, Chinese sources reported today, bombed the Nanyuan barracks and airdrome eight miles south of this ancient city.

Attacks Began At Dawn.

The aerial attack, according to the Chinese informants, occurred between 3 and 4 p.m. (3 and 4 a.m. E.D.T.).

The first first became known here late in the day, delayed because telephone communications with Nanyuan were cut during yesterday's fighting.

They threw themselves against the Chinese defenders of the four eastern and southern gates, but the Chinese, semi-official Chinese reports said, withstood the assault.

Virtual Blockade.

The Japanese were forced to content themselves with establishing a virtual blockade of two sides of Peiping.

The Japanese also succeeded in cutting communication and supply lines between Peiping and Nanyuan barracks, immediately to the south.

The two Chinese brigades stationed there were cut off from other units of the Chinese 29th route army, except by a southern and roundabout route.

Chinese troops succeeded in removing sections of railway track during the night, however, and nearly walls of Peiping, to prevent the approach of Japanese armored trains.

CALEDONIA IS ON WAY TO BOTWOOD

Will Start From Newfoundland On Return Flight To Jersey

Montreal, July 13 (CP)—Imperial Airways' flying boat Caledonia lifted from a rippling St. Lawrence River today at 8:13 a.m. E.D.T. and headed for Botwood, Nfld., to start the return flight across the Atlantic.

Capt. A. S. Wilcockson and his three-man crew brought the giant craft a half-hour before the start from this river haven, 16 miles south of Montreal. Yesterday the Caledonia arrived last Thursday after flying from Foynes, the trans-Atlantic base. The big ship glided across the river, rising sharply into an easterly wind of about 20-mile velocity, and began retracing the route to be used on regular service, probably next year.

GERMAN SHIPS AT CAGLIARI

Rome, July 13 (AP)—German warships were concentrated at Cagliari today, at the southern end of Sardinia. They included the battleship Graf Spee, the cruiser Nurnberg, two destroyers and two auxiliary boats. Naval circles said the ships were refueling here before returning to Spanish waters.

British Note To Washington On Eastern Crisis?

Washington, July 13 (AP)—Secretary of State Hull said today he had received a communication from the British government, which was believed to contain a suggestion of the desirability of international consultation concerning the Far Eastern situation.

He declined, however, to disclose the nature or text of the note, or what reply was made by the United States.

The secretary said the communication was received after he had talked yesterday with the Japanese Ambassador and the Counselor of the Chinese Embassy.

He added he believed action already taken here made any further moves unnecessary.

(The State Department announced late yesterday Secretary Hull had told the Japanese and Chinese envoys an armed conflict between Japan and China would be a great blow to the cause of peace and world progress).

HEPBURN CANCELS ORDER ISSUED ON HIGHWAY JOB

Says Order Was Ill-Advised' Step

NO AUTHORITY GIVEN

Order Would Have Replaced Farmers On Roads

Toronto, July 13 (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario today announced he would immediately rescind an order instructing employment service heads to replace farmer and lumber men working on highway jobs with city jobless or men not from the land.

The order sent out from the office of H. C. Hudson, general superintendent of the labor department, was described by the premier as being "ill-advised". As Minister of Labor, the premier added, he had not given authority for such instructions.

First Knowledge of Order.

When G. Z. Langan, employment service superintendent, announced in Stratford radio speech he received the order from Mr. Hudson's office, it was the premier's first intimation of such a step.

Mr. Hepburn explained 50 per cent of those employed on highway construction are required to be taken from relief lists. At the same time the premier stressed the fact that there was great need of farm help.

Shortage of Help.

"It is quite true, of course, there is a shortage of farm help and the government is making every effort to cope with this problem," he declared. "But the fact remains farmers are urged to pay the provincial highways and should not be discriminated against. The farmers are to be treated as everyone else."

Loyalist Armies Are Pounding Insurgents on Three Fronts

Air Power of Unusual Strength Possessed By Government

VALENCIA BOMBED.

Madrid, July 13 (AP)—Government offensives, bolstered by air power the Madrid forces never before have shown, hammered at insurgent lines today on three separate fronts.

Waves of government fighting planes, supported by armored tanks and machine-gunned troops near Villanueva Del Pardillo, making it virtually impossible for them to send reinforcements to the front west of Madrid.

On the Basque front in northern Spain, government airplanes flew low over the Insurgents' sig-nag line from Somorrostro on the Santander highway to the Vizcaian sector.

Defenders Counter-Attack.

Basque and Asturian troops defending Santander against General Franco's northwest drive launched a counter-offensive under cover of aerial protection.

Government forces also pressed their attack on the Zaragoseguel front southeast of Madrid. They were reported to have penetrated Alberrachin, 23 miles west of Teruel, and to be within the outskirts of Lillo, Alpartin, only eleven miles from Zaragoza.

Three Insurgent bombers raided the port of Valencia, scene of the Spanish central government, dropping several bombs along the waterfront.

Three persons were killed, several others injured and some buildings destroyed before government anti-aircraft batteries drove off the raiding craft.

The squadron, apparently abandoning plans for a second attack after flying down the coast, turned toward the sea and disappeared.

The estimated deficit of $2,479,177 for the coming year would be met out of grants-in-aid received from England, the budget speech declared.

TRAILER BREAKS AWAY FROM MAIN TRUCK.

Becoming loosened from its fastenings, a large trailer, attached to the rear of a Smith Transport truck, crashed into the ditch along the Marysville-Tank highway No. 2, about 6.00 a.m. today. The transport was in charge of driver R. J. Pettinger, Toronto. Motorcycle Patrolman Jean Mercier discovered and found the couplings between the semi-trailer and the final trailer had broken allowing the trailer to break loose. Fortunately no traffic was approaching from the opposite direction as the trailer veered sharply across the road towards the north and crashed heavily into the ditch. It was a loaded trailer with perishable goods aboard. An auxiliary truck of the Smith Company from the Belleville depot assisted in clearing away the wreckage. No person was injured during the accident, however.

SLIGHTLY FED UP WITH WORK ON FARM

Harold Wingham, one time resident of Kingston district, a teller at the local Employment Service of Canada office this morning, is slightly fed up with the business of farming—particularly in haying time—he is quite willing to admit.

It wasn't quite the work on the farm that caused Harold to register at the office, but the fact that he was dreamed of by their forefathers. It was evident by the arrival of a dozen or more members of some family in the city last evening.

Transported in an ultra streamlined trailer drawn by a sleek, expensive car, the family whose incredible members were dressed in the colorful garb and large earrings of Old Italy, halted for dinner at a downtown restaurant. They are en route from the east to Hamilton, where an annual meeting of Ontario members of the clan of fraternities will be held next week.

CANNING FACTORIES IN FULL PRODUCTION

Canning factories in this section have swung into full production on the canning of peas during the past week or so, with many of them reported working overtime in an effort to keep up with orders received. At Frankford the Canadian Canners plant has instituted a twenty-four hour shift. Crops of peas in the district have not attained the heavy maturity at first expected owing to considerable acreage being plowed by the pea louse or maggot, declared a particular pest this season.

TOWERS OF CHURCH BEING RE-DECORATED

Steps of pedestrians were hesitant and faces peered upward along Bridge and Church Streets to the towers of Bridge Street United Church this morning as a crew of workmen of a local plumbing concern working at a dizzy height on what appeared to be the frailest of supports, commenced the task of cleaning and repainting the top-most sections of the church towers. This task comparable with the best efforts of experienced steeplejacks were being performed by Richard Gale and Harry Firth, two of the men elected for the higher work.

FLIERS EXPECT

"Everything All Right"

"Everything all right," stated the message from the plane, second Soviet aircraft to essay the hazardous long distance flight over the North Pole within a month.

The plane veered slightly to the west in the vicinity of Akkavik, N. W. T. about 1,460 miles north of Edmonton, it was indicated from a comparison with a previous position reported by the airmen.

Ideal flying weather and excellent wireless conditions from the Canadian Arctic south favored the Russian airplane today as it roared down the Mackenzie River valley bound for San Francisco on a 6,000-mile non-stop flight over the North Pole from Moscow.

Absence of Atmospherics.

Royal Canadian Corps of Signals operators from Aklavik south to Edmonton reported wireless reception good with an absence of atmospherics which played havoc with communications between planes and the ground when another Soviet monoplane attempted a similar flight in June.

Visibility was good at all points along the Mackenzie and in northern Alberta and British Columbia. Temperatures ranged from 54 to 80 in the far north and were higher in the near north around Fort Smith, N.W.T. There was no wind at Aklavik, Fort Simpson or Fort Norman.

An Early Message

Fort Smith, N.W.T.—Alaska communications at Seattle reported it had received a message from the Soviet airplane indicating they were about 1,000 miles this side of the pole.

The message received at 3:56 a.m. (E.D.T.) said:

"My position is Strait of Melville, everything all right. Signed Danilin."

Fly Through Cyclone Area

Soaring through snowstorms and a cyclone area, where terrific winds buffeted the plane, the Pilots crossed the North Pole yesterday less than 24 hours after leaving Moscow.

The airmen—Pilot Mikhail Gromoff; Co-pilot Andrei Yumoheff, and Navigator Sergei Danilin—followed a trail blazed three weeks ago by three countrymen in a similar plane who flew 5,288 miles to Vancouver, Wash. where they landed with but ten gallons of fuel.

Flying 8,000 Feet High

The present flight, with San Francisco as the goal may end either here or at some other Pacific Coast City, depending on weather conditions and fuel consumption aboard the plane. It is approximately 6,000 miles by air across the north pole from Moscow to San Francisco.

Flying more than 8,000 feet in the air to escape snow and a cyclone area, the plane soared over the polar region and out across the bleak ice cap for the northern Canadian shores, 1,500 miles southward.

The fliers planned to follow a course along the 120th Meridian which would bring them across the central portion of the District of Mackenzie, along the eastern border of British Columbia, over Central Washington and Oregon and into California.

Ontario Orangemen Put Aside Their Colorful Regalia for Year

'Gen. Ellis, Cordova Mines, Drops Dead At Campbellford

MANY "WALKS"

(By The Canadian Press)

Ontario Orangemen today put aside their colorful regalia, their fifes and their drums after a Coronation Year edition of the Battle of the Boyne. Many thousands crowded parks to hear officers high in the Loyal Orange Lodge deliver "glorious twelfth" messages.

Ottawa, Toronto and Chatham were focal points for the 267th annual observance. Chatham's Tecumseh Park held 18,000 from many Western Ontario points, while in Lansdowne Park, Ottawa, twice that number attended. Two hundred lodges were represented in the vast throng in Exhibition Park, Toronto.

Orange heroes were recalled by Sir Richard Squires, Grand Master of the Grand Orange Lodge of British North America, and by Hon. Karl Lawson, Ontario Minister of Agriculture and Grand Master of North Simcoe, who addressed the Chatham gathering.

More British Immigrants.

Mr. Lawson, declaring two non-British subjects were admitted to Canada last year for every British immigrant, urged the Dominion government to admit at least an equal number of British immigrants as those from foreign countries, "if Canada is to be maintained as a British country."

Sir Richard lauded that English be made the world language as it stood for "constitutional freedom, self-determination, liberty of conscience and thought."

Grand Treasurer Robert Hardy-Small, also speaking at Toronto, urged Orangemen to bind themselves "for another fight for civil and public schools". The gathering passed unanimously a resolution reaffirming the order's stand for nondenominational public schools for all as opposed to church schools.

Other highlights:

Northern Ontario: At South River 1,000 from North Bay and district joined brethren from Mpindindge and Parry Sound. East Algoma celebrated at Desbarats.

Niagara: At Kitchener, Galt and Preston sent hundreds to large gatherings.

Campbellford—28 lodges representedd: Director George Ellis, 58, Cordova Mines, dropped dead. Hot weather brought on a heart seizure.

Ottawa: Thousands from Montreal and other Quebec points represented: 10 lodges sent double-decked marriedr barges of Protestants and Roman Catholics, preceded by a Rochester, N.Y., speaker.

Chatham—Premier Hepburn's "retreat from the sales tax" and provincial school tax issue provided occasion for re-asserting Protestant principles as between separate and public schools; was also Orange opposition, it is held, Windsor, a Past Grand Master of the Royal Black Knights, failed to attend Chatham gathering; 54 lodges and 25 bands in parade.

Newton Robinson — Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative leader, speaking here during a tour of Europe's peace depends on Great Britain's might.

Napanee—2,000 paraded; among those present was Henry R. Purnell, Colbrook, 98, for 87 years a member of the Order.

THESE NORTH POLE CROSSING

Mitchell Grosnoff, (Above), one of Soviet Russia's greatest long-distance fliers, left Chelkovo airport, Moscow, accompanied by a navigator and radio operator, in an attempt to better the recent flight of his fellow countrymen to San Francisco via the North Pole. Grosnoff, who is a hero of the Soviet Union and holds the Order or Lenin, recently flew for 75 hours non-stop and without refilling, covering 7,007 miles at an average speed of 102 M.P.H. Soviet Russia claimed a world record for distance and endurance on the flight. Cramoff intimated he would land at San Francisco or Los Angeles if he succeeds in crossing the pole safely.

WNU Service

When I disconnected my radio and went down to Aunt Ella's at New Meadows for a rest, David De Witt Clinton Sturges, postmaster and constable, drove me up from the station and I swear we walked ten minutes for a big gray car to turn around.

I met my suitcase down at Ella's and stepped out to the spotheary's to get the scene of those waiting permits. When Bateman was a doing of my mirth I yearned into the street. "Who's, that?" says I, pointing at the man who had dared us at the depot (flashy he was and wearing boon spectacles).

"Oh," sniffs Bateman, "that's E. Todd Mansfield, bank man—goips to camp flashy. He's awful clever. Makes his own money, he does."

"Mebbe," says I, "but I don't like a mouse face! Who's the girl lallygagging with him?"

"Hah! Aside from most of the mill folks, but people say Todd's too clever a fellow for her to catch!"

"Then perhaps I'll have a chance," says I, "under paint and powder. Might be kinder handsome. Been working into a sooty stovepipe, too!"

"Well," sighs Bateman. "Dave Rogers has been running after her for a year and she not caring a snap."

The next day they sent down about $26,000 in cold cash to the bank in one of those square autos with bitnick; said it was rail money. Naturally, the town felt rich!

Toward dusk I met Dave hurrying along with a fancy confidence.

"What may that be?" I asked.

"That's a searchlight," he chuckled.

"Are you going in for theatricals?"

"Nuva, I'm going for batteries." Well, I was glad to settle down at half past ten. Around midnight an auto roused me. I dosed and listened to the village clock strike two. Suddenly an owl called hoo-o, hoo, hoo, hoo, hoo-o-o. In a minute the owl called again, exactly as before—three times, three long, three short.

Then, quick as anti, I saw a reflection on the curtain, and I got up. A searchlight shone full on two figures on the steps of the bank, with their hands upraised.

"Hands up!" commanded Dave's voice. "One move an' I'll put a hole, of lead in ye". I was all a-trembling. The lights went out in the front yard was a motorcycle officer. He flew in.

I couldn't find my stockings. Ella was up. By the time I got across the street, the burglars were handcuffed. And it was E. Todd Mansfield—I wasn't surprised—and the other a stranger called Tinker Anderson. A boy told me Rogers had trapped them all alone but tipped off to Dave to be ready.

Mansfield smiled. "Gentlemen," he said, ignoring David, "this is a mistake. As cashier I was merely removing the funds to my own house, fearing a possible contemplated—"

"Why the gun?" demanded Darid, picking a little black thing from Mansfield's pocket. "Better take that, Captain Murphy!"

"You dogtowner," snarled Mansfield.

"Ah," continued Rogers, coolly. "Fair enough. Have you a postal card with you, E. Todd?"

Never a word from Mansfield.

"Search him," suggested the captain.

Sure enough, there was a card, and a railroad ticket fell to the ground—a ticket north, for the next morning. The officer puzzled with this card and spelled it out in the dim light.

"There! mort know ille certh ta radarsi!"

"What is this, Rogers," asked the captain. "Arab or Gypsy?"

"Wal," said Rogers, slyly, "in the radio game some me of reading mail. Read it backward, and it makes, 'Tuesday at three, will work from mail?' The current answered, 'That's how I got onto this mess," said David. "And for those who've all buildings here, the bank would be worked from the front, for the back is solid wall. Therefore, here's a key in the door. Mr. E. Todd got it yesterday."

For early morning quite a crowd had gathered and I noticed this Josie Kammell had driven up with her father. After he had gotten out I could see that her interest had shifted to the country "constable."

"Just as soon as I get a chance I buttonholed David.

"Good job," said I. "Did it yourself?"

"Oh yes'm," he smiled.

"But there was a funny owl," said I, "sending radio!"

"Twas that was me," slad the boy. "We'rd agreed on it as a signal. Dave's a fine fellow, Miss Ella—an' you'll pardon me," he said, standing decently. "something—something is going to happen to you!"

"To me," I said, feeling a cold chill. "Mercy, what?" And could you believe it? That old Josie skirt I'd put on in a hurry was pretty nearly off. She was so excited.

"I, willdrow" and the fascinating girl was right behind David. I just turned her and, "Twirl, you're a hundred apologies. Paw-paw says you'd better come over to our house and take coffee."

ENROL MEMBERS IN SALVATION ARMY

Sunday was a very busy day in Salvation Army circles in this city, with a good attendance to all services.

On Sunday morning the Loyal Orange Lodges from the surrounding district held their Divine Service at the C.O.B.C.Hall and at this service there was a very fine attendance. Special music was rendered by the Salvation Army band under the baton of Bandmaster David Wardle. The service was in charge of the Commanding Officer Adjutant Alderman, assisted by the Rev. A. L. Geen of Christ Church.

Sunday Evening's Service

The evening service was one of very special importance as it was known as an Enrolment Service when five new members were made of the local Salvation Army Corps. The ceremony was conducted by Adjutant Alderman, and once again in spite of inclement weather a good crowd was present. No man or woman is ever made a member of the organization until they have signed the "Articles of War," which were first laid down by the Founder of the Army, General William Booth, and these even yet are most closely adhered to. Prior to the Enrolment a number of very fine choruses were sung, and at the close of the ceremony the congregation all stood, and sang the rousing Salvation chorus: "I'll Be True to the Yellow, Red and Blue."

The sermon was preached by the Adjutant, and the local band and songsters rendered appropriate music.

After-Church Street Service

Recently during the warm weather the Salvation Army band and Comrades gather at the corner of Victoria Avenue and Front Street and hold an After-Church service of all request numbers featuring the favourite hymns of any who wish to have them sung. Large crowds have been attending these services, and again last night a very large crowd was on hand, and so if you have not had your favorite hymn sung for a long time you might drop along and attend the Front Street Hymni Service on Sunday nights and enjoy the good old hymns.

And one again through the columns of this paper we wish to remind you that the Salvation Army is always at your service and if you wish spiritual advice or any other help you always made welcome at the Army, no hour too late or too early for the Salvation Army.

POLICE BLOTTER

Only one arrest was necessary in Stirling yesterday during the celebration of the "Glorious Twelfth," one revellor being apprehended on a charge of intoxication and lodged in the cell block at the police station in Belleville for trial.

Out in Marmora, however, a little trouble was experienced when police authorities arrested an inebriate. It is alleged by authorities that a man who gave his name as Arthur Hamilton, Marmora Township, interfered with the festivities, with the result, that Hamilton was also taken into custody and appeared before a Justice of the Peace, being charged with obstructing a police officer while in the course of his duties. Both cases were enlarged until Monday next at Madoc. Hamilton being detained in the Belleville police station today.

A transient, who gave the name of Thomas Conley, was arrested in Belleville last evening on a charge of intoxication. He appeared before Magistrate Wills, sitting as a Peace, and was remanded in custody until Friday, a portion of a bottle of wine was found in his possession, police revealed.

A pleasant time was spent on Thursday, July 8th (Anniversary Day), when Melville Ladies' Aid entertained the members and friends of Burr's, Bowermans' and Group 3 of Consecon. Besides flowers that were sent by the members, many flags were draped both outside and inside the church, in honor of the country's 70th birthday. An instruction of Boy Scouts, Friendship of American invasions, the United States flag, the Stars and Stripes was also taken by comedy.

A vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. A. Carley and seconded by Mrs. Orange Carley, and those who had contributed to the programme.

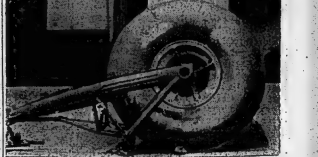
"KEEPING BOOKS" on The COST OF A CAR

What does it cost to own a car? That depends upon where you buy the car as much as upon what make or model you choose.

People buy new or used cars here, and bring their cars here for service and supplies, because they have found that it saves them money, time and trouble to keep their automobile business in the same place.

Our business is not merely the selling of cars—rather it consists of selling automobile transportation. The customer who wants his brakes relined, his ignition job, or any service operation is just as important a customer here as the one who buys a new car. And these steady customers save money because the longer we serve them the better we can do it.



Drop in and take a ride in the new Pontiac or McLaughlin Buick. And see a real automobile store.

BRIGHT HARVEST OUTLOOK IN ONTARIO

Crop conditions in this province are of the very best. With continuance of favorable weather, the harvest is likely to be one of the best in history. The crops had a good start this spring with the moist weather which prevailed and there has as a result been an excellent growth.

Those who are at the head of industries and in business know the great impetus which springs from bountiful harvests which create a hopeful and confident attitude towards business and economic conditions generally. In the days of the depression, this inspiration of fair prices for good crops was lacking and consequently the more confident attitude was lacking.

It is well for the people of this province to realize in what happy condition things are in Ontario with its great manufacturing and industrial development, and its strong place in the agricultural industry. It must not be forgotten that Ontario has a treasury of wealth in its rocks, which contain the most precious and the base metals in Crowsnest like quantities. The history of the mining development of Ontario is one of the marvels of modern development. Ontario also owns a rich heritage in its timbers and its lakes and streams and its power resources.

From the standpoint of natural wealth Ontario is great, in farming, in mining, in forest riches and it possesses a population which has the initiative to utilize and develop the wealth which nature has put at its door. As world nations today size up greatness, Ontario has all the elements of importance and besides she possesses other values which are not given the same status by some peoples whose ambitions have been thwarted from development along peaceful arts—it has a settled population, contented with the development of its natural products for the good of itself and the world. One of these is in the harvests of the province, which go to the four corners of earth.

Good crops in Ontario mean much to the rest of Canada, for in the Dominion there is a sharing in some measure of blessings and adversities. Some parts have run into lean times and it is the task of the more fortunate parts to help as individuals and en masse. This has been done before and will be done while there is need.

With such sources of wealth in so many forms, the people needs must be an industrious people to have achieved their present position.

WRONGSIDE ROAD PICTURES

Picture the highway at its worst—that is the highway with its story of death and injury and destruction! That is what the Motor Vehicles Branch of the Department of Highways has been doing on the back of a report called "Ontario Traffic News."

Would that every motorist for his own safety and for that of every other person had the ability to conjure up such scenes. Such an ability would prevent accidents did the motorist thoroughly believe such scenes could be. It is hard to realize that such a tragedy can happen to you or yours. But it does happen. Countless crashes prove that to be true.

Why should not motorists be sent to school to be shown pictures, indicating the dire results of bad judgment, or carelessness in the operation of cars? But they can at least go to their own school of imagination.

Think of a crash of a car with another, the rending screams of the brakes, the sound of impact, the screams of the victims! It takes more than a mere picture. It requires a sound effect and a mental appreciation. It requires imagination to realize accidents to the number of 11,388 occurred in Ontario last year.

It is not nice to think of 546 caskets containing dead bodies of men, women and children, who once lived, sent to their early graves in a hurry in an accident. 546 funerals tell a terrible story. To see them all incorporated into one, the people might well cry out to have the victims blotted from their sight, lest it scar their brains. Yet over the roads of Ontario over ten of these fatal processions move on to the cities of the dead every week, every funeral one of a highway victim.

A population of 10,351 with all the sufferings of which they are capable, a hospital of over ten thousand cases of mangled and shocked bodies, requiring treatment. Who would want to see and pass through day after day such a sightmare of sights!

A picture of collisions with 1,127 bicycles is horrible to contemplate.

A picture of 303 collisions with horse-drawn vehicles, 452 collisions with other motorcars, 184 crossing accidents, 988 fixed objects run into and 612 crashes in which only the one car figured—what don't these mean?

What a picture of desolation is thus depicted in the mind's eye! Yet this is actually what occurred on the roads of Ontario. But not everyone in Ontario saw or realized this.

An alert imagination which appreciates the dangers of faulty driving would do much to eliminate the toll of horrors on the highways.

He retired from the ring at the age of 66 and gloried in the fact that now he could be a musician. It is said that Mace often pulled his punches so as not to injure his fingers, lest it interfere with his beloved violin playing, hence fights went farther than they would otherwise. He died in 1910 at the age of 79, five feet, eight inches high, and weighing 168 pounds but taking on all comers and all weights including that pugilistic giant, six feet, three inches, Tom King, thereby winning the championship of England and claim to the world title.

Illicit Liquor Said Scourge In "Dry" Area

Bootleggers Started as Soon as Hotels Closed, Fenelon Falls Rector Declares

Lindsay, April 1 (Special)—Trade in illicit spirits in Fenelon Falls, Bobcaygeon and neighboring districts was the background of two tricts was the background of two cases in police court here yesterday.

In the first case, Fred Gubbins of Fenelon Falls was charged with assaulting his wife. Crown Attorney J. Anderson stated that Mrs. Gubbins was badly beaten by her husband that she could not show herself in public. The accused told the court that he had obtained bootleg gin in the village, and afterwards did not know what he was doing. He was given two years' suspended sentence by Magistrate Lee on condition that he abstain from drinking.

Archibald Johnston of Verulam Township was charged by Corporal T. J. Woods, R.C.M.P., with allowing a still to be operated on his premises. Last week Evan Freepremises. Last week Evan Freeborn was sentenced to 18 months in the Reformatory for operating the still. The charge against Johnston was dismissed when defense counsel claimed that the farm was owned by an estate and that Johnston was not alone responsible for the actions of the tenant.

After the court session, Rev. L. F. Geary, rector of St. James' Anglican Church, Fenelon Falls, told The Telegram that he was certain there were many bootleggers operating in Fenelon Falls. "We voted out the beverage rooms there, but sometimes I think it would have been better if we had left them alone. At least there was a measure of control. But since the hotels were closed the bootleggers started to operate, and there is absolutely no control. Bootlegging is becoming a menace to the community."

. . . and all this need never have happened

Here and now in Ontario people are learning all over again that you cannot make people "good" by law . . .

Sincere but mistaken reformists play into the hands of the vilest elements . . . they create unnecessary crimes and new criminals, by depriving decent citizens of the chance to obtain legally the wholesome relaxation of a glass of beer.

May we remind them of what were the conditions thirteen years ago just before the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act. We quote from a newspaper article published in October 1924:

"The law has not stopped drunkenness in Ontario. It has not stopped bootlegging. It has not stopped young people from carrying the "hip flask". It has not stopped hi-jacking. It has not stopped the bootlegger from collecting all the profit. It has not lowered the taxes of the Province. . . . It has not prevented the debauchery of young girls in dance halls and automobiles from drinking bootleg whiskey. . . In not one particular has Prohibition in Ontario performed what its advocates hoped for, promised for it, and doubtless believed it would accomplish".

Let us not make these things true again!

THIRTY LODGES PASS IN REVIEW AT STIRLING WALK

All of Southern Part of County Represented In Parade

6,000 IN VILLAGE

Improvement In Education al Institutions Theme of Addresses

Stirling, July 12—(Special)—One of the largest crowds of people ever to assemble in the village of Stirling lined the streets and waited patiently for a belated Orange parade, belated because of the large number of lodges present to take part. Over thirty lodges from all parts of Hastings County stretched out for over a mile marching at close quarters, spirited horses bearing gaily garbed District Marshals, fife and drum bands, and gaily decorated cars and floats formed the procession, which got under way shortly before two o'clock and lasted till after four. Assembling at the exhibition park the various bands swarmed up their instruments as they stood in small groups. Then came the signal to fall in and Stirling Citizens Band took displace at the head of the fine parade directly behind Bro Burton Bateman of Springbrook L.O.L. No. 443, County Marshal, mounted on a spirited horse, which pranced to the sound of the brass band. Next came cars bearing the veterans of the Loyal Orange Lodge, who having walked in many demonstrations found the walk on this occasion to long and strenuous in the heat of the sun, but they were there with faces displaying their loyalty to a fraternity, which is a part of their very life. Cars lined both sides of the road during the entire route of march and the gaily garbed members of the lodges with banners and streamers were given a great hand for their display by an enthusiastic crowd of spectators leaning from windows, doors, balconies, lawns and verandahs. It was, without doubt the most impressive largest display of such demonstrations ever to be held in Stirling.

Many Traffic Teams

Traffic required the services of several police officers and in spite of their efforts and the splendid display of courtesy by all drivers, there were several complete tie-ups as hundreds of cars headed for the Fair grounds after the parade.

Down through the natural valley of giant elm and maple trees along Stirling's main street through the business section of the town and back along Charlotte and Church Streets to the Park the lodges moved along after lodge. In the following order they marched and countermarched out of sight; Belleville L.O.B.A. Lodge No. 1; Belleville L.O.L. No. 2; Wallbridge L.O.L. No. 238; Shannon Lodge No. 974 from Latimer; Ox. Hall L.O.L. No. 1000; No. 243; Allisonville L.O.L. No. 178; Bonisher L.O.L. No. 466; Thrasher Tyendinaga L.O.L. No. 266; Marmora L.O.L. No. 1000; Wallace's Corners L.O.L. No. 172; Springbrook L.O.L. No. 443; Marmora L.O.L. No. 819; Tweed L.O.L. No. 8th of Rawdon; Allan Settlement L.O.L. No. 933; Malone L.O.L. No. 986; Queensboro L.O.B.A. No. 462; Queensboro L.O.L. No. 462; Eldorado L.O.L. No. 817; Flinton L.O.L. No. 907; Hazard's Corners L.O.L. No. 1132; Madoc L.O.L. No. 160; West Huntingdon L.O.L. No. 300; Hollowey L.O.L. No. 1000; Crookston L.O.L. No. 438, Crookston; Selkirk L.O.L. No. 1000; Thomasburg L.O.L. 131; Elliott L.O.L. No. 362, Mungerford; Tweed L.O.L. No. 747; Chisholm L.O.L. No. 736, Moneysmore; Stirling L.O.L. No. 116; Stirling L.O.B.A.

Speeches and Sports Events

As the crowd regathered at the Park grounds finding parking space for the thousands of cars was a problem dealt with by a careful committee ably directed by Constable Young, folk turned their attention to the field of sport, where baseball games were the order of the day and had a chance to see the flashy Canadian team bounce a pick team from Stirling to the tune of 20 to 0 without much effort. More serious minded older folk gathered at various shady spots on the ground and listened with interest to the speeches transmitted from the speakers' stand over the loud speaking system installed for the purpose by Messrs. J. Ormiston and C. Fox of Stirling.

The use of the public address system made it possible to hear the speakers in all parts of the grounds and each speaker was something worthwhile in constructive thought to offer the large gathering. Bro. Sager, County Master, acted as chairman and introduced the speakers and the address of welcome was delivered by Rev. James E. Pedal of Stirling, County Chaplain of the Order. The first speaker was Wor. Bro. Ernie F. Reid of Peterboro, Past Grand Master of Ontario East. Speaking on the School question, Mr. Reid said very definitely, it was the duty of each member of the Order represented on the, the anniversary of, one great victory, to maintain and strive to improve the educational institution of our province. If these standards are to be maintained for the future generations we must be prepared to sacrifice time energy and money to preserve them as did our forefathers, who made them possible in the beginning. We can't go wrong following in the footsteps of our fathers and in so doing we will establish a worthy pathway for which our children will tread with the same pride that we enjoy. Those who have gone before were willing to give their lives; let us, His men, rise up and give some of our time and support to the Order that has given our country the freedom we enjoy.

To Another Meeting

Directly after his speech, Mr. Reid left for Campbellford to address a similar gathering. The next speaker was Mrs. Johnston, District Director for Ontario East of the L.O.B.A. Speaking in clear tones, Mrs. Johnston impressed her audience with the present conditions in other lands and asked that they be compared with the standards of living in the dominions of the British Empire, where justice and freedom of religious worship worries us. Far, not far across the States to display an undying loyalty to King and country and the friends it has gone to be a part of the world's greatest Commonwealth, have endured hardship and suffering and tragedy that gained for us security and freedom which we now accept for granted. As members of Loyal Orange Order we haven't the right to drift along with the current of things, we must maintain the standards laid down by those who paid the price.

Rev. F. C. Beaver was the next speaker and urged the unity of Church under the direct guidance of Jesus Christ. This will be brought about when the activities of individuals within the Protestant Church will make that the activity we have with past history as the foundation and the vision of the future as an incentive to greater and more constructive work.

Bro. Geo. Reid of Belleville, also spoke on the school question. The schools of today control the intellect of our children of tomorrow. If we are to have sound intellect we must have sound schools controlled by sound and responsible administration. Men ready to stand up behind their statements with British courage not unworthy of the one war and then the other. The school question took on a different aspect after the Battle of Ypres Hastings. It became suddenly an issue, he said.

Little Benny's Note Book

This afternoon me was reading a book with one hand and yawning with the other, saying, O dear, I dont know what I'm to do so limp and listless, hare I have a good book in front of me and it's just a blank forest of wasted words. O dear I'm just bored with life, that's the long in the short of it, she said.

Well O, ma, do you want me to entertain you awnile? I said, and she said, Such a suggestion, thanks just a same.

Well why, ma, I mean why not if you're so bored and everything? I said, and ma said, Well now really I mean really, it's very nice of you to offer, but what do you sercomplain ideas you could do to entertain me?

Well O swinkers, ma, gosh, how about H I get out my box of magic tricks? I said. There's only a few of them broken and if I do all the rest of them for you it will take about at least 20 minutes. Do you know where they are, ma, have you saw the box lately? I said, and ma said, No, and let's put the whole house aside.

Well then O, ma, I tell you what, I'll read to you out of my new Stirling Sly detective book. I said. It's called Sidney Sly Among the Counterfeiters, Sidney Sly is a great detective but whenever he gets excited he starts to bladder on account of a defect of speech, and that's the parts I'll read you because I can imitate a defective on perfect you'll feel like studdering yourself, I said, and ma said, Say, O dear, why dont you go out and entertain somebody more your own age, and take them further up the street for profane sake.

Meaning the fellows yelling and arguing in front of the house. Why I went and did it, but not most likely intentional and ma...

A Home Improvement Plan

"You know this Home Improvement Plan?" said Mr. Picobac, helping himself to a match from the manager's desk. "Well, it's got me into a jam."

"How's that?" asked his friend, Mr. H. B. "Pete" Christie, bank manager and financial counsel.

"I saw about it in the paper and showed it to Mrs. Picobac, and I said it might be a good time to put in one of these improved inglenooks they have nowadays to smoke in. You know—with a brick fire-place and seats at each side for a pal or two."

"And what did Mrs. Picobac say?"

"She thought it was just the time to modernize the kitchen like the magazine pictures," chuckled Mr. Picobac. "So we had to compromise . . . we compromised on the kitchen, and I'm here applying for a Home Improvement loan for $300."

"I think you are wise," said the manager. "That kitchen will give her a lot of pleasure—and you don't need any special place to smoke Picobac in."

"Yes," said Mr. Picobac, his face wreathed in smiles. "Picobac's a mild, cool, sweet smoke in a pipe—anytime, any place!"

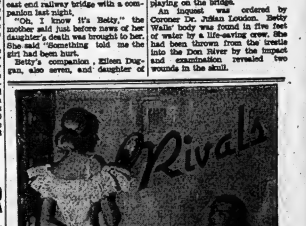
Numbers of snapping turtles averaging from eighteen to twenty-four inches shell diameter are causing grave concern to owners of bird sanctuaries situated along the shores of Lake Ontario here.

Striking at their nests underwater the large turtles seize young ducks and goslings, drag them under the water until they drown then calmly devour them.

Dayton Murphy, the "Jack Miner" of Wellington recently lost three goslings raised from his prize flock of Canada Wild Geese.



Murphy laid in ambush for the marauding killers and succeeded in trapping a large turtle as it raised a gosling by the leg and had started to drag it under water. Hauling the twenty-four inch turtle to shore, Murphy killed and dissected it and found the undigested remains of one of his young geese in its stomach.

Other sanctuary owners report the turtles are becoming bolder and are leaving the lake, crossing the highway to barnyards and making war on henhouses. Drastic measures are being adopted to rid the water front of this latest menace to young fowl.

The turtles, strangely enough, will not apparently molest the geese or grown ducks but prefer the young ducklings and goslings.

a neighboring family escaped with slight burns when the barn fell her, tossing her forward along the track. Her injuries were found to be superficial, although she was hysterical when picked up. The children were playing on the bridge.

An inquest was ordered by Coroner Dr. Julian Loucks. Betty Walls' body was found in five feet of water by a life-saving crew. She had been thrown from the trestle into the Don River by the impact and examination revealed two wounds in the skull.

Pratt said he would enlist operators of several motorboats to help him handle the net. He said he did not expect to land the "Monster" if it was as big as reported but hoped to entangle it long enough to identify it definitely.

CYNTHIA WAINWRIGHT studied the man who sat opposite her at the dinner table at the "Cranden." The man was dark and romantic-looking. His deep, blue eyes burned with hidden fire.

Cynthia felt privileged to study Eaton Goodrich. She was planning to marry him, after she had freed herself from Bradley.

As she thought of him the image of her husband flashed across her mind. Big and broad-shouldered and light, like some Nordic giant.

The man across interrupted her musing. He spoke softly, as only a cat treads when about to spring.

"I wonder Cynthia, dearest, if you are thinking as I am."

"I am," Cynthia didn't heard.

"I am thinking of the day when you and I will be together for always. When I can say yes, that beautiful woman is my wife."

His eyes burned into hers.

"I can't bear to think of Bradley touching you, darling."

Cynthia flared a bit as the charge was unjust. She loved Bradley. After all, he still was her husband.

"Eaton, I want you to understand that Bradley has always been kind to me. He—he fearfully annoys me. He gets on my nerves frightfully. I—"

She saw Adieu as the waiter brought their coffee. As the elusive fragrance arose to her nostrils she wondered if she were always to think of Bradley when she smelled coffee.

It didn't seem possible that she, Cynthia Wainright, was contemplating leaving her husband for always. She had taken advantage of his generosity in business to finance Adieu. Of course no one would understand why she was leaving her husband if she told the real reason. For 365 days in eight years she had endured him. She'd lump of sugar, dip it into his coffee, and almost instantly remove it, leaving a bit of liquid and melting in the saucer. Once she had tried dividing the lumps into halves for fun, if he would take one of the smaller pieces. But he had disregarded them and sweetened his coffee as usual. She spoke to him about it, but he laughed and asked her what she was saving for now.

Which had first come to the house as a friend of her brother Charles. Then he had come as a friend of the Wainrights, with particular attention to Cynthia.

Eaton knew a beautiful woman when he saw her—and Cynthia wasn't exactly penniless. Of this Eaton knew, too.

When Eaton began to come to see Cynthia he would bring coffee only for breakfast. Bradley insisted on it then. But she held out against it. Bradley was a fiend for coffee. After day until she thought it would drive her frantic, Eaton's soft words were not interrupted by the aroma of coffee. Gradually she found herself forgetting it.

And so it had gone on. Bradley became more and more on her nerves and Eaton clinging her with flattery and attention.

Bradley Wainright had come to a crisis. Tonight she was to give Eaton her answer. She knew what it would be. In a way it would be a hard step to take, but other women had taken it before—and seemed to her that her whole life's happiness was at stake.

Eaton was still holding her hand.

"Cynthia, won't you give me your answer now? There is only one answer I know, but I long to hear it from your own sweet lips."

As he leaned toward her across the table Cynthia drew in her breath sharply. Strange, the almost hypnotic power the man had over her.

She parted her lips to frame her answer and her eyes gleamed with excitement at the step she was about to take.

The waiter interrupted with the sugar. Cynthia watched Eaton, fascinated as he took two lumps, spread a bit of butter on one, sandwiched them together and dropped them with a splash into his coffee. The dissolving butter spread in a greasy ring to the edge of the cup.

A great wave of revulsion and horror spread over Cynthia. She saw this man as he was: crafty, unprincipled, and rather—it wasn't an elegant term but it occurred to Cynthia it seemed descriptive — mean. And added to this he was only a common wife-stealer!

Quickly she rose and left the table. She couldn't look at him.

A second morning, sitting opposite her own blond giant, Cynthia felt a bit guilty.

She spoke hurriedly.

"Bradley, who do you suppose was at the Cranden last night?—Eaton Goodrich. He was alone, so we ate together."

Bradley Wainright glanced absently up from his paper, "That so Peggy, please?"

Cynthia breathed again, passed

AT THE CAPITOL

"Hell's Angels," with Jean Harlow

An event of more than usual significance is slated for Capitol patrons, starting Wednesday. "Hell's Angels" the most outstanding film achievement of all time, is the attraction.

"Hell's Angels" is the stupendous drama of air-war which Howard Hughes produced and personally directed at the staggering cost of $4,000,000, and which required three years of continuous filming to complete.

It is admitedly the sex spectacle of wartime aviation—a graphic glorification of the World War in the air. Starring in this never to be forgotten drama of the air, Jean Harlow, who after achieving fame in the masterpiece rose to great heights in the motion picture industry to become one of its greatest stars.

According to most critics, it is the most realistic of realism—the first authentic reproduction of the exploits of both Allied and German aviators during the great war.

More than 100 daring pilots, including Ace Hill, were engaged in the production of the air thrillers, many from all parts of the world and flown in this picture.

In one scene over 50 planes are shown in battle simultaneously. It is said that it took three months to put this single scene on the screen and aviation authorities, military and civil, declare it the most miraculous achievement in the history of motion picture and motion pictures.

For the first time the exploits of the now world-famous Baron von Richthofen's Flying Circus are accurately reproduced, and for the first time the sensational wartime Zeppelin raid on London is depicted realistically.

Aside from its unprecedented and stupendous production, the story of "Hell's Angels" is replete with romance and drama. It is based on one of the most original and dramatic stories ever screened—a story written specially in its original quality and treatment.

"Two Wise Maids"

Teaming delightfully, Lole Marie Dressler in her popular screen comedies brought Polly Moran to screen heights. Now she has teamed for a new screen team with Allison Skipworth, also a great old comedienne, with whom she makes her teaming debut in "Two Wise Maids" at the Capitol on Wednesday, July 14th.

This hearty-laughing comedy drama of schoolgirls in New York's turbulent East Side presents also adolescent Lois Alberta, Rose Hamilton, Donald Cook and charming little Marcia Mae Jones in featured roles.

Shown today for the last times 2 grand pictures of unusual merit and popular revue. Shown as bit No. 1 that star popular pair of comedians Jack McGowan and Sally Eilers starred in "The Princess Comes Across" and bit No. 2, "Love is News" will tug at your heart strings "Little Lord Fauntleroy," with Freddie Bartholomew. Last complete show at 8.30.

AT THE BELLE

"Elephant Boy"

A new and remarkable boy star is introduced in "Elephant Boy" the Alexander Korda production which will be presented at the Belle on Tuesday and Wednesday daily at 2.30, 7.10 and 9.15 p.m.

Sabu, the 13-year-old Indian lad who was discovered in India by Robert Flaherty, co-director of the film, working in the Maharajah's elephant stables. This native unsophisticated child is one of the most delightful personalities ever brought to the screen. His charm—and "his smile alone will take care of that.

"Elephant Boy" is rare and refreshful entertainment, right off the golden drama of the air, Jean Harlow, who after achieving fame in the masterpiece rose to great heights in the motion picture industry to become one of its greatest stars.

Trenton and District

Trenton, July 13—(Special)—After touching 94 for three successive days, the mercury descended to a polite station canopy dropped about 25 degrees, when the air was rent by a thunderstorm on Sunday afternoon. However, the temperature bounded up again yesterday and hovered around 90 most of the day. Swimming is monopolized by the Government dock, which provides an adequate place for bathers. Town pump at the foot of the mountain is working hard these days and Hamilton approximately 760,000 gallons of spring water a day. The output is considerably higher than at the same period last month but officials assure newspapermen that there was no danger of a water shortage. Lawn service will continue as usual, it was announced. Extension to the waterworks proposed, to cost $15,000 will start underway within several weeks as tenders for the work will be called for soon. The expansion programme includes a new spring water well a new water main under the river and a six inch pipe to the Mountain. It will be capped at a wage of 35c per hour four eight hours.

TONY KAUFMANN HANDY ATHLETE

Turns In Fine Performance On Mound For Rochester To Beat Bisons

(By the Associated Press)

Tony Kaufmann may have left his best playing days behind him on big league diamonds but the ageing pitcher-catcher of Rochester Red Wings is a pretty handy fellow to have around in the best of an International Baseball League pennant race.

Kaufmann's once potent pitching arm seemed dead this spring so the Red Wings let him in the outfield. The 36-year old veteran who hurled for Chicago Cubs in 1931 when most of the League's players were on roller skates, responded with a fine relief performance on Monday. Last night the Wings turned to him for mound duty and he turned in a 6-1, seven-hit victory over Buffalo Bisons.

Outfielder Eddie Boland scored the sixth. Kaufmann fanned four Buffalo's only run with a home run and walked one, in his first victory of the campaign.

John Berly turned in another well pitched game as Toronto Maple Leafs won from Jersey Royals, 2-1. Berly allowed only three hits and got plenty of support as the plate from Don Ross, who hit two doubles and scored both Toronto runs.

Jersey City, with the game nearly won, blew up in the ninth inning and lost to Newark,Bears 4-3. An infield fly rule figured in the turning the trick.

Syracuse and Baltimore were idle yesterday.

ROOSEVELT HONEYMOON NEARS SAIL FROM QUEBEC

Arriving by motor from the United States president and his Roosevelt summer home at Campobello, Nova Scotia, only fifteen minutes before sailing time, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., son of the president of their honeymoon.

For two years newspaper photographers tried without success to get pictures of John Monsigue, mystery man of the screen colony and close friend and confidante of dozens of screen socialites. They succeeded; Monsigue, retaining his aura of mystery smashed their cameras or evaded their attentions. Finally the picture men won—in the municipal courthouse at Los Angeles. This picture was taken after John Monsigue had been placed under arrest on a warrant sworn out by New York police charging him with participation in a real-house hold-up seven years ago under the name of Laverne Moore. Monsigue reportedly admitted the offense. Two of his closest friends were crooner Bing Crosby and funster Oliver Hardy, both of whom had entertained the man whose golfing feats and exhibitions of strength were amazing. Crosby and Hardy rallied to his defense following the arrest, both still proclaiming their faith in him.

'Prince Hal' Schumacher Has Last Chance to Become Starting Pitcher for Giants

Passes From Shining Light To Feeble Flicker In Two Years

DEFEAT COSTLY

Mel Ott Engineers a Triple Play For The Losers

(By Bill Bond)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

From a shining light to a feeble flicker in two short baseball seasons—that's the sad story of Hal Schumacher.

In 1933, his first full season with the New York Giants, Schumacher won nineteen games. The following year, his best, he chalked up 23. Two years ago he was 18 again, and each time Schumacher had kept his percentages above the .600 mark.

He was nick-named "Prince Hal" as the likeliest successor to the Crown worn by King Carl Hubbell.

That was two years ago.

Today with a little more than half the season gone, the tall right-hander, is in a terrific nose-dive. Sixteen times he has been sent into action as Bill Terry's starting pitcher. On all but three occasions—the last on June 1, when he handed a 10-hitter to whip the Dodgers—he has failed to finish.

He failed again yesterday, against the Phillies, a Club the Giants had beaten in six of their previous nine meetings. Schumie, pulled out of a bad hole by the aid of his pants and a Mel Ott-initiated triple play in the first inning, dropped out of sight in the seventh. When he bowed out, he had yet on base five of the six runs the Giants scored in that inning to win the ball game 6-3.

Defeat Costly

That defeat cost the Giants a chance to draw up virtually on even terms with the rained out Chicago Cubs.

It was they say, his last chance to prove his claim to a berth as a starting pitcher. There even is talk of converting the 180-pound six-footer into an outfielder.

A happier figure than Schumacher is Jersey irrepressible Joe Medwick, that Gas House Gangster, who leads the League in everything but triples, stolen bases and, of course, pitching, pounded out three more hits and a double in three more runs as St. Louis Cardinals eased out the Pirates, 5-4.

The Cubs' night game in Cincinnati was rained out, as were the Bees-Dodger date in Brooklyn and the only American League game scheduled between the Indians and White Sox at Chicago.

DIZZY DEAN

Considered pitching successor of Jerome Herman Dean, sometimes known as Jay Hanna Dean, together with one of the most colorful baseball personalities of all time, plants the Cardinals ace right-hander among who's who greats of baseball history.

Dizzy pitched good baseball in his school days—at Oklahoma City Teachers college—and also on the sandlots to get a chance with a minor league club. He went to St. Joseph of the Western league in 1930 for his first try at organized baseball. A fine season with Houston the next year and Dean was examined by the Cards.

In his first full season with the Cards, 1932, he won 18 and lost 15. His first ball placed him on top of the circuit in strikeouts, a feat he has duplicated three times since.

He was born in Holdenville, Oklahoma, in 1911. He stands almost 6 inches over six feet and weighs 189 pounds. He is a right hander.

BELL SARGENTS TAKE PERCIVALS

"Lockmen" Score Fifth Win In Last Six Starts

Holding tenaciously to an early-game lead the Belleville Sargents edged out a 9 to 8 win over the Percival Store in a regular Senior softball league fixture at the Ordenman Flats last night. It was the "lockmen's" fifth win in six starts. The pastime was marked with some lusty clouting on the part of both clubs, more especially in the middle stanzas, the pitchers taking complete command of the game in the tying frames.

Despite the fact the Percivals poled out three circuit blows and collected as many safeties as did the winners, they failed to drive in the tying run, that was perched on second base in the last inning. Tommy Hughes started on the hill-top for the "lockmakers", but was replaced by Kiser in the fifth, as the Percivals pulled up even to knot the count at seven all. Garn Smith went the route for the losers, but three runs in the second and a trio of counters in the third left his team far in the lurch. A brace of counters by the "lockmen" in the sixth gave the winners a two run advantage and sufficient margin to win.

Smith assisted his own cause with a homer and two other safeties. As a matter of fact all circuit blows were poled out by the losers. Al Philp and "Shiner" Sinfield also hitting for the circuit. Thrasher and Bushell had a pair of safeties each for the lokers. For the Bell-Sargent, Kiser and Hughes blasted three safe hits each with Fred McGuire collecting a brace of one base blows. Base hits with the base paths populated, or hitting in the clutches, is what won for the Bells. The fielding sensations were supplied by McMartin of the winning club, who made two spectacular running catches, one in the eighth and one in the ninth, both coming when the tying run was on base. Tonight at Coleman Flats the ball end Aajmas kids take on the league leading Corbin Locks, with a fast meaning considerable to each team.

The line-ups—Belleville Sargents —Lapenotte 3b, McMartin cf, Barriage 2b, Kiser rf, Hughes p and lf, McGuire ss, Gray c, Robinson 1b, Sager lf, and Philp lf. Percival Stores—Al Philp cf, Riggs 3b, and 1b, Clarke rf, Hoosh 1b, Barriage 2b, Thompson c, Thrasher 3b, Bushell ss, Sinfield lf and Smith p.

Kid Chocolate Makes Comeback In Squared Circle

By DREW MIDDLETON

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, July 13—(AP)—In 1930 the line, "Kid Chocolate Fights Tonight," meant a lot more. It doesn't mean much now except to the Dunky Kid. He is taking a comeback and every publicity trick he takes along the way means something. A lot more than Sugar Ray Robinson and ogo money he pulls down in the right clubs that rim the big town.

Chocolate fights Young Chappie tonight at the Queensboro Stadium. It's the 33rd fight of his comeback and the attempt to regain the old standing he gathered once. He has won 31 comeback fights.

Kid Chocolate was somebody in 1929 and 1930. He hit the United States from Cuba and chased 100 fights in Cuba and went to work in the featherweight and lightweight divisions. He beat a lot of boys who were good then, fellows like Rusty Graham, Tommy Grant and Eddie Ridgeway. He lost only one American fight until Kid Berg, an English lightweight, took him in August, 1930.

He couldn't win the lightweight title that year but he won the slightly phoney junior lightweight crown from Benny Bass in 1931. Then he fought Tony Canzoneri, who was the lightweight champion, out of that and beat the Kid in 15 rounds. Then the Kid's luck started to run out.

A Name Is Made

A marriage by proxy to a Havana girl, 15 days in jail in the United States and the attentions of the "Feds" broke up the Kid's career. He complicated his ring career. He was still Hatless's kid but the fire was out, or fame had started to fade.

He finally won the featherweight title from Lou Ambers and Harlem complicated his ring career. He was still Hatless's kid but the fire was out, or fame had started to fade.

Holiday Bride

By ANN DEMAREST

"I can't so through with it, Aunt Cecile," Jeanne murmured, blushing hastily at Lance, who was staring at her curiously.

"Do you know where he is?"

"Lance? Why, he's here!"

"You are positive, Jeanne, that you don't want to marry him?"

"Yes."

For a moment Cilly's aunt was silent and then she said, "I have something to tell you and I want you to let him know about it. Cilly was hurt this afternoon in an automobile accident."

"Badly?"

"Yes, but she will live. She has been calling for Lance. But before you tell him I must be sure that it isn't Lance you want."

"I'm positive," Jeanne said steadily.

"Then you won't mind telling him about Cilly?"

"I'll tell him right away,"

"You're a good girl, Jeanne. I'll call you again tomorrow. I must go now to be with Cilly."

"Where is she, Aunt Cecile?"

"At home. Her car skidded right in front of the apartment house. Good-bye, Jeanne."

"What is it, Jeanne?" Lance asked hastily as she replaced the receiver. "What did the old lady want?"

Jeanne drew in a deep breath.

"Lance, Cilly has been hurt—an automobile accident."

Jeanne could see his face pale. He opened his mouth to speak but no words came.

"She is going to get well, Lance, but I guess it was a bad accident. She is calling for you."

"Cilly wants me?" Lance stared dully at Jeanne.

She nodded. "Yes."

His eyed Jeanne helplessly. "I wonder what she wants me. I have n't seen her for days."

Jeanne bent forward and placed her hand on his shoulder. "You must know why. She loves you, Lance. She always has."

"Cilly. An accident." Lance seemed dazed. "What about you?" He turned to Jeanne suddenly.

"I told you we would never be happy," Jeanne said gently. "You must go to her, Lance."

INSTALMENT 28.

When Lance left hurriedly to go to Cilly, Jeanne walked slowly upstairs feeling an intense loneliness. With a sigh she slipped out of the new green coat and hung it carefully in the closet. The scarf helped her wrap it carefully in tissue paper and tucked in its box.

"My honeymoon clothes," she said half aloud, stroking the rich fur collar of the coat. "And now there will be no honeymoon."

With a sob she threw herself on the bed and for a few minutes she lay there, her shoulders shaking. Then she sat up and there was a brilliance in her blue eyes.

"I'm free now. I could never have been a rich man's wife. My life is my own. I'll have to find work now and take care of Mother."

Christmas would be a lonely day, Jeanne knew, filled with memories of what might have been. And to-morrow was the day before Christmas, the day she and Bryan had planned to marry, and later she and Lance.

Going out to a lonely dinner, Jeanne thought with astonishment as the changes that had taken place in the past six weeks. As she ordered her simple meal and ate it slowly, she was thinking of Sandra, miserable and heart-broken; of Cilly who had been hurt badly; of Lance seeking for a love that would satisfy him. No one's life ran smoothly, she decided. There seemed to be a certain amount of trouble that every one had to go through.

When she got back to the house there was a telephone message from Lance, asking her to call the Barrington apartment. Reluctantly she dialed the number. Perhaps something had happened to Cilly and she was not going to get well.

It seemed strange to hear Park's familiar voice answer.

"Miss MacDonald?" the butler said. "Mr. Lanrith wishes to speak with you."

And then Lance came to the telephone with his strange request.

"It's a lot to ask of you, Jeanne, after all Cilly has done to you, but won't you please do it as a favor to me? She wants to see you, tonight, as soon as you can possibly get here."

"Why, Lance?" Jeanne asked, startled. "She is going to get well, isn't she?"

"She's much better. The doctor says it is all right for her to see you. Please take a taxi and come up here," he pleaded. "Aunt Cecile is here, too, and wants to see you."

Jeanne agreed to come. There was nothing else she could do. Within fifteen minutes Park opened the door of the strangely hushed apartment to her.

"Miss MacDonald," Miss MacDonald," he said quietly. "Mr. Lanrith wants to see you there first."

It seemed odd to be going down the long hall, past the door behind which Cilly's room, to the library where she had spent so many happy hours with Gordon Bartlett. Aunt Cecile met her in the doorway.

"I'm glad to see you, my dear." She kissed Jeanne warmly. "How is Cilly?"

The old lady shook her head. "She is calling for you, Jeanne. I'm being accident. I'm afraid one side of her face will always be scarred. I'm afraid—" she looked at Jeanne pathy for the girl. Cilly, with her beauty marred! It was dreadful to think of.

"I'm so sorry," Jeanne said quickly.

"You were good to come here tonight. I wouldn't have blamed you for refusing. In fact, I was reluctant to call you, but Cilly is ill and pleaded with him to get in touch with you."

"But why should she wish to see me?" Jeanne asked in amazement.

The old lady looked at her. "I don't know. She wouldn't tell me. Here, child, take off your hat and coat. I'll call Lance."

While Aunt Cecile was out of the room, Jeanne glanced around. It gave her an ache to see her father's chair, to Gordon Bartlett's, that a new secretary was occupying now every day. And Mr. Bartlett's books were as usual in an orderly pile on his desk with his pipe and pencil. It really would be always left them.

And then Cilly's brother came into the library.

"It is pleasant to see you again, Miss MacDonald," he said with unfeigned feeling in his voice.

"And I'm glad to see you, Mr. Bartlett. How is your work going—your book?"

He shook his head. "I can't find any one to take your place," he said. "Perhaps I can persuade you to come back. But I mustn't keep you now. Lance and Cilly are waiting to see you. You know her room?"

Jeanne, nodded and left the library. Outside of Cilly's room she paused, sorry as she was for the girl, she had little desire to see her and talk with her.

"Here she is, Cilly," Lance said, taking Jeanne by the arm and drawing her over to the bedside.

And there Cilly lay, pathetically unconscious, her head bound in thick bandages, with only her eyes and her small pert nose showing.

Jeanne bent over her. "I'm awfully sorry...."

"I'm glad you came," Cilly interrupted her in a muffled, weak voice. "You were good to do it."

Lance shook her head gently. Cilly's eyes were seeking Lance.

"Tell her for me," she gasped.

Without looking away from Cilly, Lance said in a low voice. "Cilly feels pretty badly about the way she treated you, Jeanne. She wants to apologize."

Tears filled Cilly's brown eyes. "Yes," she said breathlessly. "I am so sorry. It was inexcusable."

"That's all right, Miss Bartlett," Jeanne told her. "We'll both forget about it."

And she would forget all the unpleasantness, Jeanne told herself. It was impossible to hold any hard feelings after seeing Cilly lying there so defenseless, so pathetically broken.

Lance smiled at Jeanne gratefully and when the nurse came Jeanne to the room and said Cilly had better be left alone he followed her into the hall.

"Thank you, Jeanne, for all you have done for me—for both of us. It's all right now. Cilly needs me, and as soon as she gets well, we will be married and go away together."

She had been right. She had always wanted some one who needed him. That was why he had been attracted to her—and now Cilly needed him.

"I'm glad." She pressed his hand. "You deserve a lot, Lance. I'm happy that you've found the right girl."

He lifted her chin up so that her blue eyes met his smiling gaze.

"You're a brave girl, Jeanne," he said and then was silent in his rusky voice. "I hope you will be happy."

He walked with her to the door but before Jeanne could wave Aunt Cecile hurried down the hall after them.

"Thank you, Jeanne. You've been sweet. I will call you tomorrow."

Lance glanced at his watch. "It's late," he said quickly. "I'll drive you home."

Jeanne shook her head. "No. Stay here in case Cilly wants you. I can take a taxi. Good night."

As the cab carried her to her home Jeanne thought of Lance and Cilly. They would never have been brought together if it hadn't been for the accident. It took trouble to make them realize their love. She was glad that in the end they had found it. Of her own future she thought little. There would be hard days ahead, she knew, but tonight she was tired and did not look beyond. She would have to seek courage—courage to go on without love.

In the morning Jeanne gathered up the Sunday Mail and carried it to her door.

A special delivery letter for you, Miss MacDonald," she called.

Jeanne jumped out of bed and hurried across the cold room to open the door.

"You're leaving today, won't you?" the woman asked as she handed her the letter.

Jeanne shivered. "No..... no..... I don't know for sure yet. Perhaps I won't be leaving right away."

The woman eyed her curiously. "Then you aren't going to be married?"

"I have changed my plans. I'll let you know this afternoon if I want the room any longer."

The woman turned away without saying anything more and Jeanne went back to bed to read the letter. It was from her mother. Jeanne thought it was strange that she sent it special delivery. And with a sinking heart she opened it. Perhaps she was ill and needed money. But the letter contained so much bad news. Her mother wrote:
